LONDON SHUDDERS: FEARS IRISH "BOMB PLOTS"

ANOTHER BIG OIL MAN SHOT IN OKLAHOMA

Bullet Pierces Heart of J. E. Lamb.

Ardmore, Okla., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—With national politicians affected by the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Jake L. Hamon, Republican national committeeman from Oklahoma and millionaire oil promoter, and with a nation-wide search in progress for Mrs. Clara Smith Hamon, Oklahoma authorities were confronted tonight with a new sensation in the death of J. E. Lamb, aged 35, of this city.

The body of Mr. Lamb, who like Mr. Hamon, was a millionaire oil operator, was found on a railroad track after being struck by a train. Later it was discovered that he had been shot through the heart.

Called Suicide by Jury.

A coroner's jury decided it was a case of suicide, but several points—as in the case of Hamon—remain to be cleared up.

Conductor D. J. Murphy and Engineer Ramm testified that the body of Lamb was in a sitting position on the end of a tie when their freight engine struck it.

Other members of the crew said they saw an automobile racing for Ardmore when the train came to a stop. Authorities are now trying to learn the identity of the men in the automobile.

"Meet Me In Heaven."

Mr. Lamb "kissed his family goodby," his wife testified today at the inquest, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. "He asked me for his revolver," Mrs. Lamb said. "I wanted to know what he wished to carry it for, and he replied: 'Well, you never can tell; I may need it.'

"Before he left the house he told me to pray for him and said, 'Be sure to meet me in heaven.' I never saw him alive after that."

Business associates of Mr. Lamb declared today that he had seemed despondent during the last few weeks, and they ascribed ill health as the cause of his melancholy. No business reverses or financial difficulties are known of.

Hunt for Woman in Case.

While messages of sympathy were reaching Mr. Hamon's widow tonight, and preparations for an impressive funeral were being made, Ardmore authorities widened the net in which they hoped to trap Miss Smith, Hamon's secretary for several years.

State department officials at Washington were asked to instruct Canadian and Mexican border authorities to be on the lookout for the woman. Port officials also may be ordered to watch for her.

Despite efforts of Mr. Hamon's friends to have the county officials classify the shooting in a local hotel last Sunday night, which ended in the millionaire's death Friday, as "an accident," sustained while cleaning a revolver, County Attorney Russell R. Brown said that the information against Miss Smith would not be changed.

No Trace of Fugitive.

This information charges Miss Smith with "assault with intent to kill," and will be served, Mr. Brown stated, as soon as she is found. He declared his belief that Miss Smith was in hiding here in Ardmore, although reports have been received that she has been seen in other Oklahoma towns and in Kansas City, where two trunks supposed to be here are in the Union depot baggage room.

Mrs. Hamon reiterated her confidence in her husband. It is believed that unless Mr. Brown has direct evidence he has said nothing about it will be difficult to convict anybody of the shooting.

Won State for Harding.

Mr. Hamon became nationally famous when he carried Oklahoma for Harding on Nov. 2. He stood high in the councils of the Republican party; it was even rumored that he might select a man for a position in the new cabinet.

His business career was spectacular; a few years ago he was broke, but "came back" in railroad building and oil promotions.

Gov. Lowden of Illinois, who had planned to attend the funeral on Monday, wired tonight that official business compelled him to cancel his purpose. Prominent politicians and business men from many sections of the country will be here for the services.

All Mr. Hamon's business interests will suspend operations during the funeral.

Delegates at Geneva Read Tribune Daily

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—Delegates to the league of nations assembly post themselves daily upon the news developments of the world by reading the European edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which is brought from Paris each morning by special airplanes.

On the ground that many of the delegates are newspaper owners or shareholders, Howard Huston, an American, in charge of Hotel National, which houses the assembly and the league secretariat, refused permission for the placing of THE TRIBUNE on sale in the building.

When reminded that THE TRIBUNE was the only outside newspaper brought into Geneva on the same day of publication, Huston declared that delegates interested in French, British and Italian papers certainly would object unless their own organs also were placed on sale, adding that it had been decided that there should be no newsstands in the building.

Nevertheless, the delegates have no difficulty in getting their news while it is still news, for a TRIBUNE vendor is posted just outside the doors.

KITCHIN SUFFERS A SECOND STROKE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Representative Kitchin of North Carolina suffered a second stroke of paralysis today while at the postoffice department. Mr. Kitchin was taken to his home, where it was said the stroke was believed to be comparatively slight.

In view of the fact that it was the second time this year Mr. Kitchin has been stricken in this manner, his friends are fearful it may mean his withdrawal from actual leadership in the house. Following the defeat of Champ Clark for reelection, Mr. Kitchin had been slated to become Democratic leader in the next congress. He had planned to withdraw from the ways and means committee, of which he formerly was chairman, and now is ranking minority member.

Mr. Kitchin was stricken the first time last spring on the floor of the house after making an address. He did not resume his duties during the remainder of the session.

Japan's Army Budget Is 50% Over Last Year's

TOKIO, Nov. 27.—Army estimates for the forthcoming year total 245,000,000 yen, an increase of 50 per cent over last year. Of this sum, 40,000,000 yen will be expended on new defense schemes. Service in the cavalry branch of the army will be reduced from three years to two years.

Naval construction is being hastened, vessels on docks being hurriedly completed to make room for others. The cruiser Oi will be launched about Dec. 15, instead of next spring, and two new destroyers and a special service vessel will be completed before Jan. 1.

Ex-Kaiser to Give Each of His Children £85,000

LONDON, Nov. 27.—During visits of his children at Doorn castle last week, former Emperor William of Germany took occasion to discuss with them their financial resources, says a Doorn dispatch to the Daily Mail. It is said the former emperor intends to present each of his children £85,000 in Dutch money, "so they may continue to live in a manner befitting the Hohenzollerns."

THE GUEST OF HONOR!

WHY MR. CLARK IS NOW TAKING HIS MEALS STANDING

The McGauran family of Winnetka proved too much for the assistant commissioner of public works of that suburb, Harold L. Clark, yesterday.

Mr. Clark was called to the McGauran home, 806 Oak street, by irate neighbors, who declared ashes were being dumped promiscuously in the rear of the McGauran home. The wind took them up and sprinkled the vicinity.

John McGauran, son of the house, swatted the assistant commissioner on the nose as a "fault finding, small town official." Mr. Clark, a veteran of the war, recovered and young McGauran struck the ground. Mrs. McGauran took a hand. She wrapped her arms around Clark and bent him over. Richard McGauran, the father, then used his walking stick to such advantage on Mr. Clark's anatomy that he could hardly walk or sit down.

Hence it came about that Mr. Clark swore out warrants for the McGaurans charging assault and battery. They will appear before the justice of the peace tomorrow.

Chaperones Must Make Good Damage Girls Did

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 27.—Chaperones of a party of twenty-five girls from the Normal School of Physical Education at Battle Creek were ordered by Kalamazoo couty authorities to report in court here Monday morning to make reparation for damage done to the cottage owned by John Wiggin and John Hewson at Franklin Beach, Gull Lake, this county. The cottage was practically dismantled. Canned goods, sofa pillows, other furnishings, ball bats, and tennis rackets were taken.

Gov. Lowden Invites All Illinois to Call New Year's

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 27.—A general invitation to the New Year's Day reception at the executive mansion was issued today by Gov. and Mrs. Frank O. Lowden. No written iavitations will be sent. All citizens of Illinois who wish to come are invited. Hours will be from 4 to 6 p. m.

Children Find a Rifle; Boy, 6, Shoots Brother, 8

Benjamin Seleski, 8 years old, 4317 North Mobile avenue, was probably fatally wounded yesterday when he was shot by his brother, Paul, 6 years old. The child was handling a .22 caliber rifle the boys found in their father's bedroom.

State's Attorney Hoyne Ill; Suffers Bronchitis Attack

State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne, is confined to his home, 5136 Blackstone avenue, with a severe attack of bronchitis. His physician, Dr. John J. Mahoney, says that he will be laid up at the least for two weeks.

WANTS BRITISH CURB ON JAPAN

Senator Lodge for Pact with Dominions.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 27.—An "arrangement by the United States with Canada, Australia, and New Zealand in regard to Asiatic immigration was advocated by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts in an address at the Union League club founders' day exercises here tonight.

"We have heard a great deal about league and agreements," the Massachusetts senator said. "There is one arrangement I should like to make very much and that is an arrangement with Canada, Australia, and New Zealand in regard to Asiatic immigration. Their danger is the same as ours and the shadows hangs darkest over Australia.

Must Face Situation.

"We must face it, and it might as well be understood that it is in no sense of hostility to any nation, but there are certain great principles that must be accepted. One is that no one nation has the right or can find a cause of war in the demand that her people shall migrate to another free country as the first sovereignty right is the right to say who shall come into the country."

Senator Lodge said he was "afraid" that at the present time the immigration laws "are not being properly enforced."

"I say that," he added, "because the department of justice has ordered the deportation of many men who had come here in violation of our laws and who are dangerous to the United States."

Predicts Protective Tariff.

Touching on the tariff, Senator Lodge said he did not think the duties on imports are now bearing their fair proportion of the expenditures of the United States.

"I think," he added, "with justice we can add to the revenue from that source and relieve taxpayers from more galling and injurious taxes."

Senator Lodge declared the whole system of taxation must be readjusted and that he was afraid the United States would have to continue to raise a large amount by taxes.

Visits Senator Penrose.

Earlier Senator Lodge conferred with Senator Penrose at the latter's home. Afterwards Senator Lodge declared he was delighted to see that the Pennsylvania senator had made such progress toward renewed health.

It was inadvisable, he said, for Senator Penrose to attend the short session of congress to open early next month. If there should be any need for Senator Penrose, he would be sent for, Senator Lodge asserted, adding that he had advised Senator Penrose to rest at home during that session.

BOY, JINGLING 60 CENTS, SHOT BY ROBBER; MAY DIE

William Kilburg, 17 years old, going from a movie to his home at 3420 Normal avenue, whistled as he took a short cut through a lot at Thirty-sixth street and Parnell avenue and jingled the 60 cents in his pocket.

Three men, armed with revolvers, suddenly sprang at him. One struck him, knocking him down.

As he arose another fired a shot that entered just below Kilburg's heart. He is in a serious condition.

The boy was rushed to the People's hospital, and the Deering street police began a search for the bandits. At midnight a number of suspects had been arrested.

Rivals Make Cupid's Pet Look Like Mister Godiva

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 27.—A youth giving the name of Tom Santor and clad in nothing at all shivered his way through the cold dawn to a suburban home near here today and tapped for admission and succor.

He reported to the sheriff that some rivals, incensed because of his assiduous attentions to a young woman here, had kidnaped him from her home last evening, taken him into the country, stripped his clothing from him, and left him.

Ship Is Swallowed Up at Sea with 24 Aboard

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 27.—Relief vessels searching the rocky coast of Washington in the vicinity of James island for the lost barge W. J. Pirrie early tonight have found no trace of the vessel, according to a message from the navy radio station at North Head, Wash. There were twenty-four persons aboard, including the skipper's wife and baby.

First Christmas Trees Reach Chicago Market

The first shipment of Christmas trees reached South Water street yesterday. The wholesale price quoted was $2.50 a bundle. Each bundle ranged from six small trees, 3 to 4 feet high, to one large tree, measuring 8 to 10 feet. Indications were that the small trees would retail at from 60 to 70 cents.

Japanese Politician Drops Dead After Seattle Banquet

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 27.—Motokochi Takahashi, member of the Japanese parliament, died here tonight, a victim of heart disease. After a banquet, which ended early today, he and a companion ran to catch a train for Portland. He suddenly dropped dead.

Messenger Robbed of Gems Worth $60,000 Is Arrested

New York, Nov. 27.—David Saylor, messenger for a jewelry firm, from whom four men in a holdup this morning took diamonds valued at $60,000, was arrested tonight charged with being in the plot.

POLICE SEIZE 200 IN NEW RAIDS ON VICE

Take Nick the Greek with $81,000.

The drive on gambling was continued by the police last night and early this morning, more than 200 men being arrested in various raids.

The largest number of prisoners was taken by the Desplaines street police, who arrested 130 men in raids on a poolroom at 803 Taylor street, a saloon at 522 South Halsted street, a poolroom at 831 Taylor street, and a den at 1150 West Madison street. Most of those seized will be booked on gambling charges, while a few who are suspected of having police records will be sent to the bureau of identification.

Scared by Former Raids.

Men working out of the detective bureau brought in forty-five prisoners and reported that the gamblers seemed to have been frightened by the raids earlier in the week, as many of the places they visited were closed or not operating. At the Fiftieth street station ten men were arrested.

An "act not on the bills" was played by Sergt. Simon Holmes of the East Chicago avenue station. He had gone to the locker room on the third floor to put his overcoat away. It was warm, so the sergeant opened a window. As he did so there was wafted to him on the breeze the familiar "I'll raise you five." He glanced across the alley to 113 West Chicago avenue and saw fourteen men enjoying a stud poker game. The men in the station organized an extemporaneous raid and transferred the gamblers one door west to the station cellrooms.

"Nick" Was Eating Supper.

Another feature of the evening was the arrest of "Nick the Greek" Dandolos, who was seized with seven other men at the flat of Frank Wilson at 3427 Michigan avenue. Nick was arrested by Lieut. Shoemaker and taken to the bureau. He said he was eating dinner, not gambling. The tidy sum of $81,000 was found on his person, his companions having $20,000 among them. One prisoner was taken by the Austin police. Marquette arrested five. A number of others were taken in various places.

Meanwhile Chief of Police Fitzmorris' plan to spread a net of forty-nine motorcycle policemen to catch pay roll bandits, speeders and drunken motorists began to function.

As a result of yesterday's precautions there was not one pay roll robbery.

Report Every 15 Minutes.

Assignment of the motorcycle men was put in the hands of Sergt. A. B. Smith, formerly head of the squad. Under the chief's plan, four motorcyclists will be assigned to each of four stations on the north, south, and west sides.

The north side groups include the Town Hall, Summerdale, Sheffield avenue, and Rogers Park stations. The west side group includes the Warren avenue, Fillmore, Austin, and Brighton Park stations. On the south side the Hyde Park, Fiftieth street, Grand Crossing, and Englewood stations will be manned.

"In each group four of the sixteen will report by telephone every fifteen minutes," Chief Fitzmorris said. "That means that every quarter of an hour twelve men ready to dash after bandits will report from the three sides of the city.

Regular Police Work Also.

"Though especially assigned to catch pay roll bandits, drunken motorists, and speeders, these men will do regular police work under the station officers.

With the opening of the Stanton avenue station as a regular police detail tomorrow morning, it is expected that the number of south side petty crimes will be cut down. The Stanton avenue district, between the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railway tracks and the lake and between Thirty-first street and Thirty-ninth street, formerly was part of the Cottage Grove avenue district. Lieut. John B. Enright, formerly acting captain at the Fiftieth street station, will have command of the new station.

Kidnap Youth, Shoot Him and Hurl Him from Auto

Joseph Gieser, 17 years old, 392 Ellis avenue, was shot twice in the abdomen and probably fatally wounded early this morning, then thrown out of the automobile in which three bandits had kidnaped him, and left lying on the pavement at East Thirty-first street and South Park avenue.

Goodfellows!

Your time has come.

Christmas

is at hand again!

Ho! Good Fellow! Your turn is coming again! There are many letters here in THE TRIBUNE office even now waiting for you to come and claim them.

They have been held back until you should come safely through your Thanksgiving dinner with all its joy and good feeling, but now that you have had that happy day surrounded by your grateful family and the friends you love, your mind and heart will turn toward those unfortunate boys and girls, poor children in the midst of plenty, health and peace, who will have no one to provide the good things of life for them this Christmas unless you come to their aid as you have done so ably for the last eleven years.

Don't Send Money; Go Yourself.

"The gift without the giver is bare," so it is preferred that you take the names and go yourself rather than send money to THE TRIBUNE.

The object of the Good Fellow movement is to bring you and your gift into the home of those to whom you would like to act as Good Fellow this Christmas—to add the human touch to your giving.

Send us your name and the number of poor children you would like to help and the neighborhood you would most like to visit, and the Good Fellow department will put you in touch with just the family and the address you ask for.

Last year one poor mother told a Good Fellow: "I was afraid they wouldn't come this year for everything is so high people are having a hard time looking after their own Christmas now"—and that is a challenge to you this year, Mr. and Mrs. Good Fellow and Miss Good Fellow. Are you having a hard time looking after your own family this Christmas? Make it easier by remembering some of these poor folk, and then your own Christmas will bring you a double blessing.

Good Fellows Repeat.

Ask a Good Fellow; he knows! Can a Good Fellow "come back"—we'll say he can. Once tried always used—the Good Fellow plan for doing your Christmas giving. Only twenty-eight days until Christmas—do your Good Fellow shopping early!

Do you remember way back when you were waiting for Santa Claus? Were you ever disappointed? Neither were we—and you are not going to let any little fellow or little girl be disappointed this Christmas, are you? Somehow Santa Claus always remembered where we lived, even though we moved a long way from our old home—didn't he? Well, some of these little Chicago folk are a long way from their first home, and we aren't going to let them think the Santa Claus they knew and believed in back home hasn't followed them to their new home in Chicago, are we?

Somehow Santa Claus always knew just what we wanted most, didn't he? Well, we are going to help him find out just what these little folk want most, and then you can see their little faces light up. Of course you can, old Good Fellow.

Twelve Thousand Last Year.

Last year 12,000 children were made happy by you Good Fellows of Chicago, the year before the number was 8,400. Chicago has added many children to its growing population since last Christmas and more Good Fellows will be needed this year than ever before.

You cannot come in too great numbers to crowd us now, but you may be disappointed if you wait until "the night before Christmas." Please fill out the printed form you will find on page 6 and mail it today to the Good Fellow department, THE TRIBUNE, Chicago.

ENGLAND TAKES STEPS TO FOIL CONSPIRATORS

Explosions in Cork Destroy Stores.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—The capture during raids in Ireland of Sinn Fein documents alleged to give details of a conspiracy for damaging government buildings in England was said today in police circles to be the cause of the erection of the formidable barricades which have been put at the entrances to Downing street and King Charles street.

According to published reports, members of the government have received a number of threatening letters recently, but the officials are maintaining silence on this subject.

It also is stated that sensational discoveries have been made concerning the activities of plotters in London. In one case, according to the police, motor cars were to have been employed to transport bombers from various parts of London to carry out the destruction of government buildings.

Burn Store in Cork.

CORK, Nov. 27.—The Drapery stores on St. Patrick's street here were completely burned by fire today, following a number of bomb explosions. The damage is estimated at £50,000.

Reports from some quarters allege that members of the "black and tans," at the point of revolvers, prevented the fire fighters operations and later ordered all the volunteer helpers away from the scene.

Several other buildings in various parts of the city were badly damaged. The residents were startled by frequent explosions, the smashing of glass and occasional shots during the early hours of the morning.

In Tipperary this forenoon the Sinn Fein clubrooms were burned.

DEFENSES IN LONDON

BY JOHN S. STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Extraordinary precautions were taken today to protect the government offices in London against possible Irish outrages.

Beginning last night at midnight a large force of workmen erected timber barriers eight feet high, with massive gates, at the entrance to Downing street and Charles street, from Whitehall leading to Mr. Lloyd George's official residence and the homes of the foreign and India offices.

To Post Guards.

It is the government's intention that when the barriers have been completed to man the gates with police, who will admit only authorized persons.

The houses of parliament, which are generally free to visitors when the houses are sitting, were closed today.

Lord Dunraven, K.P., C.M.G., speaking exclusively for THE TRIBUNE, said today with regard to the home rule bill discussions in the house of lords that the government acted as if a conflict with the factions in opposition to the measure was generally desired.

"Their object is a mystery to me," said Lord Dunraven. "They seem determined to force upon Ireland a measure which will not satisfy a majority of the people.

"The government appear willing to confer with immoderate opinion, but not with moderate opinion; to discuss with rebels, but not with loyal men.

"A curious position for a government to hold!

Suspicion Rules Erin.

"Though it is difficult for the government to understand, Ireland has no confidence in the government and will not believe that the government acts with goodwill toward her.

"It is useless to say, 'Accept this, more is coming.'

"I think the present opportunity for a settlement is favorable and regret that the government has not put before the people proposals which the moderate opinion of all sections would consider acceptable.

"What can be done? Nothing. I am afraid that while the bill can be improved in committee, the house of lords will be powerless to remedy the fatal defect—the financial clauses."

GRIFFITH AT MOUNTJOY.

DUBLIN, Nov. 27.—Arthur Griffith, head of the Sinn Fein, and E. J. Duggan, Sinn Fein member of parliament, have been taken to Mountjoy prison. It has not been decided whether they will be among those selected for the Ballykinlar internment camp. Internment in this camp, according to the authorities, would be a "concession," as heretofore such prisoners have been held merely as "common criminals."

Unusual activity was displayed by the crown forces throughout the city today, and the thorough searching of premises in the downtown section indicated that the authorities were taking all possible precautions.

New Internment Camp.

DUBLIN, Nov. 27.—What is described as the first of many internment camps for the Irish republican army, it is authoritatively stated, will be brought into operation shortly. It is situated at Ballykinlar, in Dundrum bay, County Down, and is capable of accommodating 1,000 prisoners. It is asserted that prisoners will be liable to be interned without trial and that membership in the Irish republican army will be sufficient reason for internment.

Other camps are in the course of preparation in various parts of the country.

TRY TO KILL GEN. CAMERON.

LIMERICK, Ireland, Nov. 27.—[United Press.]—An attempt was made to assassinate Gen. Cameron today. Bullets struck his carriage as he was leaving the barracks. He was not injured.

MANY RAIDS IN DUBLIN.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Dublin dispatches today state that during the last twenty-four hours police and military raids in search of suspected persons have been going on on an unprecedented scale and at least thirty arrests were made. Mountjoy jail is so thronged that a disused aerodrome at Collingstown, six miles from Dublin, has been taken over for the purposes of an internment camp. The London Evening News prints a sensational statement that over a thousand men have been arrested during the last seven days. Other dispatches from Dublin today estimate that the total number of arrests in Ireland during the two last days total about 200.

IRISH NOTE PUZZLES

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—There was speculation today concerning the possibility that the state department, following the precedent in the statement issued to the press in response to a formal communication from Roberto V. Pesqueira, representing the Mexican government, will issue a similar statement in reply to the plea of Eamonn de Valera, "president" of the "Irish republic" for American recognition of Irish "independence."

State department officials admit they are puzzled and have not yet decided what to do with or about the Irish petition. It is taken for granted in diplomatic circles, however, that, on account of friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain, the state department will disclose first to the British ambassador here any declaration this government might make.

League Will Ignore Irish.

Diplomats also believe that the league of nations will not take cognizance of the Irish situation. They point out that none of the major powers, each of which has racial problems of its own, and none of the secondary states, members of the league, can afford to introduce the Irish question in the league for fear of giving offense, and that of all nations not members of the league, the United States is the only one which is in a position to speak on the subject.

The fact that the White House received the petition after the state department had announced that it would not, and that the White House sent it to the state department, in spite of the latter's declared intention, has inspired the opinion among some diplomats here that President Wilson does intend to direct that a pronouncement on the Irish question be made by the state deparment, either in a statement to the press, or in an informal communication to De Valera.

No "Irish" Passports.

It was learned at the department today that passports will be issued to all American citizens entitled to them for travel, study, research work, or "anything of the kind" in Europe or Great Britain.

Passports will not be issued, it was indicated, for persons intending to go to Ireland if applied for by an organization or association participating in the Irish movement.

HOTELS WATCH FOR A "RAFFLES" FROM THE WEST

Officials of loop hotels were notified yesterday by Detective Sergeants Kennedy and Patrick Loftus of the detective bureau to be on the lookout for Fred Peterson, alias F. C. Richardson, alias R. C. Bratton, a hotel "Raffles," who has been robbing hotels in the west.

According to advices from Denver, Colorado Springs, and other cities, Peterson is wanted for numerous hotel robberies. Police here believe he may be the man who has perpetrated many hotel robberies in Chicago.

Utah-Idaho Sugar Co. Indicted as Profiteer

Butte, Mont., Nov. 27.—The Utah-Idaho Sugar company was indicted here today by a federal grand jury on six counts, which allege selling sugar at an excess profit of 13.421 cents a pound in violation of the Lever act.

A. A. RYAN TAKES HIS AFFAIRS TO U. S. CONTROLLER

Has Conference with Williams in Washington.

New York, Nov. 27.—Alan A. Ryan went to Washington today to confer with John Skelton Williams, controller of the currency, after bankers and attorneys at a conference here considered plans for the formation of a committee to inquire into Mr. Ryan's affairs.

Mr. Ryan declined to make a statement, but said Mr. Williams might have something to say to the public after his conference with him in Washington. His only comment on the report that the banks intended to take care of his assets to protect his obligations to them was, "the story was inspired."

Denies Financial Straits.

He denied he was either in financial difficulties or facing them, and characterized as a joke reports to that effect.

"If I'm broke," he declared, "all the banks are broke."

Mr. Ryan's reported intention to take up with Controller Williams his relations with the banks was interpreted in financial circles here to mean that he might start a war on the Wall street banks.

His conference with the controller was regarded as significant in view of Mr. Williams' criticism of Wall street national banks for what he regarded as excessive rates for call loans made for stock exchange purposes.

Banks Call Action "Protective."

The action of the bankers is said to be merely a protective one, taken to safeguard their loans, and because the collateral on which the loans were made had decreased considerably in value through declines on the stock market.

Different representatives of banks, it is said, admitted that Mr. Ryan's assets were sufficient to take care of each bank in question, while other declarations were to the effect that Mr. Ryan's assets were much greater than his total obligations to the banks.

Causes Relief in Wall Street.

Publication today of the fact that a committee of bankers is forming to take charge of the financial affairs of Mr. Ryan caused relief rather than surprise in Wall street.

Word that the Guaranty Trust company, the Chase National bank, the Mechanics and Metals National bank, the First National bank, the Empire Trust company, the Lawyers Title and Trust company, and other big institutions were devising concerted action was received as an indication that there would be no precipitate action, forcing the securities, pledged by Mr. Ryan as collateral loans of some $16,000,000, upon the market at great sacrifice.

NEW YORK LOST 10,008,483 DAYS BY 1920 STRIKES

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—There were 240 industrial disputes in New York state for the fiscal year ended June 30 last, as compared with 168 for the previous year, according to the annual report of Edward D. Jackson, third deputy industrial commissioner, in charge of the bureau of mediation and arbitration. There were 334,188 persons directly involved, as against 208,952 in 1919, and 16,403 indirectly involved, as against 2,005 the previous year. The aggregate loss of time in 1920 was 10,008,483 days, as against 11,346,653 in 1919.

CORONER'S JURY O. K.'S KILLING BY ALCOCK AID

A conorer's jury yesterday cleared Sergt. Horace Odell, chauffeur for First Deputy of Police John Alcock, of all blame in connection with the death of John Brumbaugh, auto thief, last week.

Brumbaugh was killed and Carlos Stepina, a companion gangster, wounded by Sergt. Odell when they attempted to hold up the first deputy's automobile. Stepina later escaped from six guards at the county hospital.

Ernest Mogge and Thomas "Red" Hayes, other alleged members of the gang, are still held.

Operator Stricken, Woman Guides Motor Boat to Port

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Although she knew nothing of the operation of a motor boat, Mrs. Kate Chaffee, a passenger, guided the craft seven miles down the treacherous Muskegon river when Henry Vandervere, the operator, was stricken. Mr. Vandervere died as the woman brought the craft to a local dock. Acute indigestion caused death.

THE SINN FEIN INVASION OF STATE STREET

State street, thronged with the crowd of Saturday afternoon shoppers, took on a distinct atmosphere of Dublin yesterday, when several Irish men and women marched up and down the thoroughfare bearing signs advising a boycott of English goods. Patrick, the ruddy faced policeman at the corner of Randolph and State, sounded several short blasts on his whistle when Mary O'Reilly, bearing the first sign, marched past.

"Buy nothing made in England," was the burden of her sign. While she passed the policeman stopped all traffic. Many Celtic voices were raised in applause as the other sign bearers followed.

Mrs. Margaret Fleming bore the slogan, "The blockade is England's weapon. The boycott is our answer."

Mrs. Gertrude Fitzgerald attracted much attention with her poster. It read, "Buy nothing in England until Ireland is made free."

Down State street they marched. Because they had no parade permit they were forced to march about half a block apart, but that only permitted more Irish sympathizers to crowd after their favorite sign.

Soon each sign had a large following, and when the first sign turned north at the corner of Van Buren and State, the entire parade was singing, "O, Paddy, dear, and did you hear the news that's going round. . . ."

The resolution to boycott England was passed last Sunday by the Friends of the Irish Republic, and a committee headed by M. J. Flannery was appointed to list British goods.

Yesterday was the first time the boycott signs were presented to the public.

INVESTIGATION INTO ERIN NOT BRITISH, SO CARSON WON'T ATTEND

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, has declined an invitation received from the committee of one hundred in the United States, which is giving hearings on conditions in Ireland, asking him to attend sessions of the committee's commission of seven in Washington. Today he sent the following reply to the committee's cablegram:

"I have received your cablegram inviting me to attend some American commission in Washington and testify on conditions in Ireland. As far as I can ascertain such commission has no mandate or authority from the British government, which alone has the right to deal with the internal affairs of the United Kingdom.

"I feel certain that all true Americans who desire close friendship between their country and ours will resent such unwarranted interference with the affairs of a foreign, friendly state. I must, therefore, decline to accept your invitation."

Former Chicagoan Killed in Auto Accident in West

Fresno, Cal., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—E. R. Beem, formerly of Chicago, where he was connected from 1909 to 1913 with the Chicago Great Western railroad, was killed in an automobile accident here. He was one of the leading business men of Fresno.

SOLDIER, MORBID OVER JAW WOUND, GONE IN MYSTERY

Lieut. Edmund J. Dymek, an infantry officer of the army of occupation in Germany, was invalided home nine months after shrapnel had wounded him under the jaw on the left side and the injury would not heal. He was placed in a hospital at Fort Sheridan and a few days later permitted to visit his mother and father at 1035 North Marshfield avenue.

Weeks went by and the wound did not heal. He became morbidly conscious of the bandage on his face. He came home less frequently. He didn't like to meet people. On Aug. 7 Mrs. Mary Dymek, his mother, was notified he had disappeared. Charles Dymek, his father, worried so much he was stricken with paralysis, according to Mrs. Dymek. The family, however, did not make an active search.

"I am inclined to believe he is working somewhere and taking treatment for the wound," said Mrs. Dymek. "If that is so, we would not care to interfere with his plans. But now that the government is raising so much fuss about it, we will call up a few of our friends and I think perhaps we can get some trace of him."

PREMIERS IRON WRINKLES FROM SILESIA BALLOT

Find Way to Overcome German Influence.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—[By the Associated Press.] — Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain and Premier Leygues of France, conferring until late this evening, definitely settled the vexatious question of the Upper Silesian plebiscite in a manner the heads of the two governments believe will forestall what they think is Germany's effort to pack the province with Germans for voting purposes.

Under the plan it will be arranged that known citizens of the province whom the plebiscite officials are confident have lived there a number of years will vote on one day. Others who have lived in the province a shorter time will vote another day, while those who recently settled will vote on still another day.

Checkmate Colonists.

Should the latter category swing the plebiscite in favor of Germany and the bona fide citizens vote against Germany, the allies are likely to declare the plebiscite void.

The near eastern question was postponed until the arrival of Count Sforza, the Italian foreign minister, on Sunday. It will be taken up in one of the two conferences the premiers will hold Monday. Italy is so vitally interested in the question that the premiers today decided it would be a waste of time to discuss it until Count Sforza was present.

Hope for Settlement.

They decided also not to invite former Premier Venizelos of Greece, as they could discuss the situation with him only as a private citizen. The premiers expressed the hope that they would be able to arrive at a complete understanding regarding the near east at one conference with Count Sforza on Monday.

DENVER STRIKE BREAKERS GIVEN STATE RIFLES?

Denver, Colo., Nov. 27.—Men brought to Denver to break the strike of Denver tramway employés August last were supplied with rifles and ammunition, the property of the state of Colorado, according to a report prepared by investigators in church and social service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; the Department of Social Action of the National Catholic Welfare council, and a Denver church commission.

One installment of the report was made public tonight. The strike resulted in seven deaths and much rioting.

General Superintendent West of the Tramway company, the report says, expressed amazement that there should be any question as to the authority to supply state rifles and equipment to the strike breakers.

BOLSHEVIKI, BAD AS THEY ARE, ARE SOLE RUUSIA HOPE

Present Only Foundation for Reconstruction.

The next installment of Mr. Wells' series will appear tomorrow morning.

BY H. G. WELLS.
FOURTH ARTICLE.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company. Copyright in Canada.

In the previous three papers I have tried to give my impression of the Russian spectacle as that of a rather ramshackle modern civilization completely shattered and overthrown by misgovernment, undereducation, and, finally, six years of war strain.

I have shown science and art starving and the comforts and many of the decencies of life gone. In Vienna the overthrow is just as bad, and there, too, such men of science as the late Prof. Margulies starve to death. If London had had to endure four more years of war, much the same sort of thing would be happening in London. We should have now no coal in our grates and no food for our food tickets, and the shops in Bond street would be as desolate as the shops in the Nevsky Prospect.

Bolshevik government in Russia is neither responsible for the causation nor for the continuance of these miseries.

Bolshevism the Only Foothold.

I have also tried to get the facts of bolshevist rule into what I believe are their proper proportions in the picture. The bolsheviki, albeit numbering less than 5 per cent of the population, have been able to seize and retain power in Russia because they were and are the only body of people in this vast spectacle of Russian ruin with a common faith and a common spirit.

I disbelieve in their faith. I ridicule Marx, their prophet, but I understand and respect their spirit. They are—with all their faults, and they have abundant faults—the only possible backbone now to a renascent Russia. The recivilizing of Russia must be done with the soviet government as the starting phase.

Most Russians Are Indifferent.

The great mass of the Russian population is an entirely illiterate peasantry, grossly materialistic and politically indifferent. They are superstitious, they are forever crossing themselves and kissing images—in Moscow particularly they were at it—but they are not religious. They have no will in things political and social beyond their immediate satisfactions. They are roughly content with bolshevist rule.

The orthodox priest is quite unlike the Catholic priest in western Europe; he is himself typically a dirty and illiterate peasant, with no power over the souls and consciences of his people. There is no constructive quality in either peasant or orthodoxy. For the real Slavs is a confusion of more or less civilized Russians, in and out of Russia, with no common political ideas and with no common will. They are incapable of producing anything but adventures and disputes.

Misrepresented Abroad.

The Russian refugees in England are politically contemptible. They rebearse endless stories of "bolshevist outrages," chateau burnings by peasants, burglaries and murders by disbanded soldiers in the towns, back street crimes—they tell them all as acts of the bolshevist government. Ask them what government they want in its place and you will get rubbishy generalities—usually adapted to what the speaker supposes to be your particular political obsession. Or they sicken you with the praise of some current superman—Denikine or Wrangel—who is to put everything right—God knows how.

They deserve nothing better than a czar, and they are incapable even of deciding which czar they desire.

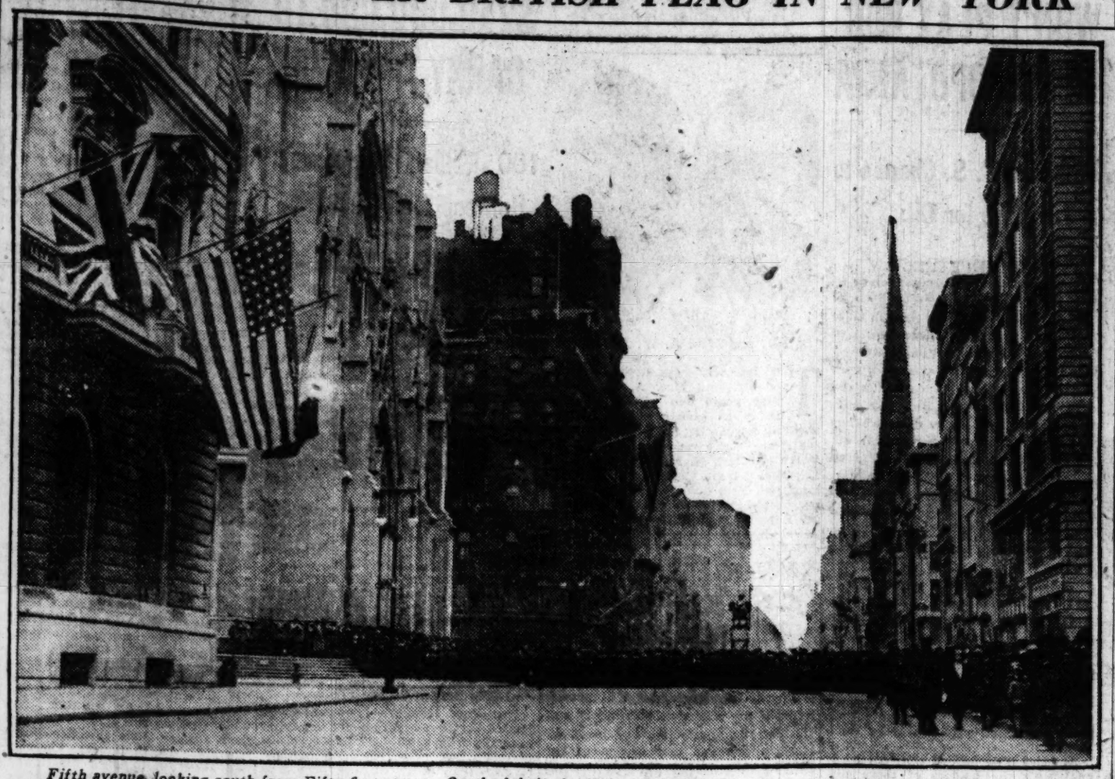
The better part of the educated people still in Russia are—for the sake of Russia—slowly drifting into a reluctant but honest coöperation with bolshevist rule.

Marx Theories Contradicted.

The bolsheviki themselves are Marxists and Communists. They find themselves in control of Russia, in complete contradiction, as I have explained, to the theories of Karl Marx. A large part of their energies has been occupied in an entirely patriotic struggle against the raids, invasions, blockades, and persecutions of every sort that our insensate western governments have rained upon their tragically shattered country.

What is left over goes in the attempt to keep Russia alive and to organize some sort of social order among the ruins.

IRISH RIOT OVER BRITISH FLAG IN NEW YORK



Fifth avenue, looking south from Fifty-first street. On the left is the Union club with the colors of the allies on the portico. The union jack, the cause of the attack by the Sinn Fein mob, is in the foreground. The building directly across Fifty-first street from the Union club is St. Patrick's cathedral, with the crowd streaming from its main entrance across Fifth avenue. In the center of the avenue is one of New York's new traffic control towers.

CATHOLICS JOIN PROTEST AGAINST IRISH MOB IN N. Y.

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—A letter protesting the attack of 5,000 Irish sympathizers on the Union club on Thanksgiving day has been sent to the Most Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, archbishop of New York, by sixty prominent Catholics, both men and women.

The sending of such a letter by members of the laity to one of the highest members of the Catholic hierarchy was said to be without precedent in the history of the church in this country. In addition to condemning the attack upon the Union club as an "un-American proceeding," the letter expressed the wish of the signers to protest as Americans and Catholics "against "the infusion of politics into our beloved church."

The members of the Union club had a bomb scare when a messenger boy delivered a package to the doorman. The package, which was about twelve inches square and two inches thick, was addressed merely "The Union Club." The package was soaked in water and finally opened. Inside were a number of half burned matches and a torn and very much soiled British flag.

SUGGESTS SHIFT IN GREEK LINE OF SUCCESSION

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A way out of the Greek difficulty over the fact that Constantine's wife is a sister of the former kaiser was suggested today in an exclusive interview by Dr. Platon Drakoules, leader of the Greek Labor party and friend of former Premier Venizelos, who is in London on a special mission.

M. Drakoules suggests it might be acceptable to Constantine that the line of succession be changed from the crown prince, who is half Hohenzollern, to Prince George, the younger brother of Constantine, whose wife is a Bonaparte.

This M. Drakoules says would satisfy the French and other allies and would be pleasing to the many Greeks who fear the Hohenzollern connection.

'Bate' Spencer Found Dead in N. Y.; Pistol Tells Story

New York, Nov. 27.—T. B. ("Bate") Spencer, a well known newspaper advertising man, was found in a hotel room here today with a bullethole through his head and a discharged pistol on the floor near him. He once was employed in Chicago and later on the New York World and as representative in Paris of the New York Herald.

A note found in Spencer's room requested that his wife be notified.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, although married for twenty-five years, had been living apart for the last two.

AUDITORS COMB BOOKS IN BOND HOUSE SHORTAGE

Auditors were still at work yesterday checking the shortage discovered in the books of Clement Curtis & Co., a stock and bond house at 209 South La Salle street. The day's investigation did not increase the $48,500 shortage already discovered but the audit has not been completed. One of several assistant cashiers is said to be under surveillance. Officials of the company, the police and representatives of the bonding company are coöperating in the investigation.

MOSLEY FAILS TO SET NEW RECORD

Mineola, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Six unsuccessful attempts to lower the world's air speed record over a one kilometer course were made today at Mitchel field by Lieut. C. C. Mosley in the Verville-Packard plane with which he won the Pulitzer aeronautical trophy Thanksgiving day.

The speed attained today was 186 miles an hour, as compared to 178 miles an hour made in the trophy event.

The record is 192 miles, set last November by Bernard De Romennt of France. The fastest time for the kilometer today was 11.97 seconds.

VANDERLIP DEAL FINDS ECHO IN FRENCH OPINION

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Washington B. Vanderlip's deal with Russia was the primary cause of Premier Leygues' statement to the commission on foreign affairs that France would not recognize the soviet government, but would not only permit, but would encourage trading between her citizens and soviet Russia, according to political and banking circles in Paris.

M. Leygues declared that the blockade was not only ineffective, but inhuman. By this statement he opens a way for what many French merchants have been clamoring—trade with Russia.

While Wrangel's disaster in Europe and the grave financial and economical situation caused the reopening of Russian trade to be considered, the announcement that Vanderlip's syndicate has promised to deliver $3,000,000,000 worth of goods in three years was the deciding point.

"PEACH KING'S" WIDOW SEIZED AS HIS SLAYER

Her Son and Sister Also Arrested.

Fort Valley, Ga., Nov. 27.—Warrants charging murder in connection with the mysterious death of Fred D. Shepard, "Georgia Peach King," last June, after an illness of three days, were served tonight on Mrs. F. E. Elmer, his widow, Mrs. Ione Henry; her sister, and Ernest Hopson, son of Mrs. Elmer by a former marriage.

Shepard's death, experts said at the inquest today, was due to poison. At the close of the inquest, just as she was leaving a court room, Mrs. Elmer was arrested on the charge of illegal appropriation of the dead man's property. She had taken charge of it as he died, she said, without leaving a will.

Later Charged with Murder.

Several hours after the inquest she was served with a warrant charging her with murder. Mrs. Henry and Hopson were arrested at their homes in Perry, near here.

The testimony on which the charge of murder was based was given by Dr. John Funk, pathologist, and Dr. Edgar Everhart, chemist, both of this city. The latter estimated that death was caused by 50 grams of bichloride of mercury.

The inquiry was directed by Solicitor General Garrett following the receipt of an anonymous letter by Mrs. Alice Crandall, a sister of the dead man. This letter said he had left a will. Not only that, but the letter contained what purported to be that will.

Terms of Alleged Will.

This document bequeathed to the widow $10,000 cash and a monthly allowance of $100. All knowledge of the existence of such a will was denied by the widow, who had married Shepard less than a year before his death. Four months after that death she became the wife of Dr. F. E. Elmer.

Dr. Elmer, according to Mr. Garrett, claims to have been a governor of a state in Mexico and later to have married the daughter of an English nobleman.

Shepard when a boy ran away from home, married, and was found working on an Oregon ranch. Later he got a divorce, returned to Georgia, and at his father's death inherited large orchards in Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, and Southern California.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 27.

CHARGING that the United States government is neglecting the disabled ex-service men and that hospital conditions are frightful, the American Legion has prepared for submission to congress a bill coördinating all federal activities in behalf of the veterans of the world war.

No action has been taken by the state department on the petition of "President" de Valera for American recognition of Irish independence.

DEFICIENCY appropriations amounting to about $100,000,000, will be asked for by the shipping board before the end of the fiscal year. Expenditures will total about $325,000,000, and revenues not more than $225,000,000.

THE interstate commerce commission announced today that in September, the first full month in which the increased rates were in effect, the net railway operating income was $75,310,311—$2,338,411 less than in September, 1919.

COOING BABY IS ONLY WITNESS AS WOMAN IS SLAIN

All day yesterday, while his mother's body lay on the floor of a little apartment at 1010 Blue Island avenue, 17 months old Vincent Espisito played in his crib, laughing and cooing. The baby had had nothing to eat since early morning, but was not afraid, for he could see his mother there in the next room.

VINCENT ESPISITO.

When James Espisito, the husband, came home from work at 5 o'clock, he found the woman's body on the floor, a knife wound in her throat, while his brother, Vito, who only recently had been released from an insane asylum, was missing.

In Mrs. Espisito's hand was found a little knitted baby's coat on which she had been working. She was to have become a mother again in January.

Recently Mrs. Espisito told neighbors she was afraid of Vito, as he had been acting queerly again.

We have taken over a very large proportion of the output of a great quality factory—concentrated on but one type—one size—one style—shipped in carloads at the old freight rate. These are but a few of the reasons why we can now offer a durable sweet-toned piano at last year's prices. $395

A Brand New Player Piano

Here's an unusual value. It has the modern features of players priced up to $700. It's easy to operate, simple of construction and staunchly built. The pedals fold in and a door closes over the music roll. Then you have the perfect form of an upright piano on which the children can take their music lessons. At the price offered, it's extra special $535

A Brand New Baby Grand

Here's a splendidly built Baby Grand requiring no more floor space than an Upright. It possesses singing qualities and lasting qualities of instruments priced much higher. In design it favors the Colonial period; and in finish, follows the new English brown shades of mahogany $885

LEAGUE SECRECY PROVES BLOW TO LITTLE POWERS

Big Three Score Seven Tallies in Week.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—The secrecy of the second week's sessions of the league of nations council marked the defeat of the little powers, even as publicity aided them during the opening week.

The big powers have shown greater cohesion as the result of last week's understandings despite numerous disagreements, and thus were enabled to make a common attack upon the proposals of the small powers.

All nations, both great and small, realize the necessity of definite achievement in order to win world confidence, and the big powers have decided that organization of the world court, with suitable amendments in order to weaken the original Root draft, would be the most innocuous measure to put through and they are concentrating on it.

Small Powers Lose Out.

The interests of the small nations were defeated in seven principal points discussed last week.

First—The Scandinavian amendment was voted down as premature.

Second—Admission of Germany, which was sponsored by the Netherlands and Switzerland with the approval of the Scandinavians, fell before the French attack, Lord Robert Cecil abandoning the fight when Latin-America withdrew its support.

Third—The league council's amendments to The Hague court probably will be carried instead of those offered by Scandinavia and Holand.

Disarmament Held Up.

Fourth—Disarmament plans which were supported by the small neutrals and South Americans has been definitely relegated to a nebulous future on the pretext that such action is impossible pending the carrying out by Germany of the treaty demands.

Fifth—Publicity was avoided as the result of the efforts of Britain, France and Italy despite a desperate struggle begun by Lord Cecil and continued by the Scandinavians. The method used was reference to committees which might issue communiques at their own pleasure, the measures then to be referred to subcommissions, whose proceedings remain secret.

Sixth and seventh—Armenian and Vilna questions remain unsettled, though new commissions were formed and new resolutions were passed. The small powers solidly were in favor of restoration of wide world peace and Lord Cecil still stood with them, but nothing as yet has been accomplished because Great Britain was unwilling to consider revision of the Turkish treaty to appease the Turkish nationalists and because France supports Poland in the Lithuanian dispute.

U. S. OFFICER ARRIVES.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—The arrival here today of Maj. Marlborough Churchill, assistant chief of the military intelligence division of the general staff of the American army, which, so far as appears now, has no real significance except to himself and his department, has created a mild sensation in league of nations circles.

The hope that the United States will some day join the league is unmistakable. The entire work of the assembly has visibly been directed so to leave the way open for the United States to have her say in its eventual revision.

The appearance during this assembly of any official or unofficial representative of the American government was the last thing hoped for. Maj. Churchill, consequently, was all the more an object of attention, when his presence here became known.

Subcommittee Perplexed.

The subcommitee considering the admission of new members has been unable to complete its work on account of objections to both Bulgaria and Austria by neighboring states. Roumania, Greece, and Jugo-Slavia are still standing out against Bulgaria, while Czecho-Slovakia has not yet consented to the admission of Austria.

The reasons given by the objecting states are much the same as those presented by France against Germany. It has been pointed out to them, however, that both Bulgaria and Austria in their applications promised to fulfill their international obligations and thus make themselves eligible for admission.

The subcommittee on armaments today continued hearing arguments in favor of the resolution introduced by Dr. Gastoa da Cunha of Brazil, making the manufacture of arms and munitions a state monopoly in every country. This proposition is gaining ground among the delegates.

Plenary Session Soon.

The work of the league of nations committees has progressed enough to warrant the announcement that a plenary session of the assembly will be held some time between Dec. 5 and 10.

Admission of new members to the league will be taken up by the assembly by the end of next week, while the Scandinavian group favors Sweden.

The first American treaties to be filed with the league of nations were put officially on record today when Sweden presented the text of two agreements with the United States.

"SHINE UP THE PEARLS"

Miss Frances Cook, health crusader, teaching the young idea to brush its teeth.

MISS Frances Cook, health crusade director of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, who has learned the secret of teaching school children to enjoy brushing their teeth and washing behind the ears, has enrolled 25,000 pupils throughout Cook county to aid in the sale of Christmas seals, which will open Dec. 2 and continue through the month. The seals sell for a penny each and the aim of the drive is to enroll every school child in the county. The proceeds go toward carrying on the health crusade among the children.

A year ago Miss Cook was a stenographer in a loop office. Through her efforts in behalf of the "kids' health crusade," she has become one of the best known health experts in the country. Last year the sale of tuberculosis seals netted $100,000.

HERE'S AN ADVANCE PEEP AT THE FASHION PLATE FOR SPRING, 1921

Cleveland, O., Nov. 27.—The semi-annual meeting of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt manufacturers' association here today was attended by more than 300 delegates who discussed the new fashions for spring as displayed by living models at the Style shop this afternoon.

No very radical changes are shown from the lines of fall and winter garments. Skirts continue short and straight. The slender silhouette predominates and the youthful spirit was expressed in many garments shown.

"Individuality is the keynote of early spring apparel," said Phillip Frankel, executive secretary of the association. "Every woman will have opportunity to express her own personality through selection of the variety of models offered by the manufacturers."

A wide choice in suits was displayed, in straight, boxy jackets and closer fitting suit coats with ripples at the sides and flat hanging panels front and back. Eton and bolero models give new effects with scallops, uneven hems and coat edges. Tailored suits with and without belts are cut severely slender.

Skirts are short with a suggestion of more fullness, in some cases with panels, tunics, hem trimmings, and plaitings.

Wrappy coats and capes will be generally worn, slender shoulders marking both in soft and delicate fabrics.

Trimmings include beading and braiding, picot edging and a new flat floss embroidery.

STATES BRITAIN WON'T PLAY HOG IN MESOPOTAMIA

Will Give U. S. Chance to Bore for Oil.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A man in close touch with Mr. Lloyd George declared today that the oil situation in Mesopotamia is the one question above all others most likely to cause Anglo-American trouble if indiscreetly handled. Great Britain, he declared, has no desire to "hog" Mesopotamian oil.

Most of the Mosul oil field, which is the largest proved field in Mesopotamia, is now held under an old Turkish concession to a British-German group by the British-French group, the French having taken over the German interests.

No Competitive Boring.

The British government has not decided whether to work these interests itself or to allow the commercial holders to exploit them, but it has determined not to allow the field to be spoiled by competitive boring. Royalties will be secured to the Mesopotamian government yet to be set up and commercial profits will be regulated.

America is perfectly free to enter any deal with the holders of these concessions for a share of the production or to prospect any new fields, having all the rights accorded British subjects or any other foreigners, the official said.

United States Asking Too Much?

A high official in the British foreign office declares that the main point in the American note to Britain on the Mesopotamian oil question is the claim that mandates for Armenia and Palestine ought to be submitted to America for approval.

A theoretical answer to that demand, he said, would be that under the constitution of the league of nations mandates drawn up are to be submitted to the league council. This is in accord with Article XXII., and America, not being a member of the league, strictly speaking, is not entitled to be consulted.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dorre.

THE four witnesses at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dorre fifty years ago will be present today as guests at the golden wedding celebration in the Dorre home, 3021 Parnell avenue. They are H. W. Dorre of Joliet, H. F. Stors of Orland, Ill.; Mrs. Minnie Groskopf of Blue Island, and Mrs. Louis Nicholson of Chicago. The Dorres were married in Tinley Park on Nov. 28, 1870.

SMUGGLED GOLD CAUSES SPLIT IN BERLIN POLITICS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Failing to win sympathy by attacking the Hohenzollerns in the reichstag the majority of the Socialist party leaders have decided to demand confiscation of the entire properties possessed by the former kaiser and crown prince in Germany. They will voice their demands in the coming session of the Prussian assembly.

According to reliable sources of information the value of the former kaiser's property in Germany is estimated at $250,000,000.

The Socialist action will be an occasion for testing the strength of the monarchist movement. It is known that members of the right wing will refuse to consider confiscating estates, as demanded by the left wing party. The question is where the Central and Democratic parties will stand.

The Hohenzollern dispute, following the gold smuggling scandal, is forcing the open alignment of all parties on one side or the other and is bringing the reactionary movement into the public light.

SHIP BOARD ASKS $250,000,000 TO CARRY IT A YEAR

100 Million Deficiency; Balance for 1921-'22.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Deficiency appropriations totaling $100,000,000 will be asked by the shipping board before the end of the present fiscal year.

The additional money will be necessary, board officials say, because of the action of congress in limiting expenditure to revenues obtained by the board from the operation of ships, the sale of ships, and the settlement of claims. Expenditures for the present fiscal year are expected to total about $325,000,000. Revenues will total not more than $225,000,000.

If the war department had settled all pending claims the board probably would have sufficient money to go through the year without the appropriation. So far, however, the war department has paid the shipping board only $40,000,000 out of the $200,000,000 in dispute. There are no indications that the balance of the claim will be disposed of in the near future.

The sum of $150,000,000 has been asked by the board for the next fiscal year to cover all expenses.

Big Sums; No Supervision.

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—The United States shipping board is paying annually from $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 for ship repairs to repair companies in American ports without providing proper supervision, Charles P. Hanes, assistant examiner for the Emergency Fleet corporation at the port of New York, told the congressional select committee on shipping board operations.

Instances of overcharges and other irregularities were cited by the witness, whose observations had been made at New York, Baltimore, and Norfolk, where at various times he was stationed by the corporation.

$181 for an 80 Cent Hinge.

The witness disclosed his discovery of a companion hinge to the one which was described in previous testimony as having cost the government $181, while the hinge could have been purchased for 80 cents.

The second hinge, according to Mr. Hanes, was listed in a bill made out against the Emergency Fleet corporation by the Burton Machine Works of Norfolk for repairs to the steamship Lake Ontario.

For installing this hinge on a galley door a charge of $47.90 was entered in the bill, whereas the hinge, according to the witness, could have been bought for 50 cents. Taking these two hinges, which were both used on galley doors, their cost to the government was $228.90, and should have been only $1.30, with an additional charge of about $5 for installation, making an overcharge to the government of $222.60.

A similar condition was found aboard a tug which Mr. Hanes was sent to inspect while undergoing repairs. He found eight workmen packed into the wireless room of the tug, measuring 4 feet by 4, so tightly that they were unable to proceed with their repairs.

Plundering the Government.

They were engaged in carpentry work, and the witnesses asserted that the size of the room made it impossible for more than three men to be actively engaged at the same time, yet the government was charged for the services of the entire eight men, and their loss of time involved by their inability to work in congested quarters.

The building up of payrolls which the government was required to pay was instanced by another case of which the witness said he had learned from former Time Checker Boaby at Norfolk. In that port, twelve men had been put to work hoisting ashes from a hole where it was possible for only three to do the job.

DERNBERG ASKS EXONERATION OF GERMANY IN WAR

BERLIN, Nov. 27. — Dr. Bernhard Dernburg has written a letter to Foreign Minister Pueyrredon of Argentina, delegate to the league of nations assembly, defending Germany's war acts. The letter has been made public as part of Germany's fight for admission to the league of nations.

Dr. Dernburg was sent to America by the kaiser soon after the outbreak of the war. After the Lusitania was sunk he issued a statement defending the deed. His activities were considered at variance with America's neutrality and he had to return home.

Dernburg tells Argentina that Germany is "willing to prove that no measures and means used by Germany during this war were, neither in proportion nor kind, worse nor more criminal than those used by our adversaries," and asserted that "we neither seek excuse nor ask forgiveness from others or ourselves."

Dernburg said the German people were not hurt so much by the economic and financial stipulations of the treaty as by the spirit with which they were branded with the stigma of moral unworthiness, "destroying at the outset the spirit and good will without which the league cannot survive." He demanded that the league examine the treaty's condemnation of Germany "in a spirit of justice."

Dernburg pointed out former Premier Clemenceau's accusations against Germany made under the treaty as "unbearable for the German people."

DELIVERED ALL OVER THE UNITED STATES

RIOT OF COLORS, CHIC COSTUMES, MARK BATIK BALL

Pageantry of Orient Makes Event Spectacular.

Capture a rainbow, splash its peacock hues over rare stuffs draped daringly upon the figures of comely women, summon all the maharajahs and their oriental trains, take a corner of the Taj Mahal, Solomon's temple, and Nero's golden palace—set it all down in the Gold room of the Congress hotel to the tempo of jazz music.

That's a Batik ball.

In the rather elaborate program one learned that Saturday was "the night that Chicago takes her place as the artistic and Bohemian center of the universe, in a riot of color, music, dancing, revelry, and stunts. . . . Batik, the ancient splendor of the east—ultra-modern wonder of the western world! Batik, the mysterious, magical, opulent and elusive art of all time will be revealed, etc."

Society Folk Turn Out.

Most of Chicago society was there and the concensus was that even though the press agent sung a mean adjective his pen was truthful. There were costumes that not only beggared description, but eluded the naked eye. The atmosphere was Baghdad, but the setting was Chicago. If Mr. Batik had been there he would have succumbed to aesthetic admiration in contemplating the matchless burgeoning of his handiwork. In any event, he will awaken this morning to know he is as famous as any of our best advertised household articles or even a flivver car.

Batik was the dominant note. The electrician played Batik colors upon the dance floor, the orchestra purveyed Batik symphonies, and the soft drink bar supplied the beauty and the chivalry of the city with Batik water. It was gratis and good. One does not appreciate Batik until one imbibes it. Batik water——

Some "Stunt" Street Features.

But we digress. Besides the dancing and the pageantry there was Stunt street. In discreetly secluded booths one encountered "The Sultana at the Ball," "The Javanese Ground Hog," "Shishine of Virginia and Moonshine of Kentucky," "Why Girls Leave Home," "For Men Only" (a swell manicure), etc.

In an artistic frame at the terminus of Stunt street was Paddy Nolan, who had dyed his features with Tyrian purple, and performed throughout the evening as a Batik target for lemons, hurled at him by members of the weaker and the other sex. It was Mr. Nolan's debut into bluebook circles, he said, early in the evening while awaiting the signal for on with the dance.

Promoters of the affair pronounced it a success. The general admission was $10 a couple; members and artists $5 a couple. Most of the dancers were members or artists.

Eames MacVeagh was chairman of the committee on arrangements and Evan Evans vice chairman and director of the pageant. The others on the committee were McClelland Barclay, Donald Brian, Charles S. Dewey, Charles Daniel Frey, Will Howell, Joseph H. Neebe, and John Root. Mrs. Nancy Cox-MacCormack was in charge of the groups.

Masque Opens Pageant.

The pageant opened with the masque, of which Miss Helen Dupee was the head, assisted by a ballet of young girls and children. This was followed by the prologue, which was delivered by Donald Robertson and written by Wallace Rice.

Then came the Javanese group, the most picturesque of the pageant, led by Mrs. Russell J. Matthias.

The architects and sculptors, led by Albin Polasek, John Paulding, Benjamin Marshall, and André Rebori, followed the Javanese dancers.

Mrs. John Root led the French group, which depicted the opening of the Longchamps races in Paris, the smartest social event of each season.

Art Institute Represented.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rosse led a group from the Art institute.

The interior decorators, led by Lionel Robertson and Mrs. Jessie McCutcheon Raleigh, wore colorful Persian costumes.

The Junior Friends of Art, of which Miss Olga Menn is president, gave a harvest pantomime.

Robert Eskridge's group, which consisted of Miss Elizabeth Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Fairbank, Mr. and Mrs. David S. Wegg Jr., and several others, was a modernized Aphrodite tableau.

Miss Ruth Brooks led the Artists' guild group and a band of gypsies was led by Miss Mary Glenn.

Jewels of India Spectacular.

One of the most spectacular groups was the Jewels of India, led by Miss Jeanette Pratt as an idol. Sapphires, emeralds, pearls, rubies, and all the glowing gems of the mystic Hindus were depicted by symbolic groups of dancers, priests, incense bearers, etc. Mrs. J. Mitchell Hoyt, dressed as crystal, sang as this group entered the ballroom Mrs. Fletcher Durbin, Mrs. Clarence Hough, Mrs. Bert Leston Taylor, Miss Hazel Jenney, and Miss Marie Paige were crystal gazers, and Mrs. Jacob Baur queen of pearls.

Miss Cyrena Van Gordon and Edward Johnson led the grand opera group, which preceded the dramatic group, led by Donald Brian and Oswald Yorke.

'MARY'S TRIAL' A POOR SHOW FOR NEVADA CROWD

Came Far and Pickford Argument Is Dry.

Minden, Nev., Nov. 27.—Arguments began in the district court here today to quash the suit the state filed to set aside the divorce granted Mary Pickford from Owen Moore. Miss Pickford, since her divorce was granted here March 2, has married Douglas Fairbanks, and in the state's petition was referred to as "Gladys M. Moore, known as Gladys M. Fairbanks."

Judge Langan announced that each side would be given ten days in which to file briefs.

Attorney General L. B. Fowler of Nevada requested the court to name another judge to hear the case, but the court ruled adversely.

Gavin McNab of San Francisco and P. A. McCarran of Reno represented the defendants, with Attorney General L. B. Fowler and Assistant Attorney Robert Richards appearing for the state.

Crowd Brings Its Lunch.

Today's skirmish was a dry, technical affair and a disappointment to a large audience. The little Minden courtroom, without a claim to fame until Mary's marital troubles attracted attention, was crowded to the doors for today's session. Farmers and miners brought their wives and families from a distance into Minden, prepared for a protracted stay, and fortified with food for their horses and themselves.

Bound to Go to Supreme Court.

The proceedings today did not go into the merits of the controversy as raised by the state, namely, that Mary Pickford's divorce decree was secured as a result of fraud and through collusion between herself and Owen Moore. The matter came up today on a motion to quash the service of summons on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction because the parties in interest all were served outside the state.

Attorneys on both sides admitted, no matter what Judge Langan's ruling shall be, the case will be carried to the state Supreme court on the points involved in today's hearing.

One Man Janitor Strike in Evanston Soon Ends

Every steam radiator in the Melwood apartment building at 1213 Michigan avenue, Evanston, went cold yesterday. Tenants, seeking the cause, found Charles W. Kjar, the janitor, sitting with his feet propped up and a literary review in his lap.

"I'm on strike until I get the union scale," he said. "I only got $108 a month all this year for the twenty-seven flats. I ought to get at least $175."

A "strike breaker" sent by the agents found a roaring fire in the furnace and Kjar stoking it double time.

"I couldn't bear to see the kids suffer," he explained.

Quakes in Spain Wreck Buildings in Many Cities

MADRID, Nov. 27.—Serious earthquake shocks have caused extensive damage in northwestern Spain, centering in the Pontevedra district. In the cities of Corunna, Lugo, Vigo, and Ferrol buildings were shattered. Pupils of a girls' school in Pontevedra became panic stricken and jumped from the windows of a dormitory, a number being injured.

VON KAHR DENIES BAVARIA PLANS KING'S RETURN

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Reports that organizations have been formed in Bavaria for the purpose of restoring the monarchy and establishing Bavarian domination over Germany were discredited by Minister President von Kahr of Bavaria today.

False rumors relative to separatist and revolutionary movements of various sorts in Bavaria have been circulated by opponents of the present Bavarian coalition government, which is bourgeois and violently opposed by communists and independent Socialists in Germany, he declared.

"Much that is misleading has been said," said President von Kahr, "about the Einwohnerwehr and the 'Orgesch' in Bavaria. These rumors have placed Bavaria and Bavarians in a false light, both in other parts of Germany and abroad.

"In the first place, let me say that 'Orgesch' does not exist in Bavaria," he said. "The Einwohnerwehr is an organization of decent citizens of all political faiths to preserve order and prevent the recurrence of bolshevik riots. It is under oath to check revolutionary movements, whether they tart from the extreme radicals or the extreme conservatives."

Fresh Milk and Cream in France for Children Only

PARIS, Nov. 27.—As a measure toward relieving the shortage of milk for the children of the country the government announced this afternoon that it was preparing a decree authorizing the mayors of all cities in France to prohibit the use of fresh milk and cream in hotels, restaurants, and similar places.

JANITORS WILL ARBITRATE; IF REFUSED, STRIKE

Union Chief Gives Reason for Demands.

The flat janitors' union, through its president, William Quesse, yesterday announced its willingness to submit its new wage demand to arbitration.

Unless a settlement is reached, the leaders say, the union will strike against all employers who fail to meet their demand for a new scale by midnight, Dec. 31. Their present agreement expires on that date. The new demand is for 10 per cent of the gross rental of each flat.

"The flat janitors' union feels that the individual owner is willing to grant the increase asked," said Mr. Quesse. "There may be a few who are not and we feel that by calling individual strikes on them we can force them in.

"We wish to point out to the public that there is only one reason for the difference in rent between a stove heated flat and a steam heated flat. That is the difference between $20 for a stove heated five room apartment and $75 for a steam heated five room apartment. The entire difference in cost between those two apartments is for service that the tenants get. Only one class of service is given in an apartment building and that is janitor service.

Prefer to Deal with Owners.

"The janitors realize only too well that their appeal will be answered more readily by the individual owner than by the agent. They also realize that it is easier for us as a union to whip the individual landlord into line than to meet the combined efforts of the real estate boards. We want 10 per cent of the gross income of all apartment buildings for our service.

"We say again to the public and to tenants in general that we believe the increase asked can be paid by the landlords of Chicago without any increase in rent.

"We also say to the tenants' associations that they, like ourselves, must have found some reasons for organizing and that they, like us, have learned the sting of the whip in the hands of slave drivers.

Takes Up Janitors' Quarters.

"We do not want an apartment in the basement, or one upstairs for that matter, because we realize that living rooms in an apartment building for the janitor means his confinement to that building and a twenty-four hour a day service for 365 days a year.

"Buildings supplying living rooms for the janitor cause him an undue hardship because every time he loses his job he must move. The pleasures of moving are not better nor more disagreeable to the wife of the janitor than to any other regular human being.

Points to Other Big Costs.

"We would also say to the public if 10 per cent of the gross income seems exorbitant when it is going to pay for twenty-four hour service or the difference between a stove heated and a steam heated flat—that the real estate agents are receiving 3 per cent for the collection of rents alone and charge 5 per cent for sales and brokerage.

"Every real estate firm in the city is selling real estate bonds at 6 per cent with a 5 to 35 per cent commission for making the loan. If their amount of commission for the service rendered is fair, then our demand for 10 per cent for twenty-four hours of service every day should seem really reasonable to the public.

"We are with the tenants' association on every reasonable ground they have, but we are with our employers if they will pay us reasonable wages to look out for their interests. We believe that it is up to an employé to work for his employer's interest. The fight between the landlord and the tenant must be their own fight. It is not ours.

Willing to Arbitrate.

"Further, we are willing to submit our grievances and our demands to arbitration. If the arbiter for the union cannot agree with the arbiter for the employers, then we will agree on an honorable man in public office to act as arbitrator. If an agreement can't be reached the public must suffer a strike Dec. 31.

"The landlords raised the janitors 50 cents a flat when they increased rents $5 to $35 a flat, and in some cases $100 a flat.

"The average janitor handling twenty-four flats at $4 a month per flat makes $96 a month working twenty-four hours a day, 365 days a year."

MOB MENACES ASSAILANT OF GIRL AGED 1

Police Battle Crowd Threatening 'Moron.'

John Nakolas of 625 South Dearborn street, lace peddler, was arrested last night as the man who attacked 13 year old Margaret Carr in her home at 11 Woodland avenue on Nov. 13.

Detectives William Enright and George Brink seized him as he was boarding a car at One Hundred and Eleventh street and Michigan avenue. A mob immediately surrounded the man and the police had difficulty in preventing trouble.

Nakolas was taken to the girl's home, where she identified him.

Rag Lawndale "Moron."

Yesterday also saw the capture of a man who for the last six weeks is alleged to have annoyed women and children in the Lawndale and Fillmore police districts. Tomorrow a committee from the Galewood Woman's Civic league will visit the Oak Park village board to find out whether something can't be done to stop the moron who has put in his appearance in their neighborhood, just west of Austin avenue.

James Ryan, 718 South Kedzie avenue, is the man arrested yesterday. He was grabbed by Detective Sergeants Engle and Parker after the latter's little niece had made a pretense of tryst with him.

Several days ago, the girl says, Ryan approached her in a movie show and offered her candy if she would meet him.

Walks Right Into Trap.

She told her uncle, who had already been detailed with Engle to catch the man. Parker instructed her to make an engagement with the man at the first opportunity that presented itself. At the intersection of Harrison street and Crawford avenue the little girl met him. Then the detectives swooped down upon the pair and arrested Ryan.

SIRENS OF FOOD BOOTHS PERIL GIRTH REDUCERS

Race Between Classes Ends Tomorrow.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Tomorrow will prove whether it is possible for a human being to live six days without butter, sugar, cream, oil, or any other fatmaking foods and survive with a grin.

The chart last night after weights from both lines—Dr. John Dill Robertson's class of women and my class of former stout men—were properly registered, indicated a solid hundred years' longevity and a great broad smile for each and every contestant.

Final Lap Tomorrow.

Tomorrow will be the final lap in the race for Slimville a la the diet route, as demonstrated daily at the health show at the Coliseum since last Wednesday. It is about a neck and neck race, but the odds are a little in favor of the men, so they say, because their portions have been much less generous than those allowed the women. However, it is too early for any winning announcement for the simple reason that charming young ladies are spotted around the Coliseum behind cake exhibits and ice cream cones and tempting biscuit temptations to lure many normally strong young males away from their reducing food.

Tuesday I will announce to the interested public which class has found the weight reducing charts at the health show of greater interest, which side lost the more, and whether their particular favorite in the race emerged lightly or in disgrace.

Menus for Day.

Menus for tomorrow follow:

DR. ROBERTSON'S.
LUNCHEON.
Green relish.
Tomato bouillon with a little rice, no wafers.
Tuna fish salad with celery greens and red pepper, no dressing.

AT CHICAGO'S HEALTH SHOW

Birth registration is necessary to the health of a city, Dr. Robertson insists. Here he is shown recording the births of some little ones of whom no official record was made when they were born within our city. A WOMAN'S MIND; YOU KNOW ABOUT HER PRIVILEGE

Will Mrs. De Woody Punish Erickson?

There is at least grounds for suspicion in the mind of a warrant clerk in the Sheffield avenue police court that Mrs. Helen DeWoody, divorcee, living with her two sisters at 1424 Olive avenue, exercised her feminine privilege of changing her mind last night.

Of course this court attaché has nothing more than a suspicion, but—well, here are the facts in the case.

When Mrs. DeWoody and the police of the Summerdale police station confronted Edgar C. Erickson, proprietor of a clothing store at Armitage and Milwaukee avenues, a married man, with accusations of stealing the divorcee's jewelry valued at $6,850, the man made a complete confession, the police say.

Implicates Two Others.

The confession implicated Attorney Edward J. Ader and Lee Corey, 3412 Dickens avenue.

Following the confession Mrs. DeWoody asserted that she was going to prosecute Mr. Erickson. True to her word, she appeared in the Sheffield avenue court yesterday and testified against the man. Attorney Benedict J. Short, counsel for Mr. Erickson, then asked for a continuance, which was granted. The case is set for Dec. 3. It may be heard on that day.

Three hours after appearing in court Mrs. DeWoody talked to newspaper reporters.

"I am not going to prosecute," she said. "What's the use. Two wrongs don't make one right. It won't get me anything."

Later she discussed the case with another reporter.

"O, yes, I am certainly going to prosecute," she said. "Why, certainly. I wouldn't think of allowing it to be dismissed for want of prosecution. Certainly not."

Makes Court Clerk Wonder.

The clerk of the court, who has a soft spot for people who stand by the complaints they make, heard the news with a smile last night.

"If she isn't careful that woman will change her mind one of these days," he said.

Mrs. DeWoody, who says she is a niece of Charles F. DeWoody, formerly chief of the bureau of investigation for the department of justice in Chicago, was divorced from her husband three years ago. She denied the charges made by Erickson that he was a victim of a blackmail scheme.

Ford Plant Again Breaks Production Record for Day

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 27.—The world's record for automobile production in a single day was broken at the Ford Motor company's plant here Thursday when 5,673 "Henrys" were turned out. Of this number 4,061 were turned out in completed cars at the close of the day. Production continued at the Ford plant at an average of 4,000 cars a day, it was announced tody.

"BIG PAPA" OF HAITI SADDENS HIS STEPCHILD

Natives Fret Over Scant Scope of Inquiry.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—There are strong rumors that the Haitian delegation has decided to complain to the league against American occupation, financial control, and the alleged marine atrocities in Haiti. It is intimated that the big powers seek to prevent Haiti from making the appeal in view of American opposition to the league, and that their influence may prevent the step.

BY EYE WITNESS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PORT AU PRINCE, Nov. 24.—The naval court's current investigation is proving a source for further dissension and disappointment among the Haitian population through no fault of the court, but because it was the mass of the people's idea that it was "the big papa"—meaning the president of the United States—who was sending them powerful representatives who would redress all their grievances and set everything right.

Laboring under this conviction the natives come to the various gendarmerie headquarters, where they say that they are informed the current inquiry concerns only allegations as to the American marines' conduct.

Press Is Vindictive.

Some native newspapers, emboldened by the arrival of "big papa's" representatives, have been printing comment the last fortnight which they have not dared to make for five years. Constant Vieux, the editor of the Haitian Courier, because he boldly commented on the American occupation, declares an official accused him Saturday of being a Cacao ally.

The editor said:

"I am threatened and menaced and I earnestly ask an opportunity to testify before the American investigation body, which is not so limited as the present naval court, which is unable to look into such matters as delayed payments for house rents by American officials and similar high handed acts."

That is one source of the trouble here. The marines are doing their own work well, but they have been intrusted with delicate administrative problems for which they have no gift or training. Everybody possessing vision enough to understand what is wrong here is clamoring for expert legal advisers to assist the occupational forces in their dealings with American planters, exporters, and merchants, and with the natives who are acutely sensitive.

Sugar Men Complain.

Officials of the Haitian American Sugar company declare that the American civil administration's rulings have cost them years of lost time and a heavy reduction in output. They have a $9,000,000 investment, and they say they are willing to testify before any government body making a comprehensive investigation.

After a fortnight of patient and often disheartening observation of occupation affairs I am convinced that a great part of the story of our troubles may be told in three leters. They are R—U—M.

To an American planter I said:

"I am beginning to think that maybe 50 per cent of all these scandals and troubles are due to drink."

Blames J. Barleycorn.

The answer was, "More than 50 per cent."

During a fortnight in this black republic's capital I have not seen one black man intoxicated. All the intoxicated have been white foreigners, and sometimes even officials.

Col. Russell, commanding the first provisional brigade of marines, is a most conscientious officer and correct gentleman.

Order after order is issued, but the evil continues. Drinking here is doubly vicious because rum is so potent a stuff that it seems to fly to the white men's heads almost instantaneously, with the consequence that intense nervousness and irascibility, as well as diminished physical resistance, results.

I long debated whether to touch on these matters, but they are so flagrant that somebody should speak of them.

MARINE LANDS TO FACE NAVAL COURT IN HAITI

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 27.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dorcas Williams, a marine sergeant, formerly of Birmingham, Ala., accused of killing a native of Haiti, arrived here today, a prisoner aboard the United States destroyer McCormick.

The Haitien Courier has been printing a series of extremely sensational charges against the marines, based on hearsay reports. Maj. Jesse F. Dyer, judge advocate of the court, declared today he had questioned the editor of the newspaper, who was unable to present proof of the charges and, therefore, would not be called as a witness.

As a sample of the charges, the Courier related in ghastly detail how native prisoners were forced to eat the flesh of dead bandits. The military authorities say the publication is creating a tense situation.

The smallpox epidemic still is raging and has reached the American marines, one private being sent to the hospital with a mild case.

MR. J. A. J. WATTS, A DRY CLEANER, GETS CLEANED

And Just When Business Was Picking Up.

James Andrew Jackson Watts stepped briskly from the taxicab that had conveyed him to the ornate entrance of the eight story Edgewater apartments, 8 Eastwood terrace. Suppressing a cough of dust motes from the cuff of his three fall topper, and said to the policeman perplexed chauffeur:

"I'll return in a minute, suh. You all may wait."

With which Mr. Watts slung his stick in the crook of his left elbow, mounted the white steps leading to the massive French glassed doors, entered, and passed the dashing young Cerberus in uniform fitting trousers and bobtailed jackskit, who gestured as though he would fain have words with him:

"I am James Andrew Jackson Watts of the best wash and dry cleaners. I have a client on the next floor."

Busiss Picking Up.

Mr. Watts climbed the first flight of stairs, the second, third, and on up to the eighth flr. He rang the bell of the first apartment. Nobody answered. Mr. Watts produced a bunch of keys, deftly fitted one, turned the lock, and entered. A few minutes later he emerged with a sealskin coat. He repeated the acts at the next apartment. When he came out he was stuffing a diamond valliere in his vest pocket. Another sealskin coat was draped over his arm.

Business, as the park spear carriers say, was picking up when Mr. Watts finished with the seventh floor and descended to the 6th. He looked like a walking Christmas tree. Mrs. Lillian Gurvivit and Mr. M. L. Kahn, tenants on that flor, were exchanging morning tidbits. Mrs. Gurvivit, who saw him first, screamed:

"Help! There's a colored burglar!"

"I'm Bad Guy."

"Shut up," admonished Mr. Watts, "or I'll kill you. I'm a bad guy and——"

He didn't finish. Mrs. Gurvivit had yanked off her high heeled slippers and was beating a tattoo upon his head. Mrs. Kahn was accompanying her with a hairpin and a feather duster. They continued to scream.

Doors popped open, and feminine reinforcements arrived armed with flatirons, brooms, flower pots, piano stools, skillets, hammers, gold fish aquariums, vacuum cleaners, and other utensils ornamental but useful.

Some kind person telephoned the two local police and Detective Sergts. Fahrbach and Gill arrived with a patrol of hospitals and coaxed away a score of excited feminine tenants.

They Discover Mr. Watts.

In excavating through skillets, shattered flowerpots, aquariums and shrubbery, they encountered the once trim person of Mr. Watts. His eyes were hidden by two generous bumps, two teeth were missing, he had a leftover ear and some dainty foot had stepped on his nose.

At the station he said:

"They certainly cleaned James Andrew Jackson Watts. I live at 326 Chestnut street, and I wish I'd never left there."

CHRISTMAS DOLLIES

Three little girls who will impersonate dolls at the Yule festival in toyland circus to be given for the benefit of poor children.
[Atwell Photo.]

A CHRISTMAS tree festival and toyland circus for the benefit of children who live in houses too small for a chimney and in alleys too narrow for Santa's reindeers will be held at the Coliseum by the Red, White and Blue club from Dec. 13 to 23. The club, which is located at 1001 Courier street, in rooms formerly occupied by a saloon, cares for 350 children and 100 adults every day.

Tickets which will admit one adult or two children will be sold in blocks, the proceeds going toward the maintenance of the club. There will be a real Santa Claus and a municipal Christmas tree with a present for every child, live dolls that dance, elephants, ponies, bears, monkeys, clowns, trained horses and dogs, aerial acts, a merry-go-round and everything that goes to make up a real big circus.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is chairman of the committee in charge of the club. The directors are Mrs. Frank C. Letts, Mrs. Edward S. Beck, Mrs. Howard Gillette, Mrs. Kay Wood, Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mrs. Charles B. Pike, Mrs. Richard T. Fox, Mrs. Jont Glass, Mrs. Arthur Cable, Helen Gilbert and Miss Caroline Kirkland.

U. S. TAKES TRAIL OF JACK BOOTLEG IN SUBURB CAFES

Berger's in Forest Park Raided; $20,000 Wines.

Prohibition enforcement officials began their promised offensive against cafes and cabarets in the outlying districts yesterday with a raid on Berger's place, a "wide open" roadhouse in Forest Park. Champagnes, wines and other liquors valued at $20,000 were seized. Three met were arrested, including Charles M. Berger, the proprietor.

Three other squads raided saloons in Chicago, seizing three men and a large quantity of wines, whisky and beer. In the saloon of Dan Morrison at 4661 West Monroe street, an empty case that had contained booze purchased in the $200,000 Heitler liquor scandal was found.

Other places raided were Max Simon's saloon at 224 North Clark street, where twenty-four pints of whisky were found, and a Park Row saloon that had several gallons of moonshine and whisky.

Plan Suburb Raids.

Frank D. Richardson, prohibition enforcement chief, declared there would be no let up in the war on the illicit liquor traffic, and that raids would follow in the vicinity of Burnham, Burr Oak, Desplaines, Niles, Green Bay road, Lyons and Lemont. He said a suit asking for the closing of Berger's place would be started Monday.

Berger's place was running full blast when the dry agents under Joe Callahan drove up to the fountain at the rear of the cabaret room. Long rows of automobiles were parked near the entrance. At one side hung a large sign—"The last place to get a drink between here and Elgin." "Bill" Smith and Morris Fleischman, bartenders, were arrested with Berger.

Two More Blows for J. Bootleg.

Saloonkeepers named in the abatement suits filed before Federal Judge Landis last Wednesday were again made the target of the federal authorities during the day.

Officials in the district attorney's office announced indictments were being prepared for every one of the eighty saloonkeepers and cabaret owners involved, charging violation of the Volstead act.

At the same time it was declared in the office of the supervising prohibition agent that tax abatement bills would be slapped upon each of the eighty saloons and cabarets. Taxes in each case, the dry chief said, would amount to approximately $2,000 if it is shown even one sale of liquor was made.

The district attorney announced that on evidence collected over Thanksgiving he would file fifty additional injunction suits the first of next week.

MRS. NEFF PAID $32,000 IN CASH; GIVEN A DIVORCE

When Mrs. Cora Neff completed her testimony against her husband, Dr. James M. Neff, former associate of Dr. John B. Murphy and member of the surgical staff of the Mercy hospital, in Judge Sabath's divorce court yesterday, Charles E. Erbstein, attorney for the surgeon, used the judicial chambers as a bank.

"We are not contesting this suit," he explained. Then, placing a large box on the railing in front of the witness stand, he counted out $30,000 in $5 bills. "Are you satisfied with this alimony settlement?" he asked Mrs. Neff.

"I am," she replied.

The money was given her in open court.

The $32,000 is not all Mrs. Neff received in alimony, however, as attorneys stated that certain property rights will be given her, in addition to $100 a month for maintenance.

Judge Sabath indicated he would grant the decree to Mrs. Neff, after she had testified that her husband deserted her in Spokane, Wash., in 1918. At that time Dr. Neff abandoned a suit for divorce which he had filed against his wife to enter the British army as a lieutenant colonel in the Royal Medical corps.

FEUD OF LABOR GANGS BLAMED FOR SHOOTING

Principals in Affray Keep Release.

With a sullen silence, William ("Slick Bill") Tynan, dangerously wounded in the abdomen, and Joseph Carville, ex-convict who shot him, refused yesterday to explain to the police the nature of the quarrel that led to the affray in a back room of Mrs. Bertha Knapp's saloon at 3084 Lock street, Friday night.

JOSEPH CARVILLE.

All the police have been able to determine is that the men were drinking in the saloon, that Carville accused Tynan of something, that Tynan heatedly denied the charge, and that Carville suddenly drew a revolver, shot Tynan, and fled. Carville was arrested later in a saloon at 3244 South Union avenue.

Blame Gang Feud.

That the shooting is the result of labor gang feuds is the theory of the police.

Tynan is a member of the "Enright group" of labor organizations and was a close friend of "Jobey" Hurley, pal of "Sonny" Dunn, who was murdered by Carville last June. Carville escaped the law by pleading self-defense.

Carville is said to be a henchman of "Big Tim" Murphy. He was a close friend of "Smiling Jack" O'Brien, hanged last summer for the murder of Policeman Richard Burke.

"Smiling Jack" declared just before his execution that Enright and his faction would save him. Enright was murdered and O'Brien was hanged. That is an angle the police are investigating in connection with the present shooting.

Assailant Out on Bond.

Carville, it was learned, was at liberty on a $50,000 realty bond in connection with a robbery charge involving the theft of $10,000 worth of clothing. When he was brought before Tynan for identification he became enraged and would have attacked the victim of his revolver had not the police restrained him.

Three men are held at the Deering street station as witnesses. They are Arthur Boller, bartender at the saloon where the shooting took place; Martin Haley of 3659 South Halsted street, and Joseph Murphy of 1240 West Thirty-first street.

Kentucky Wants to Get Into the Next Cabinet

V. B. ABBOTT.

In connection with the announcement of his election as a vice president and director of the Chicago Telephone company THE TRIBUNE prepared for publication a picture of William R. Abbott, who for several years has been general manager of the telephone company. Through an error in the mechanical department the photograph reproduced on Thanksgiving day over Mr. Abbott's name was that of Secretary of the Treasury Houston, which had been intended for use in connection with an income tax story. So here is the photograph of Mr. Abbott.

A London dispatch of Nov. 21 quoted Washington Vanderlip as saying: "For example, the International Harvester company and all the Vanderlip concessions are to be worked by the American system." The harvester company wishes to make clear that it has no relations with Mr. Vanderlip.

THE TRIBUNE'S report of the Thanksgiving dinner of the Central department of the Y. M. C. A. said there were 150 young men present, from thirty-eight states and nine foreign countries. The complete list included 321, men from thirty-eight states and twenty-two foreign countries.

CAN NEW YORK LEVY TRIBUTE ON THE NATION?

With the approach of the opening of congress and the close of the international joint commission's hearings on the projected St. Lawrence seaway the fact is impressed upon us that no promise or hint of a promise for favorable action on the improvement has been made. Despite the unimpeachable arguments of fourteen middle western states, the reports of some of the nation's greatest traffic experts and engineers and the impressive recommendations of scores of agricultural, commercial, and civic organizations in favor of the seaway, we have gained nothing. The shortsighted and selfish opposition of New York and a few New England interests has obstructed if it has not prevented promise of a favorable decision.

The situation resolves itself into that of the old shipping barons of the Rhine, who took toll of all the commerce of the great interior, obstructing the trade and prosperity of millions to enrich the few. The port of New York and other ports of the Atlantic coast cannot so obstruct the development of all the states along the great lakes, all the cities, and all the millions of productive acres, and patriotic American citizens whose prosperity depends upon the smoothest possible flow of traffic.

If New York and the minor Atlantic coast interests involved succeed in their determination to influence the report of the joint commission adversely or to block favorable action in congress, they will develop a condition of resentment and opposition in the middle west which will have explosive possibilities. The development of such a situation is highly dangerous. Sectional antagonisms are bad for the nation as well as bad for the sections involved.

In the case of New York the trouble is augmented by the influences which have been brought to bear and are still being brought to bear to subsidize American coast shipping by exempting American ships from Panama canal tolls. This is an effort not only to make the interior of the United States pay a subsidy to coast shipping, the capital of which is centered largely in New York, but is an effort to make "a scrap of paper" of our treaty under which the canal project was piloted through international complications with Great Britain.

President Elect Harding is said to favor the exemption of American ships from Panama canal tolls. He will do well to give the subject new and careful thought.

TO THE UNKNOWN DEAD.

Secretary of War Baker plans to bring the body of an unknown American soldier from France and have it interred in the national cemetery at Arlington with ceremonies similar to those attending the burial of an unknown British soldier in Westminster Abbey and of an unknown French poilu under the Arc de Triomphe.

The precedent is, however, we believe, American and not foreign. The unknown dead of our civil war were honored with a monument in Arlington dedicated with ceremonies in 1866. The monument bears this inscription:

"Beneath this stone repose the bones of two thousand one hunded and eleven unknown soldiers gathered after the war from the fields of Bull Run and the route to the Rappahannock. Their remains could not be identified, but their names and death are recorded in the archives of their country and its grateful citizens honor them as of their noble army of martyrs. May they rest in peace. Sept. A. D. 1866."

Thus it was the American republic which first recognized that democracy of service and of sacrifice on which society is founded and to which nations turn for their salvation in the hour of danger.

The dead, known or unknown, are beyond the ministrations of the country for which they died. The ceremony, one of the deepest significance, is for the living, a reminder of duty and an admonitory sacrament.

In the largest sense nearly all the dead soldiers are unknown dead. Their only fame is national fame. Even to Americans they are known only as Americans. A solemn ceremony for all over the body of one should stimulate Americans to be wise and devoted to the cause in which these men were brave and faithful, the cause of national security.

They fought to keep the nation out of danger. Can the nation sleep on their acts and again drift into danger?

THE AMERICAN ARTIST.

Alphonse Mucha, a Bohemian painter of note, who returns for a second visit to America after many years, says he notes the beginnings of an American art, a plant as yet without flowers. He finds our artists still too much affected by old world culture, still working "with trinkets brought from Europe, uninspired by the "crude drama" of their own soil, the "barbaric panorama of their own back yard."

Doubtless some one will call Herr Mucha's attention to Whitman or our earnest young contemporaries, Sanborn, Lindsay, and Masters. These are buds at least. But the European expects from America something so different from anything in the past that our artists will be put to it to avoid disappointing him. Even our British cousins resent an American's not looking like Buffalo Bill, Jack Hamlin, or Sitting Bull.

But we cannot evolve an art entirely American as Egyptian art was Egyptian or Grecian art Greek. Our art is derivative because America is derivative and can no more escape its past, which runs into all the cultures of the old world, than a child can escape his ancestors. Most national art expressions grew out of something foreign, contributing something national chiefly by way of emphasis, elimination, and extension, as Roman art grew from Greek art. From time to time something novel and purely characteristic, like the Gothic style, is produced, but this is exceptional. But in modern times this is less likely to occur than in the past, because communication has become easy and general, and the tides of influence flow far and wide over national boundaries. The artist is a sensitive plate or he is not an artist. How can Americans insulate themselves against the beauty of the past?

A primitive American art cannot be born because the American people is not primitive or indigenous. In time, doubtless, we shall develop a homogeneousness, a form and coloring drawn from our American environment. But we first must evolve a deeper American nature, something profound in the American soul like the essential quality which makes the French man or woman unlike the Englishman, or German, or Italian, or Irishman, in a sense which analysis very feebly explains. Time, long time, and the experiences of a long national life, its common perils and problems, its common glories and defeats, are necessary to generate and bring it forth. From it may flower great arts, peculiarly its own. We hope so.

Herr Mucha declares that internationalism was sapping the vitality of European art. Internationalism will sap any impulse beginning in America. If, as we believe, an intense Americanism is coming, a national character deeper and stronger than can be born of the superficial associative ties which are a considerable part of our present Americanism, we may hope for an American expression in beauty which shall be a contribution to the culture of civilization, the lasting possession of the race. That is what nationality does, among other useful things, for progress and civilization.

BREEDING TRUE.

The economic considerations of immigration are not the most conclusive. They are important and they are variable. Some regions of the United States might even now be the better for the introduction of a hardy, productive, assimilable people suited to the land and the climate.

National considerations are more important than economic. The United States is engaged in breeding a nation. It needs to watch the strains which it takes into its blood and to make certain that it preserves and does not change its stock.

We have welcomed and do welcome the infusion of virtues from other stocks, but the trend of the United States must be toward homogeneity. Already nearly a tenth of the nation, the Negro population, is not assimilated, and few think that it can be.

No other great nation, with the exception of Russia, has any such problem of population, and Russia is a good example of what happens to a heterogeneous populace under strain.

Any other great nation which had an unassimilable one-tenth and could count aliens by the tens of thousands entering its gates from various quarters of the world would consider that it had a very involved problem on its hands. It would have and the United States has.

We believe that events and prospects indicate an interval of rest for the United States. The United States has been swallowing almost everything and its digestion has been good, but what it needs now, before proceeding further with its task, is a good tonic of nationalism.

To get a rest we ought to close the gates and keep out the aliens. They are in a peculiar state of ferment. They are in the mood of persons fleeing from plague. They want to escape from the infirmities, misfortunes, and evils which they were unable to control or avoid in their own lands. Humanly it would be fine to give them all asylum, but flight is not the cure of their national troubles, and it may be the making of ours.

Nothing can happen better to the world than that the United States be maintained in its integrity of idea and character, breeding and stock, traditions and principles. All that the United States represents is needed in the world, and it is the first duty of the United States to breed true.

Editorial of the Day

IRELAND AND THE UNITED STATES.

[New York Times.]

The terrible events in Dublin on Sunday are like a burst of flame, lighting up the immense difficulties of the Irish problem. On one side we see the darker elements of the Irish agitation—a criminal ferocity displayed in brutal and cowardly assassinations. On the other side English blundering comes into view. It was a blunder to leave English officers unguarded in hotels and lodging houses, where murderers could walk into their rooms at a fixed hour and shoot them down without giving them a dog's chance. It was another blunder, in the lawful and necessary pursuit of the assassins, so to act as to give color to the charge that machine guns had opened fire on a crowd at a game. All the details are not yet precisely known. But the main facts are of the same kind that has been making the heart sick for two years past—the fierce clashing of two races, the malign frustration of every attempt to arrive at a reasonable settlement between England and Ireland.

"The Irish question," wrote Lord Rosebery, "has not passed into history, because it has never passed out of politics." But it has, at least for the moment, passed out of American politics. The presidential election being over, people in this country may now seek to take a calmer and fairer view of the Irish troubles.

In the realm of practical and active help by the government of the United States Irishmen have nothing to hope for. Far from there being a possibility of this country's going to war to free Ireland, there is not even a possibility of diplomatic intervention. The next president of the United States squarely and truthfully declared in the course of the campaign that the question of Irish government was a "domestic" affair of Great Britain, with which we had no right to interfere. It is certain that we shall not.

Americans cannot stand by as uninterested spectators. They have a lively and inextinguishable interest in Ireland, and in her relations to the British empire. They will continue to hope that a way be found, though they do not know what it is, to make the Irish race self-governing and contented. But exactly because they desire this they heartily wish that Irishmen would leave off seeking to enforce impossible demands by savage crimes and would consent to make a fair trial of the enlarged plan of home rule which England is now freely offering them.

Sometimes I wonder if the Parthenon
Was just so perfect when it sparkled new,
Fresh from the Phidian mallet, when withdrew
First from its sides the builders skeleton
And bade astonished Athens look upon

Its beauty with eternity, the dew
Paints it more perfect,—dew and Attic sun.
Like Alexandrian gem your face was cut
In gleaming candor, graven crisp and clean,

No fragrance breathed. I found it faultless, but Love it I could not 'til its classic cold

WHY THIS PREJUDICE AGAINST BREAKFAST?

[From the St. Joseph, Mo., News-Press.]

Park College, Parkville, Mo., has issued invitations to its supporters to a banquet at the Robidoux Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The dinner is given in order to better acquaint the people of St. Joseph with Park college. There will be brief addresses by Mr. Stanton Olinger of New York, and President Frederick W. ROSE REVERY.

Do roses know the love that in us wakes
For them? I fancy so. Perchance they store
It up in us that it may strengthen more
And more the soul. Truly, for their sweet sakes
The throbbing heart with joy and rapture aches,
Beholding them, dew-drenched, beside the door,
Reminding us of old and treasured lore,
From which, it seems, their fragrant beauty breaks,
Aurora-like, in many a far off land.
Till lo! we see them lie on Helen's breast,
Or kiss the lips of Sappho, red as they;
Or see them tossed by Cleopatra's hand
To Antony; or yet behold them rest
Where Khayyam sleeps, dreaming of yesterday.

Sir: Suggestion for a Chicago cabaret: From "The Crime of the Boulevards," a French mystery story, by Jules Claretie:

"A small hall which a few months before had been a common wineshop had been transformed into a lugubrious place. The walls were painted a dead black and were hung with a large number of paintings, scenes from masked balls, gondola parades, serenades, with a balcony scene, some of the lovers' rendezvous of Venice. . . . and in this strange place with its romantic pictures the tables were made in the form of coffins with lighted candles standing upon them; and the waiters were dressed as undertakers' assistants, with shiny black hats trimmed with crape, on their heads.

NEIGHBOR PROTECTING NEIGHBOR.

IN October, 1919, we printed the story of Shorewood, Wis., a little suburban city just on the border of Milwaukee, close enough for the contagion ever present in the great city to step over, but not close enough to be under the protecting wing of that city's health department.

There are some people who live in just that sort of a place who are glad to hear how another town has succeeded. There are a few who remember the story and feel a kindly interest in the plucky little suburb.

Maybe Shorewood discovered a principle. Maybe it only applied one. The principle was that every parent could be depended upon to do everything possible to protect their neighbors, and especially to see that his or her children did not harm the neighbor's children.

They did not make 100 per cent good on that, for the board reports that in "the extreme southwestern section, the section of Edgewood, Cramer and Murray, where the mothers wantonly, almost ruthlessly, permitted whooping cough a few months ago to leap from house to house. It was practically the only blot on a record that otherwise is clean covering a period of more than two years."

The method pursued is simplicity itself. Whenever a school child develops any symptom which might indicate contagion, the child is held at home in the first place or sent home from school to await developments. The children are excluded from school or kept at home on the school teachers' or the mothers' suspicions.

If a child develops a cold, a fever, running of the eyes, cough, or sore throat which in any way suggests contagion, it is kept isolated until the question is settled. In other words, the well children and the schools get the benefit of the doubt.

This plan is scientifically sound, since measles, whooping cough, and, occasionally, other diseases spread broadcast before diagnosis is possible. I am told that the schools of Shorewood do not show a high rate of absenteeism.

The rate of what some would call unwarranted absenteeism due to simple colds, coughs, and sore throats is offset by the few absences on account of measles and other forms of contagion.

The report to the Wisconsin health officers' school from which these data are being taken says: "Just as in industry, the worker should be surrounded by every safeguard on the assumption that he has a right to as many fingers when he leaves the factory as he had when he went in, so, too, have the children a right to return to their mothers at night as well and as free from infection as when they left their homes in the morning."

The Wisconsin state board of health is so certain the plan is making good that it is getting the story of Shorewood to other communities in that state. Small communities in other states might well consider the plan. If trying the plan did nothing more, it would develop community spirit and neighborliness.

BE EXAMINED FIRST.

Mrs. J. M. H. writes: "After seeing Mrs. E. H.'s letter in your column, I ask what is meant by a milk diet? What kind of milk should be taken, how much and how often? Also should any food or water be taken? Like Mrs. E. H., I never have been really sick, but unlike her I am not naturally thin. I am 5 feet 6 inches in height and am now down to 115 pounds, so you can imagine how thin I am. I sleep well, do not work hard, have a fairly good appetite, but continue to lose weight. Can you suggest anything?"

REPLY.

There are a dozen milk diets. Some are employed by those desiring to be thin; some are fattening. You should be examined for the cause for your loss of weight. If none is found proceed as follows: Do not worry; lead a quiet life; sleep nine hours; go to bed regularly at a fixed hour; eat three meals a day. At one meal eat a large bowl of sugared cereal or crackers and milk. Eat such other food as you wish. At bedtime eat another bowl of sugared cereal or crackers and milk, and retire soon thereafter.

LITTLE KNOWN ABOUT THEM.

C. O. L. writes: "1. What is the cause and what is the cure of gravel in the kidneys? 2. Could this trouble cause an irritation of the bladder and excessive urination? I have been examined and no trace of sugar or albumin found."

REPLY.

1. Gravel in the kidney is uric acid thrown out of solution from the newly formed urine. It is present in newly born babies. It is said to be a manifestation of the gouty diathesis. Among the alleged dietary causes is the eating of a diet too rich in meats, glandular organs such as liver, sweetbreads, and kidney. It is stated that the taking of yeast makes for this condition in some people. There is a good deal of speculation and mighty little solid fact when it comes to the cause of gravel. People suffering from gravel are advised not to eat meats. They are advised to eat plenty of potatoes and drink plenty of water.

2. Yes.

EXPLAINS SUDDEN DEATH.

B. R. writes: "A relative of mine died five hours after a perfectly healthy and normal childbirth. She always was sound and there was nothing the matter with her. Soon after the birth she commenced to complain of pain around the heart and being unable to breathe. The doctor said it was pulmonary embolism (it is so stated in the death certificate). Do you not think a piece of the afterbirth must have been left in? Otherwise how could she have died so quickly?"

REPLY.

You cite no proof of retained placenta. During and subsequent to labor blood clots occasionally break away from the pelvic blood vessels and are swept to the lungs, causing pulmonary embolus. This accident may cause the death of an apparently healthy woman in a few minutes. For clots to form in certain veins at this time is normal. The frequency of milk leg shows how easily these clots extend. It is no wonder that one breaks occasionally.

YOU HAVE SAID IT.

M. O. writes: "Young men let soap get into their eyes when they wash their faces. They like to feel 'stoical' and 'manly,' so they do not mind the smart. At most they rub their eyes.

"Can you not say something strong enough to put an end to this practice of letting lye get into the eyes?

"I never saw a girl do it, but boys and men so far as I have observed make it a common practice. It cannot fail to injure the eyes sooner or later. Dr. Casey Wood says never to let anything get into the eyes—not even water—except in emergencies. Nature attends to washing out the eyes."

REPLY.

You have said it. I could not improve on your statement.

MISSING ALLOTMENT.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—[Friend of the People.]—Where can I make complaint about not receiving an allotment that was made out to me in May, 1920, by a man at Great Lakes? He is not stationed there now. MRS. J. C.

Suggest you either write to the allotment section of the bureau of war risk insurance, Washington, D. C., or go to the local war risk insurance bureau, eighth floor Leiter building, and have them investigate your case for you.

AS GOOD AS A LEASE.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I rented a house on April 30, 1920, and was given a written agreement signed by the agent. I have made several repairs, which have cost me over $300. Now he tells me that the house is sold and has given me a thirty day notice to vacate. Doesn't the agreement stand good? The rent has always been paid on the date it was due. M. M.

If your written agreement amounted to a lease, which it probably does, and there was no agreement by which it could be terminated on thirty days' notice, you can hold the premises for the term.

SOLDIER DAMAGES CAR.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A soldier while in Chicago borrowed an automobile, and while using it damaged it to the extent of $150. The garage company that made the repairs is holding the car as security and is attempting to also charge 50 cents per day for storage of the same car.

The soldier is willing to make a voluntary allotment of $15 per month to pay damage claims, but is unable to pay the storage charge.

Request your advice as to the legality of storage charge, and if garage company can refuse settlement by means of $15 allotment. N. M. C.

1. The charge is legal, assuming that it is reasonable in amount.

2. Yes. In general, if a debt is due, the creditor can insist on its payment regardless of installment offers. If you have no assets or income that the creditor can reach, of course he will have to take what you give or go without.

EMPLOY AN ATTORNEY.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is it necessary to employ the services of a patent attorney to secure a patent?

2. Is it absolutely safe to disclose the idea to one?

3. Is there any way of safeguarding the idea before it is intrusted or disclosed to a patent attorney? R. N.

1 and 2. It is advisable to employ a patent attorney to safeguard the patent and retain him for your advice, preferably one who does not advertise.

3. No. We suggest that you write to the commissioner of patents, United States patent office, Washington, D. C. He can furnish you a pamphlet containing general information about patents.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE FALL OF MAN.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Literary Digest in its current number reports the canon of Westminster Abbey as rejecting the historicity of the Bible story of the fall. He is quite right in believing that this story has no place in history. Would that he and all who are pained by his present attitude toward this story would heed Henry Ward Beecher, who said, "No man can know the theology of the nineteenth century who has not read Swedenborg"; or (encouraged by what Phillips Brooks, or Bishop Williams, or Bishop Vincent, or Edward Everett Hale, or William Dean Howells, or Emerson, or Carlyle, or Elizabeth Barrett Browning, or Helen Keller, or some other distinguished man or woman has said in appreciation of Swedenborg and his work) would duly consider what Swedenborg says upon the fall of man.

Swedenborg says that the first seven chapters of Genesis were taken bodily from a more ancient Bible, and that most of what is in the other chapters up to the Twelfth was taken from the same. He says that these early people did not read their Bible as history at all, but that they perceived within its letter spiritual principles and truths which never become obsolete. These early people looked to the Lord as the center of their interests and the source of all that is heavenly. He was represented by the tree in the midst of the garden, of which they might eat. They turned their backs on that tree, so to speak, and began eating of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, when they began trying to learn from experiences in nature, to the exclusion of verbal revelation, what is heavenly. This constituted the fall, and the like of it has occurred many times in the experience of any one of us. If a man today persists in looking to experiences in nature, to the neglect of verbal revelation, for knowledge of spiritual things, he puts the tree of knowledge of good and evil in the midst of the garden, as those early people did when they fell. (Genesis, iii., 3.) The fall of the race extended through thousands of years.

The serpent, its full length next the ground, stands for what in man is lowest, and is appealed to through the bodily senses only. This gives perennial meaning to the story of the children of Israel in the wilderness journey being bitten by serpents (Numbers, xxi.), and to what is said of the serpent casting to the earth the stars of heaven, the stars standing for knowledge of spiritual things. (Rev., xii., 4-9.)

Woman stands for the affectional nature in a human being; man for the intellectual. When you or I fall the serpent (the lower nature) makes its appeal first to the heart. The heart having given its consent, sets about winning the intellect over to the serpent's view. This is what is meant in the Bible story of the serpent persuading the woman to eat of the forbidden fruit, and the woman's giving to the man to eat. (Gen., iii.)

We have touched upon the main points in the story of the fall. Every detail has its inner meaning. The whole of God's word in the Bible (as well where literally true as where not literally true) is a parable, within each jot and tittle of which is spiritual meaning, which is forever true. CHARLES S. MACK.

WHAT THE FILIPINO REALLY WANTS.

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Certainly, Mr. Editor, in the article you wrote the other day about the relations between the United States and the Philippines, you showed that you have a wrong idea of the present conditions in the islands.

According to what you say, the Philippines are a burden to the United States and will be the cause of a new war between Japan and the United States, and, since the Filipinos are now asking for their independence, in order to prevent any further annoyance to your government, it would be better to give the Filipinos what they want.

It is true that the Filipinos are asking for independence, but in what way? That is precisely what you ignored in your article. First of all the Philippines could not be given a complete independence, because then, what about the many American concerns that have invested millions in different industries in the islands? How will they be safeguarded against an attack from a foreign power? Have the Philippines a standing army or a strong naval force to defend the islands against invasion? As you see, these are important facts that you ignore and which are the prime factors in the independence were we to us. In respect to the governme it is almost controlled by Filipinos. The governor-general is but, as Secretary Baker said, the connecting link between the United States and the Philippine The principal branches of the government are in the hands of the Filipinos and the insular treasurer and the insular auditor are also Filipinos. These fact simply mean that the Filipinos have ready stable government. What they are asking now is not a complete independence, but an independence with the protectorate of the United States government.

UNMORAL!

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Yesterday I read with interest the protest of Dr. Willeke to the grand opera singer, Georges Eckaroff, and today the incidents as to his arrival in Chicago and quotation from remarks made by his fellow stars and employes as to the matters in question.

I know nothing of the evidence considered in his conflict with the immigration authorities, and am far from desiring to pose as a moralist in such matters, but I am greatly impressed with the seeming mental attitude of his admirers.

Of his employers, Mr. Samuel Insull is quoted as saying "the box office receipts might be taken as an indication," etc., and Mr. Herbert Johnson, "I do not think a singer's private life is anything to do with his work," and "I do not hold the owner of a State street store responsible for the home life and personal conduct of his employés," etc.

Among his fellow singers I see Miss Mary Garden is "astonished and irritated" and Mr. R. Martin call it "all a reflection of an American era of gain-by-pampy, hectic, sob-sister rot."

The question arises in my mind, and I know it must in many other minds, as to whether we take our moral instruction from the rather chaotic condition revealed of late in stage and film circles, or from leaders of industry and finance, whose opinions are necessarily more or less dependent upon "box office receipts," or from the calmer currents of thought looking out upon the troubled tide of our intense modern life with reflective eyes and feeling that the bars of restraint are lowering, lowering continuously and the contempt for laws, both material and moral, that interfere with modern business and pleasure, more evident. Do not such expressions as quoted above show a sapping of the moral substructure? Are we not lapsing in our moral outlook? Do we grasp its significance?

LET US HOPE SO.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. McCutcheon's literary character, Miss Moriand, in his "The Restless Age," is surely a reflection on her set. Of course Mr. McCutcheon's association with her class has given him an opportunity to familiarize himself with the girl of leisure and he doubtless knows whereof he speaks. Let us hope, however, his Miss Moriand is the exception rather than the rule among her class.

PROSECUTE PARENTS TO CHECK CRIME.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—"A Remedy for Crime," as proposed by Fred L. Tiffany in the morning's TRIBUNE, is all right; except that he doesn't go far enough.

I would make every parent legally responsible for the actions of his (or her) minor children and prosecute the parents for contributing to the delinquency of their children who commit crimes.

Parents would make it their business to know the whereabout of their boys and see to it that they were not allowed to run the streets at all hours of a night, committing holdups, burglaries and various crimes if they knew that a crime committed by their offspring meant a jail sentence for themselves.

I would also prosecute to the fullest extent of the law the parents of any young girl who is attacked late at night when it is shown that she was on the streets at a late hour with the parents' knowledge and without escort.

ANOTHER BOLSHEVIK VICTORY

Gen. Semenoff, the last anti-bolshevik leader in eastern Siberia, has been defeated and is on his way to Japan, it is reported. Semenoff operated between Chita and the Mongolian border. He was a Cossack of rough and bold the Reds at bay for over two years. He was at various times accused of playing Siberia into the hands of the Japanese.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Mary Wollaston" [Bobbs-Merrill], by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"The Captives" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.
"In Chancery" [Scribners], by John Galsworthy.
"Black Bartlemy's Treasure" [Little-Brown], by Jeffery Farnol.
"Woman" [Seltzer], by Magdeleine Marx.
"Harriet and the Piper" [Doubleday-Page], by Kathleen Norris.

NONFICTION.

"Margot Asquith—An Autobiography" [Doran].
"The Sea and the Jungle" [Dutton], by H. M. Tomlinson.
"Letters to a Niece" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Henry Adams.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:

"Mary Wollaston," by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"Caliban," by W. L. George.
"Flappers and Philosophers," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"Steeplejack," by James Huneker.
"Vagabonding Through Changing Germany," by Harry Franck.

"I SHALL neither excuse myself from praise, nor shield myself from blame, but put down the figures as accurately as I can and leave others to add them up." Thus for two volumes, "Margot Asquith: An Autobiography." The autobiography, hinted about as a most indiscreet revelation of social and political secrets, as a bigoted paean of personality is, when it appears, neither indiscreet nor vain in any sense. It is just a chatty, exceedingly charming record of a life which has for many years touched hands with all of the most brilliant of English social and political life, which, rooted in a sturdy Scotch loneliness, flowered in an avidness for people.

With such men as Gladstone as the heroes of her childhood, unmarred by the mixing of her ideal of him with her ideal of the county boss, she grew up with absolutely top notch taste in men and women. She doesn't say that, but she does say that her childhood was lonely except for the distinguished visitors who came to their home, Glen. Her family was opposed politically to the popular sentiments of the neighborhood and therefore was ostracized.

It is my own theory that with only men of achievement to fill her childish horizon she formed the habit of thought and conversation which made of her, even in her young womanhood, a person of distinction. Among her friends—and she seems to have had a genius for friendship with men older than she was—were the hero of her childhood, Gladstone, John Morley, Jowett, Arthur Balfour, John Addington Symonds, Augustine Birrell, Coquelin, Henry James, Thomas Huxley, Sir Alma Tadema, and countless others, all of them sincerely interested in her and to whom she must have given a charming devotion possible only between men and women of the same mental equipment—no matter what their social differences may be.

Her autobiography is frank without being too "clever," too indiscreet. She has told of incidents before unknown, but she has told nothing which could cause the temple of a reputation to tremble.

Her only extremely intimate confidence is the retelling of a scene between herself and the woman who loved Peter Flower—the man she loved—in which the other woman confessed she would run away with Peter Flower, leave her husband and her children, without a second's regret, or, if she could not have her lovef, she would kill herself. Such a pleasant little scene might shock the friends of the "other woman" or jolt her husband a bit—if she still has him, but I suspect that the ones principally concerned are quite dead by this time.

Margot Asquith is certainly not a malicious person in any way. Her gossip is not gossip as we are accustomed to think of it. It is gossip in the fine sense of the word—inside information about important and fascinating events and people.

For sheer relaxation the autobiography is a real prescription. There is something so human about Margot Asquith, something so essentially vivid, so loyal to people and events, that one loses one's own albatross of dullness or redness or boredness with things in general in her untiring eagerness for life.

"The Imperial Orgy," by Edgar Saltus, is, for sheer terrorism and cruelty, a witches' cauldron of words steeped in blood. It is the most horrible book I have ever read because, unlike any of the gilded or dripping horrors of fiction, it is fact. Edgar Saltus, whose pen has long written with the acid corrosiveness of a Borgia kiss, has relived the imperial orgies of Russia. He has written a history of a terror at times even unprintable—and Edgar Saltus can usually veil in esoteric and archaic words what other men think in asterisks and say in silence. Ostensibly it is the history of Russia, with the terror uppermost.

In reality it is a brilliant bit of historical exegesis. From the cumulation of this terror has grown the present terror of bolshevism. With 200 pages of historical pogroms and individual murders there emerge three pages of communist madness.

For the person who gets an emotional thrill from the recitation of horrors "The Imperial Orgy" will be an orgy. There has probably never been packed in a little over 200 pages more nauseating grewsomeness decked in words by an artist. Edgar Saltus is an artist in words—to that no one dare take exception. It is said that he is one of our next president's favorite authors, that two nights before election he took "The Imperial Orgy" to bed with him and reread the whole book without stopping.

The family of August Strindberg and his German translators and publishers have established an annual prize of 3,000 marks to be given for the poem or the best general work written in the German language in behalf of a friendship between nations. Herr Carl Ludwig Schleich, Strindberg's friend, will take charge of the manuscripts and see to the awarding of the prize.

Two of James Branch Cabell's books—which have been out of print—are now reissued in the uniform binding. They are "Cords of Vanity" and "Domnei." "Cords of Vanity" is one of the deftest novels that has ever been written, cosmopolitan in its conception and its execution and its inexorableness. In it are brilliant conversation—really brilliant—and a cynical sincerity, and there is absent from it that irritating atmosphere of the author as the deus ex machina.

The hero is a completely charming cad whose potential "fineness," if there ever was any, even potentially, is strangled by the cords of vanity. He is a clever trickster of life, a jaunty but beloved vagabond of the emotions, a man of delicate sensibilities and no respect for sensibleness. He is a less satiric but no less charming Anatol, a mentally flippant Don Juan, a peculiarly honest Pierrot, who delights in the scarlet circle on his cheek and the mental fancy dress without mistaking it in any wise for a business makeup. He is delightfully unreal—but sincerely so.

"Domnei" also is delightfully unreal, but it has the unreality of a dream, or of an imagined emotion. "Domnei" is Mr. Cabell's conception of idealized love, the unasking, unrewarded, eternal devotion of man to his ideal of woman, an ennobling and beautiful adoration asking only the privilege to adore.

Domnei has been present in literature from the beginning of the records of love. It is Dante's spiritual passion for Beatrice. It is the unsung beauty in much great poetry. It is the kind of love which Conrad writes of—unsatisfactorily to the more gusty minded. It is the love of "Linda Condon"—to mention only two writers and of our own generation.

But that way lies a long article. And this is a literary pellet gayly sugar coated. The coating then: One of the most charming things ever written in a book adorns the first page of "Domnei" presented to—not me, alas! but to a beauteous friend of mine. It says, "To ——, Domnei, from one of its few practitioners."

Walt Whitman has again this fall failed of election to the Hall of Fame at New York university. That is a fact which beggars comment.

"Sweet Rocket" is Mary Johnston's third time and out. Any hopes are dead that may have been harbored in devoted breasts that after "Foes" and "Michael Forth," both steeped in a sort of mystic drug, she would write another "To Have and to Hold." She is writing now about "the great synthesis," "the eternal, including self," in capitals.

"Marie Claire's Workshop," the only book to reach us from Marguerite Audoux since that charming, naïve scrap of maiden thought, "Marie Claire," is exactly like its predecessor—written—how many years ago? It has the sweetness, the simplicity, the unworldliness of "Marie Claire," the childlike honesty which made of that book a sensation so pleasant as still to remain in the heart of those readers who had the gentle happiness of having read it. It is, by the way, one of the easiest books to read in French that I know—the original "Marie Claire," I mean. (I am always being asked what books may be read in French without too serious a strain on our rather tenuous school and college and club French.) The translation of "Marie Claire's Workshop," published by Thomas Seltzer, is an exceedingly good one.

Another bit of French political-literary news: Georges Clemenceau has planned to do much lucrative literary (?) work on his trip to India. No, neither memoirs nor feature stories for the press, nor even novels, but movie scenarios. His "The Strongest," that novel which flickered into prominence for a moment last fall, is already in the movies, and he is now writing a scenario which will be called "Love or Money."

Homer Croy, author of that most delightful of all Adventist stories, "Homer Croy"—although it was written a couple of years ago it is still the favorite among the few who had the good fortune to read it—and also author of the equally delightful "Turkey Bowman," has been chosen to write the article on motion pictures for the Encyclopædia Britannica. His "How Motion Pictures Are Made" is still the classic in its field.

This is a Wyeth year. There are three fascinating books illustrated by him—"The Courtship of Miles Standish," published by Houghton-Mifflin; "Robinson Crusoe," published by the Cosmopolitan Book corporation, and "Westward Ho!" by Charles Scribner's Sons. Of all the pupils of the master, Howard Pyle, Wyeth carries on the Pyle tradition most vividly. His virile, inspirited men, that spot of sunlight throwing into brilliance even the surrounding shadows—is a technique which is even being imitated in the movies lately. Did you know that Maxfield Parrish was a pupil of Howard Pyle? That vibrant cobalt that characterizes him was first used by Pyle.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

DELIGHT IN DISORDER.
By Robert Herrick.

A sweet disorder in the dress
Kindles in clothes a wantonness;
A lawn about the shoulders thrown,
Into a fine distraction;
An erring lace, which here and there
Enthralls the crimson stomacher;
A cuff neglected, and thereby
Ribbands to flow confusedly;
A winning wave, deserving note,
In the tempestuous petticoat;
A careless shoestring, in whose tie
I see a wild civility;
Doth more bewitch me than when art
Is too precise in every part.

GOTHAM BUILDS WHILE CHICAGO MERELY PLANS

New Piers at New York Cost Millions.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—For eleven years Chicago has been sitting and thinking of—but mostly sitting on—the recommendation of its harbor commission for the creation of an inland harbor in Lake Calumet. For four years it has had the legal authority to proceed. In that period it has only obtained agreements to acquire later two-thirds of the property necessary to make a start. It has not even an option on the property requisite for a real industrial harbor.

In the meantime New York has been enlarging, improving, and revamping its harbor until it claims to be the busiest port in the world.

It has a program now of $25,000,000. Of this about $18,000,000 is to be spent on Staten island, off the Jersey coast. This has no connection with Manhattan except by water. More than $7,000,000 is planned for Barren island, out beyond Rockaway beach.

Busy Building Docks.

In some quarters it is intimated that these plans will not be fully carried out, but it is certain that the department of docks is now busy building. At present it has thirty-four contracts for constructions involving an estimated aggregate outlay of $19,110,000. On these $3,538,000 had been paid out before Nov. 10 last.

On the other hand, Chicago's latest activity on harbor construction was the issuance of a nicely printed book on the harbor plan of Lake Calumet. While the Chicago aldermen were reading this printer's masterpiece last July New York was at work.

"Geologists affirm that for a period of some 100,000 years an ice sheet, like that which blankets Greenland today, covered the northern half of our continent," read the Chicago aldermen. "Geologists designate as the Chicago plain, the area of low, flat land, crescent shaped, along the southwesterly shore of Lake Michigan and upon a part of which Chicago was built."

Chicago Reads, N. Y. Works.

While the Chicago aldermen were reading of the glacial movement, the New York department of docks awarded a dozen contracts for piers and sheds and other equipment totaling $5,498,000. And since the aldermen finished reading how nature prepared a site for the Calumet harbor New York has awarded three more dock contracts totaling $482,000.

These fifteen contracts, awarded in about two months, exceed the total cost of the Chicago municipal pier, which was more than two years in building.

It is certain Chicago needs more harbor facilities and if Lake Calumet is not a suitable site, why not discard it and select another location, such as the lake front between Sixteenth and Thirty-ninth streets, which has been urged by the engineers of the federal government. If Lake Calumet is desirable, why not more action?

In New York Murray Hulbert intends to proceed, unless some one stops him, with twelve piers on Staten island. These are to be 1,000 and 1,160 feet in length. Eight will be 125 feet wide, two will be 130, and two others 209 feet, and provision is to be made to have railroad tracks on ten of the piers.

Burglars Get $8,000 Loot in County Jail's Shadow

Skillfully avoiding an elaborate burglar alarm system, thieves entered the haberdashery and clothing store of G. O. Ballin at 427-429 North Clark street early yesterday and escaped with $8,000 worth of suits, overcoats, silk hose, gloves, and other articles. The store, near the corner of Austin avenue, is just across the alley from the county jail.

Treadway Accused of Peirce Murder; Girl Held

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 27.—Peter D. Treadway was formally booked today charged with the killing of Henry T. Peirce. No such action was taken with regard to his girl companion, Marie Phillips, also known as "Boots," who is still merely "detained," as was Treadway until the action today.

GALLI-CURCI HERE WITH WONDER GOWN OF 3 INCARNATIONS

The elevators in the Congress hotel just naturally couldn't budge above a certain floor yesterday. Many guests also "made a mistake" and alighted at this floor. The reason was a woman's golden voice rising in song. Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci had returned to the city and was practicing for the opera.

AMELITA GALLI-CURCI. [Copyright: Matzene.]

"My, I am so busy, and my throat, it is so full of soot," she said. "But the windows are all open and I fill with song. And the dresses—they are all unpacked! Such a place—dresses, dresses everywhere, and not a place to it."

And she proudly displayed costumes that she herself had designed after study abroad.

"This"—holding up a gray chiffon affair with a long, waspy train and a girdle of dull henna color—"this is my prize. I shall introduce it in 'Lakme.' Not once but three times have I developed the theme of this pet of mine."

Sure enough, there was the same gown motif in three distinct incarnations—first in drab gray, for the beggar maid of the first act of "Lakme"; then in black chiffon, the skirt and plaited front panel beaded in gold, blue, and rose, for the second act, and in cloth of gold for the last act, when the beggar maid has a Cinderella-like transformation.

Mme. Galli-Curci studied the costumes of the women of ancient India for the design.

She returned to America Aug. 8 and a successful concert tour has kept her happily busy since Oct. 1. She was particularly proud of the $8,000 house that greeted her in Atlanta Thanksgiving night. She opens her season here Wednesday with "Lucia."

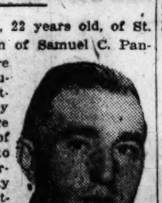
Soupbones Hurled at Her, Says Wife, Seeking Divorce

Mrs. Mary Leon of 3001 Logan boulevard was content to accept the $1 a day which her husband "allowed" for household expenditures without a protest, but when he began hurling soup bones at her head, her wifely patience was exhausted. She explains her aversion to a continuance of matrimonial life longer in a bill for divorce filed against Edwards S. Leon, former owner of the Grand hotel, West Madison and Halsted streets.

SON OF PANDOLFO OF MAIL FRAUD FAME ARRESTED

Youth Thrown in Cell on Bad Check Charge.

A. E. Pandolfo, 22 years old, of St. Cloud, Minn., son of Samuel C. Pandolfo, millionaire automobile manufacturer, convicted a year ago by a jury in Judge Landis' court of using the mails to defraud, was arrested yesterday in the Hotel Atlantic on charges of having passed fraudulent checks.



A. E. PANDOLFO. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Young Pandolfo was arrested by Detective Sergeant Edward Weber on advices from the police of Bowling Green, Ky., who charge that checks amounting to $200 were found to be bad after he had left town.

At the Hotel Atlantic it was learned that young Pandolfo had presented two checks each for $225 drawn on the First National bank of St. Cloud and signed by the boy's father. The hotel had wired the bank for authority to honor them.

Claims It's All Mistake.

Pandolfo, in his cell in the detective bureau, where he is being held pending the arrival of a policeman from Bowling Green, insists that the whole affair is a mistake. His bank account in Bowling Green was attached after he had written the checks in question, and they will be made good tomorrow, he said.

The elder Pandolfo and twelve other directors of the Pan Motor company, including George Heidman and Norman Street, patent attorneys of Chicago, were tried before Judge Landis a year ago on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Mails Used in Scheme.

According to postal inspectors and other witnesses, the company had sold $5 shares of stock in a "future industry" for $10 each, using the mails to advertise their scheme.

[illegible] lasting nine weeks and replete with sensations, the jury brought in a verdict finding Pandolfo, the president of the company, guilty on four counts, but releasing the other twelve defendants.

THREE SLAPS BY WIFE SET FREE JUDGE JACOBS

Because, he charges, he was slapped three times by his wife, Lawrence Jacobs, judge elect of the Municipal court, will receive a divorce, Judge Harry A. Lewis of the Superior court indicated yesterday.

Jacobs told the court it was customary for his wife, Irene, to vent her anger on him by boxing his ears.

During the hearing it developed that Nov. 2 has been an auspicious date in Jacobs' life. He was born, married, elected to the municipal bench, and separated from his wife on that date. Mrs. Jacobs did not contest the suit.

Asks $10,000 Damages of Man Who Wed His Wife

The groceryman was to blame, says Frank Allgood of 4114 Walnut street, for the disruption of the Allgood home and evidence of decreasing affection for her husband on Mrs. Allgood's part. In support of this view of things Mr. Allgood filed suit for $10,000 yesterday against William Holtz, 60 years old, living at 3139 West Thirty-eighth street. Mrs. Allgood recently was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of from one to five years for bigamy. Holtz married her before she obtained a divorce from Allgood.

FOUND OVERCOME BY GAS.

Michael Hughes, 38 years old, was found unconscious early yesterday in a gas filled room at 1450 West Monroe street. He has been despondent because of ill health for several months.

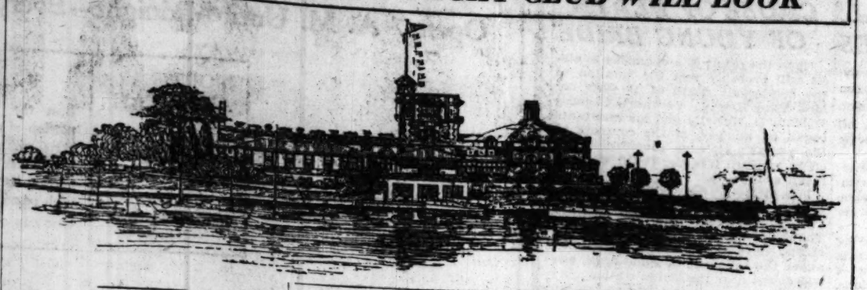
HOW NEW CHICAGO YACHT CLUB WILL LOOK



$250,000 YACHT CLUB GETS SITE IN LINCOLN PARK

Will Have the Second Largest Fleet.

BY AL CHASE.

Lincoln park is to be the site of the new $250,000 home of the Chicago Yacht club. Months of negotiations ended when the Lincoln park commissioners voted to lease two acres to the club for thirty-five years at a nominal consideration, the lease to be operative from next Tuesday.

Out on the point of land on the north side of the entrance of the Lincoln park Yacht harbor, what is claimed will be one of the largest and most complete yacht clubs in the world, is to be erected from plans by Architect A. N. Rebori. Work may start next spring. The present famous old club house in Grant park will be maintained indefinitely.

Commodore Tells Plans.

"It will be the first big step in local yachting lines in twenty years," said Sheldon Clark, commodore of the Chicago Yacht club, president of the Yacht Racing Union of the Great Lakes, and renominated yesterday as club commodore.

"The scope of the club will be extended tremendously by having the new clubhouse and harbor adjoining. The Columbia and Lincoln Park Yacht clubs consolidated with us last May and we now have nearly 1,000 members. With the extension north of Lincoln park boating is going to become more popular than ever and all the lagoons will connect with the yacht harbor and be accessible to the new club.

"We now have the largest fleet of boats of any club outside of New York. We will have to keep the large yachts off Grant park and the smaller boats in Lincoln park. We have 135 yacht owners in the club."

Marine Idea Prevails.

Architect Rebori's plans are the latest in marine architecture expressed in structural building terms. For instance all the stairways will be built with openings like the companionways of liners. The main clubroom will be 40x80, with a promenade 116 feet long. There will be an immense two story octagonal dining room with exterior dining alcoves and sun porches overlooking the water on the east, west, and south.

On the roof there will be an open air dance deck, 100x40. A large tower will have an observation deck to watch races, with a room from which the yachting committee can direct regattas. The kitchen will care for 1,000 guests. There will be a large log room for trophies, etc.

Regular Ticket Named.

The nominating committee of the yacht club last night announced the following ticket for election on Dec. 15: Sheldon Clark, commodore; George O. Clinch, vice commodore; E. M. Railton, rear commodore; Harold Bradley, secretary; Richard Jones, treasurer; directors, Laurence Armour, Albert Y. Gowan, James O. Heyworth, Ogden T. McClurg, Dr. William L. Baum, E. C. Webster, James C. Frey, and L. J. Lanbin.

MAKE DEALER CUT YOUR BREAD PRICE 1 CENT, CITY WARNS

HOUSEWIVES were warned yesterday by Secretary Russell J. Poole of the committee on living costs to insist when purchasing bread tomorrow that the retail price be reduced 1 cent, in conformity with the wholesale cut effective tomorrow.

"Retailers who take more than a cent profit on pound loaves and a cent and one-half profit on twenty-four ounce loaves are robbing the public," Mr. Poole declared. "The reduction to 14½ and 10 cents in the wholesale bread prices should mean a retail price of 16 cents for the large loaf and 11 cents for the small one.

"For years, even when bread was 5 cents a loaf, the regulation profit for the retailer was a cent. With bread at 10 cents the percentage of profit for the retailer is reduced, but in large measure this is made up by the fact that bread comes to the retailer already wrapped.

"Housewives should not let retailers hook them into paying more than 11 cents for the small loaf and 16 cents for the large one."

Mr. Poole would not predict another reduction in bread prices, but it is known that he is preparing to investigate further certain factors which enter into the cost of bread production.

Defies Deputy Sheriffs; Arrested for Having Gun

Otto Gnewuch and Charles Singer, deputy sheriffs, arrested Nich Juffra, 132 West Thirty-first street, yesterday when they went to serve notice on him for the recovery of two autos in his garage. He attempted to draw a revolver, they say. He was booked under the Saddler act.

Lohman Sworn In as Chief Clerk of Election Board

George F. Lohman, for years deputy city collector, was sworn in as chief clerk of the board of election commissioners yesterday. He takes the place of James F. Sullivan.

$7,500,000 BONDS FOR NEW BRIDGES WILL BE SOUGHT

City Engineer Seeks Vote in February.

City Engineer P. S. Combs started work yesterday to put a $7,500,000 bridge bond proposal before the voters at the February election to finance the construction of three new bridges and pay off deficits in the existing bridge bond funds.

"We have old bridges which are in a continual state of vibration and must be replaced in the near future," Mr. Combs said. "Some old bridges are handling on the average a car every twenty-eight seconds and a vehicle every five seconds."

Because of the increase in cost of labor and material since the bonds for five bridges were voted six years ago, $1,136,706 additional will be necessary to complete them, according to Mr. Combs. The estimated deficits in these five funds are: Franklin-Orleans street, $133,000; Wells street, $149,083; Madison street, $433,837; Roosevelt road, $412,344; Addison street, $8,441.

Money for New Bridges.

Mr. Combs includes $257,969 in the proposed bond issue to settle the patent infringement suit brought by the Strauss Bascule Bridge company, as ordered by the city council two months ago.

For new bridges the engineer asks the sum of $4,605,324.53, as follows:

Location.	Cost.
Adams street	$1,300,000.00
Van Buren street	1,300,000.00
South California avenue, bridge approaches	100,000.00
Temporary bridges	205,324.53

In addition $1,500,000 is asked to complete the Roosevelt road improvement. This is in addition to the $412,344 extra requested for the Roosevelt road bridge.

Suggests Other Spans.

In a list of bridges which the city engineer says should be built beginning in 1924 or 1925 Mr. Combs includes a bridge over the Chicago river at La Salle street and bridges across the south branch of the river at Taylor and Polk streets.

Copies of Mr. Combs' recommendations were forwarded to Mayor Thompson and the council finance committee.

Announcement by

Scholle Furniture Company

regarding their Unusual Sale of Fine Furniture

LAST Sunday and Monday we advertised a most remarkable sale of furniture and made a very unusual offer to all those who have bought from us since August 1, 1920.

Here is the offer: "Some who read this advertisement and come to see the goods included in this sale may see articles which they have bought recently and for which they paid more than these bargain figures. To any who have bought since August 1st, 1920, any of the goods which we now offer at these special reduced prices and have paid more than the prices quoted at this sale, we will gladly refund the difference, either in cash or by credit."

With all the care we took we overlooked one point, and now we see how essential that point is: so we explain it here.

Our advertisement gave the impresssion that the articles listed under the advertisement were the only ones included in the great reductions of that sale; this was misleading.

The list contained only about 150 items, while the reduction was applied to 2,000 articles.

If you read the list and found nothing there that you had bought since August 1st, 1920, and therefore concluded that there was no refund due you, you have yet 1,850 articles to look over before you can be sure that you are not one of those who are benefited by this most remarkable offer.

The sale continues. Come in and see if you haven't something due you on recent purchases.

There never was anything just like this sale and this offer; our customers are very appreciative of the spirit we have shown at times when price conditions are so uncertain, and we are glad to have heard many words of confidence and approval.

Mr. G. A. Nehrhood
Head of Horticultural Dept. Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles.

FREE Moving Picture Trip to California Talk on Almonds by Mr. Nehrhood

Kimball Hall, Cor. Jackson Blvd. and Wabash Ave., 2nd Floor, tomorrow evening, Monday, November 29th, 8 o'clock.

The Man Who Knows Almonds Is Now Here

This will be welcome news to hosts of readers of this paper. Mr. Nehrhood, the head of our Horticultural Department, is here for a short period of relaxation before returning to his strenuous work of supervising the almond planting which begins next January. Mr. Nehrhood will explain to you why good almond land in the Paso Robles district is so scarce and can now be found only in scattered localities. He will take you through the almond orchards he has planted. He will tell you about his travels all over the state of California in search of a locality where almonds would yield the biggest, surest, best paying crops, and how he proved through exhaustive tests that Paso Robles offers the ideal combination of soil and climate for almond culture. Here he found the wonderful sea marl adobe soil, so rich in lime and phosphate that it needs no fertilization—so sponge-like in character that it holds moisture throughout long dry spells, and therefore needs no irrigation.

Get it straight from the man who knows all the ins and outs of every horticultural industry in the great state of California—oranges, lemons, figs, walnuts, peaches, apricots, etc., that an ALMOND ORCHARD is by long odds the biggest year-to-year money maker of them all.

ALL ABOARD!

We will have a packed "train" tomorrow—so come early. These moving pictures vividly portray the many wonderful scenes of interest between here and California—the Grand Canyon—the Painted Desert—the vast plains of the great Southwest—pictures of Lo, the poor Indian, as he pursues his simple, primitive life—the snow-capped peaks—the orange, lemon and fig groves as we enter southern California—the hustling city of Los Angeles—the magnificent flower bordered drives of beautiful Pasadena—surf bathing at Long Beach, Coronado, Venice—a motor trip along the famous El Camino Real, pictures of the old missions—the wonderful Yosemite and PASO ROBLES!

If you are interested in an opportunity that means big money-making and a property constantly increasing in value—don't fail to come to Kimball Hall tomorrow evening. It will be more than well worth while.

Inasmuch as these pictures and the lecture have little or no interest for children, parents are kindly requested not to bring them if it can possibly be avoided. We wish to make sure of having a seat for every person to whom this proposition is of real interest.

Paso Robles Almond Photo Book to Everybody

To everyone who attends tomorrow night we will present a copy of this beautifully illustrated book. It is profusely illustrated with photographic reproductions of the almond growing industry in the Paso Robles district and the scenic wonders of California. By all means attend this lecture if you can. If you find it impossible, call at our office at your convenience or send us your name and address—a postal will do—and we will mail to you a free copy of the book.

Call at Our Offices—Special Exhibits—Open Evenings

Come to our offices, get acquainted—you will not be pestered by salesmen when here. Open Monday and Wednesday evenings, Saturday afternoons—any evening by special appointment. Call and see beautiful panoramic views of Almond Orchards in different stages of development; panoramic views of our Paso Robles Townsite; a wonderful painting of Moro Bay; also one of the finest paintings of the State of California ever produced; exhibit of special products from our own Orchards, different varieties of Almonds, samples showing the Sea Marl mixed in the adobe soil and many other interesting things. Attend the Lecture tomorrow if possible—come to our offices any time at your convenience.

PARTY LEADERS PLAN TO ELECT NEW COMMITTEE

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Passage by the city council of the new fifty ward apportionment ordinance — now scheduled for next Wednesday—is to be followed immediately by a movement to secure an emergency act from the approaching session of the state legislature that would authorize the election of new political county committees at the spring elections.

Tentative agreement to this effect was reached at the West Baden political conference ten days ago, so far as the city hall Republicans are concerned. The Brundage-Deneen Republicans have determined, without serious objection, to go along with the proposal.

Assent of the Democratic county organization, probably controlling enough house votes at Springfield to stop an emergency act, remains to be secured. Feelers that have been put out among downstate legislative leaders indicate that the legislators from country districts will go along with any proposal agreed to by the Cook county politicians.

Both Factions Still Claim Control.

The city hall and the anti-Thompson Republican forces each contends that it holds actual control of the "old" county committee, revived by the Supreme court by the Fox case opinion. The city hall makes the further contention that the "new" committee is the legal body and that the Fox case is not decisive. This situation, coupled up with changes in factional alignments as a result of the recent election, tends to make and early general agreement for a fresh election quite possible. The proposition would require the election of fifty ward committeemen in Chicago.

Speakership Attracts Attention.

Legislative politics will begin to warm up this week, and a definite start in the speakership contest is anticipated. Springfield is to be the gathering point of politicians who will watch the constitutional convention as it works through the article that would restrict Cook county's legislative representation.

It is now believed that David E. Shanahan will become an active candidate for reelection as speaker, and there are surface indications that Governor Elect Small and the incoming state administration will not be disposed to place serious obstacles in his way. William P. Holaday of Vermilion county and Homer J. Tice of Menard county thus far have been making the most active campaigns for the gavel.

Governor Elect Small is scheduled to arrive in Springfield Tuesday afternoon, and may remain during the greater part of the week. He has indicated a desire to avail himself of Gov. Lowden's offer of help in getting ready to assume his office.

The city hall forces in Chicago will have a busy week assigning the minor appointments that come to them as a result of their cleanup in the November election.

The official statement was made in city hall sources that no important places have been assigned and that none will be determined until next Monday, when the newly elected county officials take office.

COAL SUPPLY IS NEARLY NORMAL, I. C. C. DECLARES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 27.—Because of the improved coal situation the interstate commerce commission removed today, effective Monday, all orders giving priority to coal movements.

"We are convinced that the emergency which prompted the authorization of these rules has in large measure passed," the commission's order said.

All special priority orders giving preference to coal moving to certain territories and to certain classes of consumers, such as public institutions, had been removed before issuance of the order today.

There remained only the general order requiring priority in loading and movement of coal in all territories east of the Rocky mountains.

HURTS FROM FALL FATAL.

John H. Martin, 75 years old, of 170 Forest avenue, River Forest, died in his home yesterday of injuries suffered when he fell in his home several weeks ago, fracturing his left hip.

CHEMIST SEEKS CAUSE OF DEATH OF YOUNG BRIDE

Upon the result of a chemist's analysis will probably rest the solution of the mysterious death of 19 year old Mrs. Mary Koglin. Coroner's Chemist William D. McNally and his assistants began an analysis of the contents of the woman's stomach yesterday in an effort to learn whether death was the result of a poison.

Mrs. Koglin, the bride of three months of Harry Koglin, 1450 Webster avenue, quarreled with her husband Thanksgiving afternoon and left the house. Several hours later, apparently under the influence of some drug, she was found near the Union station. She was taken to a police station, where she told a hazy tale of an attempt on the part of two men and a woman to attack her; of $900 in her stocking; of a man called "Nick" who gave her root beer with three brown pills in it; and of her escape.

The police, after listening to her story, took her to her home, but a short time later they were notified that she was having convulsions. She died at the psycopathic hospital.

NORTH AMERICAN SALAD DRESSING RECIPE No. 1

(Watch for No. 2 Next Sunday)

Mayonnaise

Beat the yolks of 2 eggs; add small portion of olive oil beating it with fork; keep adding small portions of oil until it becomes thickened. Then add small portion lemon juice or vinegar. Season with paprika, pepper and salt.

One cup of oil sufficient for 4 portions.

Calves Liver and Bacon 35c
Half a head of Lettuce with Roquefort Cheese Dressing.....35c
Half Lobster (cold)....45c
Fried Frogs Legs with Tartar Sauce.....50c
Bottle Certified Milk...15c
Chicken Salad with Mayonnaise Dressing 50c
Pumpkin Pie (big cut) 15c

Dine here and find out. Its the only way you can know.

For after theatre suppers there is no place better than the North American. It's a beautiful and comfortable place to dine—the food can't be beaten and the prices are low. We suggest Half a Lobster at 45c or Half Dozen Fried Oysters at 35c or Fried Frogs Legs with Tartar Sauce, 50c.

As a matter of fact there are only two things you want from any restaurant—good food at fair prices. If you wish you can demand service. It may be poor, and often is, but you can get it. But if you insist on useless frills you must pay for them. And service is one of the useless frills which has pushed food prices up.

The North American Restaurant is operated on the Common Sense plan. Costly and useless service has been eliminated and you serve yourself. The result is our prices are lower than ever and we have not cut quality nor the size of portions the least bit.

You can't get better food anywhere no matter what you pay.

It is the high class restaurant it always was. You dine at your own table, which is covered with snowy white linen, and are provided with silverware which glistens with cleanliness. The only difference is you now serve yourself and the prices are lower.

For 75 cents we will cook before your eyes a great big juicy tenderloin steak with mushrooms—not the usual filet mignon most restaurants serve, but a great big juicy steak. You know what other restaurants charge—about $1.25 for a filet mignon alone. And our steak is bigger and tastes a lot better.

And with that steak we suggest one of our big mealy, steaming hot baked Idaho potatoes, which costs only 15 cents.

Why don't you find out for yourself just how good the food at the North American is, and how reasonable the price? We are open from 7 a. m. until midnight.

MA'S CHICKEN COMBINATION

Consisting of a whole breast of milk fed chicken (all white meat) breaded, cream gravy, bacon, candied sweet potatoes and green peas in cream; at 85 cents (75 cents for all dark meat) is as good a dinner as you can get no matter what price you pay.

It is served every day from 11 A. M. until midnight.

PRICES DROP TO MARK SET IN ARMISTICE WEEK

Price What They Were Before the War.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

By way of tackling tumbling prices and how far they have jackrolled Old Man H Cost—the old boy is still able to waddle around.

Up to Nov. 1 the effect of the downward movement was to move the clock back just one year.

Wholesale commodity prices—they are more reliable barometer than retail prices because less jumpy—for October, 1920, were just about on the same general level as in October, 1919. The weighted index number of the bureau of labor statistics, in which each commodity has an influence proportionate to its importance in the country's markets, shows:

Prices for 1913 equal 100.

Oct. 1919, 223; May, 1920, 272; Oct., 1920, 225.

Thus the recession knocked 18 per cent off prices between May and October. This just about snatched off the collar which had been put on high prices during the winter and left us where we were a year ago, or about 25 per cent higher.

Prices have kept on dropping all through November. Estimating that they have fallen this month at the same rate as last month, it would indicate a general wholesale index Dec. 1 of about 205. This would correspond roughly to the price level of the armistice period. In November, 1918, the index stood at 206.

Double Before War Level.

In other words, the general price level, roughly speaking, now is somewhat more than double that of the prewar year, 1913, and somewhat above that of armistice time.

Great variation is seen in the advancement by groups. Comparing the bureau's Nov. 1 figures with those of earlier months, we find:

Prices of farm products have been shoved back where they were before we entered the war in April, 1917.

Clothing, food and metals have receded in wholesale price to the level of November, 1918, the armistice period.

Building materials are as high as last March; fuel is as high as ever.

At the end of October building materials were higher than any commodity group, with the one exception of house furnishings. They were more than three times as high as in 1913, in contrasted with food which stood slightly more than double the 1913 average.

How Prices Fluctuate.

Here is an illuminating table compiled from the wholesale weighted index numbers of the bureau of labor statistics. It is worth more than a casual glance. It shows the peak prices for each group in the period since 1916, the price Nov. 1, and the per cent decrease; thus, farm products had an index of 182 Nov. 1, as against a high index in April of 246. This was a drop of sixty-four points or 26 per cent. It left the price only 82 per cent higher than that of 1913.

The numbers of wholesale prices, by group of commodities, compared. [1913 equal 100.]

	Peak price.	Nov 10 price.	P. C. dec.
Farm products, April, 1920	246	182	26
Food, etc., May, 1920	287	204	29
Cloths and clothing, March, 1920	356	257	28
Fuels and products, July, 1917	257	184	29
Metals and metal products, May, 1920	341	313	8
Building materials, Oct. 1917	252	216	14
Chemicals and drugs, Sept., 1920	284	282	*
House furnishings, Sept., 1920	371	371	†
Miscellaneous, June, 1920	247	229	7
All commodities, May, 1920	272	225	18

*Less than 1 per cent. †No change.

U. S. Decreases Largest.

The adjustment is worldwide, but the recession has been fastest in the United States. The Statist's index numbers for the United Kingdom, a continuation of Sauerbeck's figures, just from London yesterday. Compared with American prices, they show: From September to October the general wholesale price level commodities declined 7 per cent in the United States and 5.5 per cent in Britain. Compared with a year ago, the October, 1920, level was higher than that of October, 1919, by 1 per cent in the United States and by 7 per cent in England. On Nov. 1 the commodity price level as compared with that of June, 1914, was 135 per cent higher in America and 196 per cent higher in England.

During October in the United States farm products receded 13 per cent from the September level and foods fell 8½ per cent. Clothing and cloths came next with a drop of 7½ per cent from the level of the preceding month. If the fall in clothing in November has been at the same rate as in October, it would bring the index approximately to the average level for clothing for the year 1918.

RICHBERG QUIT, THEN CHANGES MIND; WANTS PAY

Donald R. Richberg, special attorney for the city in gas litigation matters, presented his resignation to the council gas litigation committee yesterday. He asserted that the failure of the city to pay his bills and "lack of coöperation from city officials" was responsible for his action.

A half hour's persuasion on the part of members of the committee resulted in Mr. Richberg's decision to withdraw his resignation temporarily to give the committee a chance to iron out his troubles.

"I have received no pay from the city since last February," Mr. Richberg said. "I have few clients because people think I can do no outside work with the city's work on my hands."

Mr. Richberg predicted that should Judge Torrison in the $10,000,000 rebate case, decide for the city the company will reorganize to evade payment of the rebates.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson lost none of his composure when he heard of Mr. Richberg's resignation threats.

"Yes, I have a copy of his letter, but I have not bothered to read it yet," he said. "I'll get around to it later."

NEW YORK STOPS RATE INCREASES BY COURT WRITS

New York, Nov. 27.—All railroads operating in this state have been restrained from raising their intrastate rates next Monday. The injunctions were issued by Supreme Court Justice Cropsey late last night.

In two orders the roads are instructed to show cause why the injunctions should not be continued pending trial of an action for a permanent restraint of the lines from charging higher rates than those in effect prior to May 28, 1918. The state claims war powers by which rates were increased above that limit have expired.

Will Press the Fight.

The first order is returnable next Monday in Brooklyn, the second Saturday, Dec. 4, at Kingston, N. Y.

Attorney General Newton says the state will fight "until the Court of Appeals or the United States Supreme court passes upon the vital questions raised in the pending proceedings, and the state is given an opportunity to test the recent order of the interstate commerce commission."

Illinois to Fight Rates.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 27.—Following the interstate commerce commission order for the raising of Illinois passenger rates to the interstate level, Attorney General Brundage said today:

"We shall file a bill for injunction in the federal court to restrain the railroad companies and the interstate commerce commission from putting into effect the fare of 3 6-10 cents on intrastate travel. If the federal court should refuse to grant the injunction, the case will be promptly appealed to the Supreme court of the United States.

GAS LEAK KILLS MAN.

John Schneck, 52 years old, of 1959 Osgood street, a laborer, was found dead asphyxiated by gas in the kitchen of his home yesterday. A gas inspector for the Peoples Gaslight and Coke company found the body when he went to the house to repair a leak.

HAS READ THE TRIBUNE FOR SIXTY-TWO YEARS

Joseph Dell of 200 North Mason avenue has been enrolled in the "oldest TRIBUNE reader" class. He is 94 years old and has read the world's greatest newspaper for sixty-two years. Mr. Dell came to Chicago in 1858. He thought he had worked long enough when he reached the age of 90, so he retired from the drug business. He was at that time the oldest druggist in Chicago. Mr. Dell has one daughter, Mrs. Emma Clarke; two grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, and seven great-great-grandchildren.

WOMAN'S PURSE IN BLOOD POOL POINTS TO MURDER

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 27.—A woman's purse was found in a pool of blood near the street railway tracks in Fifteenth street, on the eastern outskirts of the city. There was a trail, as if a body had been dragged twenty feet from the tracks. These were the only clews in a mystery which the police today are striving to solve. Thus far no body has been found.

A slip of paper in the purse contained the address "86 Continental building, Washington, D. C.," on one side. On the reverse was written "R. Terry, former civil service examiner." A card bearing the name "W. L. Reinert Clothing company, 40 Gallia street," also was among the contents of the purse. There is no Gallia street in Baltimore.

FIRE CHIEF DIES IN ATTEMPT TO RESCUE HIS MEN

Clyde Spencer, chief of the fire department of East Chicago, died a hero yesterday. Smoke and fumes he inhaled while seeking two of his men he believed to be trapped in a burning building at 1407 Olcott avenue, caused his death a few hours after he was taken to his home.

Pipemen Charles Schilling and Lieut. Ray McBride started into the front hall of the burning two story frame building at the Olcott avenue address. They disappeared in the smoke. Chief Spencer waited a few minutes for them to appear and when they did not he started in after them.

Presently the lieutenant and pipeman appeared.

"We're safe, chief," they cried.

There was no answer. They headed a second rescue party. Burned and half-suffocated, the chief was found lying on the floor. He had been overcome by the fumes and flame.

When revived he insisted on going back to the firehouse. An hour later he collapsed.

MORE DEATHS LIFT 1920 AUTO TOLL TO 533

Glen View Undertaker Is Crushed Under Car.

Automobile Killings in Chicago in 1920, 533

Three more names were added yesterday to the growing list of deaths from automobile accidents, bringing the total for the first eleven months of 1920 to 533. The total deaths in 1919 was less than 500.

The three persons killed yesterday were Edwin Melzer, 45 years old, an undertaker of Glenview, Ill.; Aloysius Gilbride, 33 years old, of Cleveland, O., and Edward Dudak, 14 years old, 2959 South Throop street.

Melzer's body was found pinioned under his automobile, which overturned a short distance from Glenview. A daybreak Benjamin Cole, a farmer, noticed the overturned car in front of his home and investigation revealed the body of the undertaker under the steering wheel.

Sightseer Meets Death.

Mrs. Melzer told the police her husband had left home Friday evening in the machine, intending to take it to a local garage for repairs. When he failed to return, she felt uneasy, but attended waiting until Saturday before notifying any one of his absence.

Gilbride died yesterday of injuries received last Wednesday, when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by another machine at Fullerton avenue and Lake Shore drive. A number of other persons were injured. Gilbride was the guest of John Weber, president of the Imperial Piano and Player company, who was driving him around the city to show him the sights. At Fullerton avenue a machine driven by Frank Walters, a chauffeur for A. McCord, 122 South Michigan boulevard, is said to have crashed into their machine, throwing it up against a lamppost and causing the gasoline tank to explode. Mr. Fisher was severely burned, while Gilbride, in addition to being burned, suffered a fracture of the skull.

Miss Thelma Hunter and Miss Anna Wilson, maids in the McCord home, who were riding in the car driven by Walters, also were injured when thrown from the car.

Crushed Under Truck.

Dudak was crushed beneath a motor truck driven by Benjamin Bolotin, 6757 South May street, at Van Buren and Halsted streets. The driver is being held pending the inquest.

Charles A. Erbe, 70 years old, a florist, 140 Center street, was injured when struck by an automobile at Belmont avenue and Stockton drive in Lincoln park. The driver, who gave his name as McKenzie, said he was a chauffeur for J. H. Benjamin, 3942 Pine Grove avenue. The address is a vacant lot.

L. E. Aldis, 53 years old, living at the Commodore apartments, Broadway and Surf streets, sustained internal injuries when an automobile struck him in front of his home. The driver sped on. Mr. Aldis is road manager for the Chicago Portrait company, 509 South Wabash avenue.

Charles B. Willey Dead; Well Known Lumberman

Charles B. Willey, well known lumberman, son of the late Cameron L. Willey, died of heart disease yesterday morning while on a hunting trip at Hickstone Camp, Liverpool, Ill.

Mr. Willey was born in Bellevue, Pa., but lived the greater portion of his life in Chicago. He was 57 years old and was president of the C. L. Willey company.

He was a member of the Midlothian, South Shore Country, and Illinois Athletic clubs, Olympian Fields, and the Mystic Shrine.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Stella E. Willey. Funeral will be private from the family home, 220 East Fulton place.

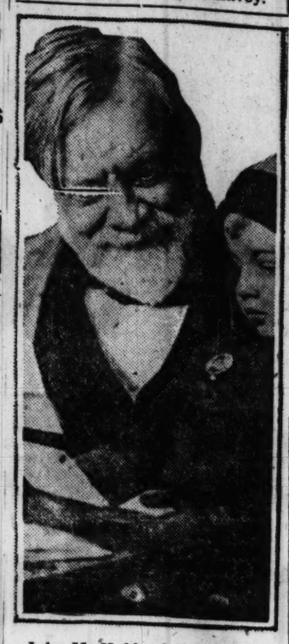
SANTA'S DEPUTY

Former Assistant Postmaster Who Has Been Restored to Job as Kris Kringle's Envoy.



John M. Hubbard and one of his little friends.

Marine Emblem to Honor Deeds of Mrs. Fernald

In commemoration of the services rendered to the marines in Chicago and overseas by Mrs. Bessie Swift Fernald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Swift of Lake Forest, who died several weeks ago in a hospital in London, an engrossed emblem will be presented to her parents.

Funds for the memorial, which will consist of a framed parchment bearing the gold and black emblem of the marines, and the words, "In grateful and loving recognition of the services of Mrs. Bessie Swift Fernald to the marines in France and in Chicago," were provided by 241 marines decorated last Tuesday with the fourragere, their friends and relatives, and the friends and relatives of forty gold star marines.

Elmhurst Physician Dies on Health Quest in South

Dr. Frederick H. Bates, one of the best known citizens of Elmhurst, and a practicing physician there for more than forty years, died yesterday in Biloxi, Miss., where he was trying to recuperate his health. He retired from practice last January. Dr. Bates was a civic leader, being at various times a member of the school and library boards.

CHICAGO SANTA BACK ON JOB AS CHILDREN'S ALLY

J. M. Hubbard Not Too Old for Kris Kringle.

John M. Hubbard can't serve Uncle Sam as assistant postmaster of Chicago any longer because the civil service experts say he "is too old," but he can serve Santa Claus as the latter's chief representative just as long as he wishes.

Santa made this plain yesterday when he opened headquarters in the postoffice and put Mr. Hubbard in charge, with instructions to prepare for Chicago's biggest and merriest Christmas.

And Deputy Santa Hubbard is obeying orders. He learned to do that during a lifetime of service as assistant postmaster. In fact, that is one reason the headquarters were not opened sooner. Mr. Hubbard was waiting to be officially appointed as Santa's chargé d'affaires.

Santa Recalls Him.

When he left his desk in the postoffice on Aug. 20, forced out of the federal service by the civil service retirement law, he was likewise ousted from his position on Santa's staff. For several months it was doubtful whether he would be able to serve this Christmas as Chicago's "official Santa Claus."

Postmaster William B. Carlile removed the doubt yesterday.

"Of course we want him to come back and fill the place he held so long," the postmaster said. "We're counting on him. What would the kiddies do without their Santa Claus? The civil service law has no authority over Kris Kringle."

Mr. Hubbard was only waiting for Mr. Carlile's decision. Even though he will not receive a penny for his work, he's going back to the old job for the children's sake.

He's on the Job, Kids.

He is expecting hundreds of them to visit him at the postoffice, as they have each Christmas before. He's hoping for hundreds of letters to Santa Claus and promises they'll be answered. He will find some "Good Fellow" for every child, he says.

So today the old familiar atmosphere of Christmas giving and service will brighten the office of the assistant postmaster.

Artillery Brigade Head to Be Guest of the First

Brig. Gen. Henry D. Todd Jr., who commanded the 58th field artillery brigade overseas, will be the guest of the 1st field artillery, Illinois national guard, at an informal reception in the armory, 234 East Chicago avenue, next Thursday evening. The 58th brigade was the Illinois artillery unit, and all officers and men of the organization are invited.

A Certified Reduction Sale

33⅓% on every piece of Furniture

25% to 33⅓% on every Rug

We are not trying to dispose of shop-worn or mismatched pieces that nobody wants, but have reduced every piece of Furniture and every Rug in our store. All of our stock is always fairly and honestly priced and these radical reductions are equally honest. The usual Richardson Guarantee of Satisfaction goes with each purchase. The reason for this sale is that we wish to reduce our stocks before inventory.

In connection with this sale, we have requested William Castenholz & Co., a nationally known firm of certified public accountants, to examine our records, and their findings presented in their letter reproduced below will make very interesting reading.

This is to certify that we have examined your purchase and sale records and we further certify that, in our opinion, the reduction of 33-1/3% from the original prices of your entire stock of Furniture, represents a bonafide reduction without any mark-up for purposes of a special sale. We find many pieces reduced more than 33-1/3%.

We also certify that we have examined your cost and selling prices of Rugs and find that the present prices represent radical reductions from previous selling prices. In many cases these reductions are below your actual invoice cost.

Yours truly,

ECKERSALL PICKS BIG TEN ALL-STARS

HERE ARE STAR SUBURBAN PREPS OF GRID SEASON

Five Oak Parkers Given Places of Honor.

LOCAL PREP GAMES

CHICAGO LEAGUE—HEAVYWEIGHTS.
Englewood, 41; Senn, 0.
Harrison, 14; Austin, 7.
Lane, 14; Lindblom, 6.
Hyde Park, 14; Crane, 0.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Team play on the Oak Park High school eleven was so highly developed during the season just closed, that every man on the team might be called a star in the Suburban league. On the other hand, there may have been many an individual star in the other teams, especially the weaker ones, whose work didn't stand out prominently because of lack of support. Consequently it should not be surprising that in sifting the material of the whole league for an all star aggregation, five members of the champion Oak Park outfit find places.

FULL BACK WEINECKE [New Trier].

The top notcher of the all stars is Herbert [Tige] Steger of Oak Park, who performed at fullback and did sensational open field running, place kicking, goal kicking and strong defensive playing in the championship battle with New Trier Friday.

Star in Any Position.

Steger is given the honor of captaining the team, and because there is another star fullback in the league, Steger is moved to halfback. He would be moved to any position and undoubtedly be a star.

His running mate is McIlwain of Deerfield, one of the fastest and strongest halfbacks in the county. There were a lot of other splendid backs, but none quite up to the Deerfield youngster except Steger. Bartelman of New Trier and Smith of Evanston did such gallant work that they are placed on the second team.

Weinecke didn't perform quite up to his standard in the final game, but his play at fullback all season was the principal reason why New Trier was a contender for the title. He deserves the honor on the all-stars. Parella of Deerfield was another strong ...e plunger.

Heile for Field General.

For quarterback, Heile of Oak Park, ... by a comfortable margin over all ...als. He displayed good generalship ... running the team, was a splendid ...an in running interference and sure ...n punts. Cary, a lad of good size and speed, performed well for LaGrange, and Rand of New Trier deserves mention.

Carpenter of Oak Park and Schlacks of Proviso are placed at end positions. The former appeared to be the class of the league, and seldom allowed a rival to get around him. Schlacks is a trifle light, but speedy and sure.

Line material in the Suburban league wasn't equal in class to the back field men. The tackle positions are given to Abbott of Oak Park and Bolan of Deerfield, both of whom stand out a bit above all rivals, with the exception of Kerr of New Trier, who because of his ability, has been moved from tackle to a place as guard.

Baker and Kerr Guards.

Other tackles who showed well were Lewis of Oak Park, Kadlec of Evanston and King and Knott of Evanston. The latter two were out much of the time because of injuries. For a mate to Kerr at guard, none could be better than Baker of Oak Park. Procter of Deerfield and Follett of Proviso deserve places on the second team.

The center position is given to Brooks of Bloom, with Kennedy of La Grange a close rival. Both were sure on passing and powerful men on defense.

COLONEL'S WIFE FALLS DEAD AT ARMY-NAVY GAME

New York, Nov. 27.—While entering the grandstand before the Army-Navy game today, Mrs. Mary Wilcox, wife of Col. Cornelius De Witt Wilcox, professor of modern languages at the military academy, was taken ill and died before reaching her box.

Mrs. Wilcox, who was accompanied by her husband and several friends, complained of pain as the party was caught in a jam ascending the grandstand stairs. She suddenly collapsed and upon the arrival of an army physician was pronounced dead.

Col. Wilcox, one of the popular members of the academy faculty, left the field with the body.

EATON-KAISER WIN BIKE HONORS

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Ray Eaton, a product of Elizabeth, N. J., and Harry Kaiser, born in the Bronx, and now resident in Newark, jumped into the cycling hall of fame tonight when they carried off the premier prize in the international six day bicycle race in the Twenty-second Regiment armory. The victorious pair finished with 836 points.

In the Wake of the News

FORWARD PASSING.

WHETHER forward passes—legislated into an effective offense in an effort to open up football after the adoption of the ten yards in four downs rule—have not become too predominant a factor in the modern gridiron game, probably will be considered by the rules committee this winter. Percy Haughton, former Harvard coach, already has taken up the cudgels for restriction.

The question is not whether there should be a reversion to the old time monotonous line plunging, but whether the ground gained by forward passes and the opportunity therefor is not out of all proportion to the possibility of gains by any other means.

The forward pass has been such a factor in the attack of all successful elevens this fall that coaches undoubtedly will give more and more attention to its development and variation.

Haughton's suggestion is that a blocked forward pass behind the line of scrimmage becomes a free ball, just like a blocked kick or a fumble. This, of course, would force the offensive eleven to give more protection to its forward passer and reduce the number of players eligible to receive, or interfere for the receiver of, the pass.

Eckersall and other western officials long have favored such a restriction. With this exception, most of us casual observers would like to see the rules left as they are for at least another season.

Bolshevik Poker.

The Wake, while never possessing an uncanny skill in our national indoor game, always has felt impelled to "move in" when blessed with four aces.

This was our attitude when some of our Evanston friends and neighbors granted us a seat as a knight of the round table where bolshevik poker with the one eyed Johns wild was the vogue.

Now we have not such unbounded confidence in four aces.

MARKET LETTER.

WHEN stocks rebounded on Monday after their violent decline of three weeks, it looked like an application of emergency brakes, but with the machine in no condition to go at once into high speed. The market is not a self-starter and there is considerable cranking to be done before stepping on the gas.

Stability around this level would be satisfactory temporarily to those who are still among those present. Further decline, even in the face of easier money, would not surprise many shrewd observers (observers unquestionably are shrewder than participants), but even some of our best little pessimists feel the bourse has done more than its share in deflation and that stocks are a purchase on a scale (grocery scale, not coal scale).

Crucible continued to melt values. Booth Fisheries suffered another bite. Sin-clair was a crime. Gen. Motors, dangerously near a powder magazine, according to rumor, reflected improvement when it became part of a powder charge. Montgomery's Ward did better in a retail day nursery.

While it may not be time to push any one rudely out of the way in the rush to purchase, there's more elbow room to stand in line now than there will be later, especially if you take your lunch along.

IT'S OUR NAVY FOREVER TODAY; BEATS ARMY, 7-0

Middies Are Triumphant in Thrilling Spectacle.

COLLEGE SCORES

U. of Alabama, 40; Case, 0.
Navy, 7; Army, 0.
Boston college, 30; Georgetown, 0.
Dartmouth, 28; U. of Washington, 7.
Idaho, 10; Gonzaga, 7.

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—A large and turbulent slice of this nation's population, numbering, to be inexact, something like 48,000, gathered at the Polo grounds this afternoon to watch the future defenders, on land and sea, of American prestige come to grips in the fratricidal strife of their annual gridiron battle.

BOB FOLWELL [Navy Coach].

The vast crowd saw a thrilling game played under a gray sky upon a soggy field. It saw much inferior football and a bit of superb play as the army and navy elevens charged their ways through three turbulent scoreless periods.

Finally, it saw the middies, fired with desperation by the approach of the journey's end, crack the opposing line to bits in the final quarter and sweep behind the cadets' goal posts for the victory that was, for the time being, the most coveted thing on earth.

Bedlam a Quiet Spot.

The goal was presently added to the touchdown by a boot that wavered not in a din surpassing bedlam, and the score was put at 7 to 0, where it remained until the final whistle ended the last fluttering Army hopes.

The throng roared its congratulations and its compliments to the warriors from Annapolis when their final gingery dash at the eleventh hour—or, rather, at the fifty-fourth minute—crowned the carefully developed machine of Folwell with all the joys that were provided for the occasion. Not one of the civilian neutrals who made up the great majority of the gathering was glad to see gloom descend upon the trim, fine sportsmen from West Point. Yet nobody could refrain from sipping from the fountain a frenzied joy which deluged the massed middies in the southern stands.

Series Now Is Tied

Annapolis wanted this game and had ent northward all that was available and all that was necessary to get it. The Naval academy was peculiarly eager, because victory meant a tie in the long series between the teams, extending, with few lapses, from 1890 to the present year of grace. Eleven games each is now the record.

In the third quarter the Army began to slip despite valiant and spirited efforts on the part of its wearied athletes. As the period drew toward a close the middies, getting the ball on the cadets' 46 yard line after a lofty but short Army punt, began a series of steam hammer attacks on the line that landed the ball on West Point's 27 yard line as the whistle sounded.

Army Hope Dies Hard.

At the outset of the final period Koehler, Conroy, and then Koehler again stabbed deep into the wavering, yawning Army line, the latter taking the ball on a criss-cross run from Noyes and whirling over for the points that made the angels envy the bliss of the middies. King kicked the goal.

Yes, the middies were happy beyond the dreams of the seraphim. And the cadets were downcast beyond language that can be printed in a newspaper of high standard. Yet there was one lingering Army hope. A miracle was needed and ten minutes or so remained in which to perform it. All that was necessary was to have a wavering, crushed West Point, revivified by some bolt from the blue, which bolt should have for its further mission to knock eight or nine middies insensible. It seemed to be a poor day for miracles and nothing of the kind occurred.

Army's Chance to Yell.

Still the West Pointers had one more chance to launch a tympanum crushing yell up in the moist, gloomy air before the game closed. It came after Navy, by a series of line charges and end runs, had marched down the field from its own 22 yard line to Army's 14 yard line without losing the leather ovoid and with only the slightest of opposition.

At this point the West Pointers called upon their flagging muscles and their unflagging courage for a last desperate stand to avert what then looked like six certain additional points for the middies.

The draft was honored and in two more of those catapultic charges Conroy and Noyes gained exactly no yards, feet, or inches. On a third effort Noyes fumbled a pass and Mulligan recovered the ball for the defenders of the threatened Army line.

Forward Passes Fail.

The Army now resorted to forward passing in a last despairing effort, but, like most of the aerial assaults of the West Pointers throughout the contest, this was unavailing. Navy was penalized fifteen yards for unnecessary roughness before the battle ended, and this was the cadets' most substantial gain.

When the turmoil of the frantic

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

THREE ILLINOIS MEN ON ELEVEN; WESTON CAPTAIN

McGuire and G. Penfield Given Line Positions.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Following a football season featured by bitterly fought struggles and sterling individual play, which in a number of cases resulted in victories, it is a time honored custom to select honorary elevens to be composed of warriors who have been of the greatest assistance to their respective teams.

WALTER H. ECKERSALL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

There are numbers of players who are efficient in one style of play but sadly lacking in others. A player may be a great field goal kicker or punter but be unable to do his part in the interference or in defensive play. The average football fan is always on the alert for the spectacular, but seldom stops to figure what made the sterling feats possible.

Stalwart Line Men Essential.

It would be impossible for goals to be kicked from the field, or backs to be turned loose for long gains, if it were not for the great playing of the forwards. A strong line is more essential to a football team than a good set of backs. A powerful forward wall will "make" a backfield player, but a strong back will never "make" a first class forward.

The men who play in the line are in the thick of battle from start to finish. The backs and ends get occasional periods for rest. Offensive formations are evolved which will relieve the backs of the ball carrying burden by dropping the ends back to advance the ball.

But behind all these qualifications is football brains. The player who goes about his work in a mechanical sort of way cannot be considered a candidate for the mythical elevens. It is the player who can meet conditions as they arise on the playing field who is selected. The player who realizes the danger point in football and always is in the vicinity of the ball is the man who is making a name in the game.

Every Angle Considered.

In the selection of the honorary elevens, every angle of the game must be considered.

Men must be selected who have an uncanny knack of going down the field and then working themselves free of the defense to receive forward passes. Players who can pass the oval accurately on the fast or lob toss must be selected, while the back field must be composed of men who are just as strong in the interference as at carrying the ball.

The tackles must be of the type who can be relied on to smash through no matter how the interference is sent at them.

The guards must be men who are ever mindful not to leave their positions too soon. Eagerness to mix in plays has been the fault of a number of conference guards this year, with the result that delayed passes or split bucks have resulted in big gains.

The center must be of the roving type, who can sense a play quickly and move to the point of attack with speed. He also must be a clever and accurate passer, as most of his work calls for tosses of an intricate variety.

The ends must be players who are ever mindful to turn all plays to the inside. They must hit the interference in such a manner that the runner is always turned in, so that the secondary defense can do the tackling the moment the scrimmage line is crossed. They also should be men who always drive the catchers of punts to the inside. The same is true on kickoffs.

The Ideal Backfield.

The smart football coach of today strives to select a backfield which is composed of a punter, line plunger, and off tackle driver or end runner. It always seems cumbersome to see a lineman pulled back to kick and a back move up in his position in order to have seven players on the scrimmage line.

A reliable punter is one of the greatest assets to a football team, and an honorary eleven would not be complete without one. In the past, punters have turned the tide of many a hard fought struggle, and the games of today are no exception.

Before going into detail in regard to the selection of men for these mythical elevens, it is necessary to mention some warriors who would have merited consideration had they been at their best all season. Early season injuries prevented these players from performing as they did last season.

Injuries Force Stars Out.

Arnold Oss, the Minnesota half back, would have been given first choice in the backfield had he been able to live up to his past performances. The Gopher star was injured during the Northwestern game, and was not himself for the remainder of the season. He was used as a threat in the Illinois game and played well against Wisconsin and Illinois.

Crisler of Chicago and Turner of Northwestern were two other all-star possibilities, until injuries kept them out of the remaining games.

Capt. Weston of Wisconsin is placed at left end on the first honorary eleven, and made captain of the team. The Badger was injured early in the Ohio State contest and did not play against Minnesota. It was his smart football

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

What do you consider the best indoor sport?

Where Asked.

At Jackson boulevard and La Salle street.

The Answers.

Harold Prenzler, 1517 Addison street, clerk—I don't know how you can beat pool. That's my favorite pastime. To get together with three or four boys from the office and spend the evening playing that game of skill in a respectable place is a mighty good tonic after a hard day's work."

George E. Booth, 1822 Washington boulevard, grain merchan. — Handball by all means. You can get more exercise and fun out of it in the same length of time than you can out of any other indoor athletic sport. In the loop district I find it a quick and convenient way to get relief from business routine.

L. J. Phillips, 4555 Grand boulevard, insurance broker—My idea of the best indoor sport is to play auction bridge with you wife as a partner—that is, if after an evening's playing you quit the game without an argument. Young man, learn to play auction bridge and control your temper. Married men appreciate this game.

Miss Mabel Anderson, 4454 North avenue, stenographer—O, give me "bunco" every time. Never heard of "bunco"? Why that's the name of a thriller of a game. There's nothing like it for real excitement, and if you don't know how to play "bunco" spelled b-u-n-c-o, you are missing a whole lot.

Miss Teresa Price, 528 East Forty-fourth place, stenographer—To my young mind dancing is the best of indoor sports and the most enjoyable. I'd literally rather dance than eat. Dancing is to me as pleasant as any outdoor sport.

DEMPSEY VIEWS ARMY-NAVY GAME

New York, Nov. 27.—One of the most interested spectators at the Army-Navy football game today was Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion. Dempsey was interested but not envious. "Rough stuff," he said after watching the two opposing lines piled in a huge heap. "Give me a nice, gentle sport like boxing every time. No football for mine." Dempsey had a seat on the side lines near a corner of the field and was the center of an admiring throng of Jackies between the halves.

Boy Chess Wizard Wins Seventeen of Twenty Games

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Samuel Rzechewski, the Polish chess prodigy, won seventeen games out of twenty he played at the Lexington theater tonight. Two games were draws, one with F. E. Carter and another with Rudolph Smirka, and the boy lost the twentieth game to Sherman A. Clapp, Columbia class of 1920.

DARTMOUTH WINS ON PASSES FROM WESTERN ELEVEN

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 27.—Dartmouth today smothered the University of Washington by brilliant forward passing and won, 28 to 7. Three of the Dartmouth touchdowns were made directly through forward passes from Robertson to Jordan. The fourth was made on a line buck following a successful overhead attack.

Washington's lone tally came in the first quarter when Abel blocked a punt and carried the ball over.

One of the largest crowds ever assembled for an athletic event in the city, estimated at 30,000, witnessed the contests.

Dartmouth won the toss. Harper received the kickoff on Washington's 40 yard line. He returned 15 yards and punted for 35 yards. Three line plunges failed and a kicking duel ended in midfield with Dartmouth holding the ball. Abel blocked Dartmouth's punt, picked up the ball, and raced for a touchdown through a broken field. Harper kicked goal. Score: Dartmouth 0; Washington, 7.

Dartmouth Scores in Second.

Dartmouth scored a touchdown a few minutes after the second period opened. The big green got possession of the ball on downs on the Sun Dodgers' 30 yard line. Burke and Robertson plunged through the Washington line to the 10 yard line, then Crisp carried the ball over on a forward pass from Jordan. Robertson kicked goal, tieing the score at seven apiece.

Washington again kicked off, Robertson returning 20 yards. The ball stayed in Dartmouth's territory for the rest of the quarter, big end gains by Dartmouth backs being more than offset by penalties for holding. When the quarter ended the ball was in the center of the field. Score: Dartmouth, 7; Washington, 7.

Drop Kick Fails.

Washington kicked off to start the third period. After Washington had recovered the ball, Harper tried for a drop kick from the 37 yard line, but the ball struck the cross bar. Dartmouth forced the ball to the Washington 45 yard line and Jordan took Robertson's forward pass and raced over the line for a touchdown. Robertson kicked goal.

Dartmouth scored again just before the close of the period, Shelburne putting the climax to a series of line bucks with a smash over the line. Robertson again kicked goal. Score: Dartmouth, 21; Washington, 7.

Starting the fourth period, Harper punted to the 50 yard line. Robertson shot a long pass to Jordan, who made a twisting 38 yard run over the line. Robertson kicked goal. Just before the end of the game Grady, replacing Robertson, after Dartmouth had hammered the ball to the Washington 5 yard line, threw another pass to Jordan, who caught the oval behind the goal, but it was out of bounds and no score was allowed. Final score: Dartmouth, 28; Washington, 7.

GOTHAM SPORTSMEN TO FIGHT TO RETAIN SUNDAY BALL, BOXING

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Any attempt by the next legislature to change the present liberal interpretation of laws governing sport, including Sunday baseball, will meet with the decided opposition of every element responsible for placing the present laws on the statute books. This was made clear today when representatives of various sporting interests were approached with a plan to present a solid front when the matter is brought before the legislature. State Senator James J. Walker, father of the present boxing commission law, will be chosen to represent them in the legislature.

In the meantime the sporting fraternity purposes to make a campaign to educate the people regarding the desirability of maintaining the present situation. It will be pointed out that the present liberal laws were put through by a Republican legislature in the interest of the public after the hardest kind of a fight, and that if they are changed now it may be many years before another liberal interpretation will be possible. Special efforts will be made to preserve Sunday baseball.

RUPPERT TO GIVE LANDIS REPLY ON SYNDICATE BALL

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Because, he declares, he holds the welfare of baseball more sacred than vindication in petty squabbles with hired help, Col. Jacob Ruppert thinks it best to leave unanswered for the time the insinuations of President Ban Johnson of the American league that he (Ruppert) and his partner, Col T. L. Huston, are engaged in promotion of syndicate baseball, contrary to the constitution of the American league.

"I do not wish at this time to answer Mr. Johnson's story, or the story attributed to him," said Col. Ruppert this afternoon. "I intend to embrace the opportunity of seeing Judge Landis, the new board of control, and of laying my whole hand on the table before him."

Linow Throws Orlando in Mat Contest at C. A. A.

Jack Linow, well known heavyweight grappler, defeated Max Orlando in a one fall match, feature of the wrestling show at the C. A. A. last night. Linow took the fall in 13:47 with an arm scissors and wrist lock. Both used rough tactics, but Linow's strength and weight were the deciding factors in the result.

In the other contest Young Demetral, local wrestling sensation, easily defeated George Mack in one fall.

GRIDIRON DEATH TOLL FOR 1920 REACHES 12; MORE THAN YEAR AGO

Football exacted a toll of twelve victims during the 1920 season, according to reports by the Associated Press.

The deaths were six greater than in 1919 and two above two years ago. Twelve lives were lost during the 1917 season, eighteen in 1916, and fifteen in 1915.

The majority of the youths killed this season were high school players, who may have entered the game without sufficient physical training for so rough a sport and with only limited knowledge of the game.

Two College Boys Die.

Only two of the dead were members of college aggregations, two on college class teams. One boy, 12 years old, was killed in a game of the "sand lot" variety. Seven of the victims were members of high school elevens.

Defenders of the sport pointed to the fact that not a fatality occurred in the big universities of the country, where the game is conducted under expert physical direction and coaching.

Open Play Less Dangerous.

The development of the open style of play, instead of the smashing game of a dozen years ago, and the improved, heavily padded uniforms and headgear are eliminating much of the danger, according to football experts. The list of victims:

FRANKLIN WORRWELL, Omaha, Neb., 12 years; died Oct. 20 of a fractured skull sustained in a "sandlot" game.

EDWARD BOHN, St. Louis, Mo., 22 years; half back at Missouri School of Mines; died Nov. 8 of fractured spine as a result of being tackled.

JACK REEVES, 23 years; full back at Kansas State Normal team; died Nov. 7; paralyzed as a result of spinal injury.

HARRY HARSHBARGER, Decatur, Ill., 16 years; died Nov. 15; injured three weeks previous in high school game.

RAYMOND SILLICK, Wapello, Ia.; died Oct. 7 as result of injuries in high school game.

AMERICUS MIDDLEBROOKS, St. Louis, Mo., 21 years; died Nov. 4 of broken neck received in high school game.

MELVIN KEPPLER, Lockhaven, Pa., 17 years; died Sept. 30; neck broken in high school game.

NELSON LEMANAGE, Pharr, Tex., 19 years; died Oct. 31; injured in high school game.

EDWIN WOLFF, Michigan City, Ind.; died Nov. 3; injured in interclass game at Purdue university three weeks previous.

WILLIAM HEINE, Berkeley, Cal., 17 years; died Nov. 5; injured in high school game three weeks previous.

ARTHUR RESNER, Yankton, S. D., 17 years; died Nov. 13 of broken neck received in high school game.

CARL F. ESPE, Madison, S. D., 17 years; died Oct. 15 of fractured skull; injured in high school game.

Wabash Alley Team Leads in Chicago Pin Tourney

The seventeenth annual tournament of the Chicago Bowling association opened at Petersen's alleys last night. As is usual on opening nights, scoring was low. The No. 11 team from the Wabash alleys hit the top figures, a grand total of 2,697.

playing which saved the game with Illinois, and he was no small factor in assisting in the Badgers' scores.

There is little about the wing position which the Badger does not know. He rarely lets a play get outside, and covers punts in commanding fashion.

Carney of Illinois is placed at right end. This man ranks with the leading wing players of the country and was a tower of strength to his team. He played a hard, consistent game all season, but an unfortunate injury during the Ohio State game kept him from being a factor. Like Weston, he is a finished end and hard to equal.

A. Devine as Quarter Back.

Aubrey Devine of Iowa, one of the most dangerous men of the season on western gridirons, is given the quarter back position. This player ran with the ball for desired results, while his forward passing was fast and accurate. He was a clever field general and strong defensive player.

Bob Fletcher of Illinois is another reliable quarter, but he lacked the dangerous qualifications of the Hawkeye. Workman of Ohio State, while a good player, is not experienced enough in generalship, but should be among the leaders next season.

Pete Stinchcomb of Ohio State, the brainiest player of the year in western football, is the first choice for a backfield position. There is little about the game which this player does not know. In action he was fast, shifty, and elusive, besides being a clever handler of the ball. It was mainly through his efforts that games with Wisconsin, Chicago, and Illinois were pulled out of the fire, and he played no small part in the defeat of Michigan.

The Buckeye half back was the general of his team. Although Quarter Back Workman called the signals, Stinchcomb checked back until the correct play was called. It was Stinchie who told Workman to cut loose with his forward passes in the Illinois game, when there was less than a minute left to play. The same was true in the Wisconsin game, when two touchdowns were scored with about four minutes left.

Great on Advancing Ball.

For a small player, Stinchcomb hit the line and drove off the tackles for the same results as a man much heavier. He picked holes cleverly and proved a past master at the cut back style of run. He caught punts faultlessly, and once under way was hard to stop. On defense he sized up plays quickly and directed his team to the danger point.

Steketee of Michigan is awarded the other half back position. While not as sensational as the Ohioan, the Wolverine proved a reliable ball carrier and the best punter in the conference.

In addition to being reliable in advancing the ball, Steketee was a dependable field goal kicker. This ability was shown in the Minnesota contest, when he booted the oval between the posts for the only score of the game. His defensive qualifications match up with his offensive ability.

Ralph Fletcher of Illinois is one of the best field goal kickers in the country, but his other qualifications are not the equal of other backs.

Crangle Chosen Full Back.

Crangle of Illinois should be the unanimous choice of all critics for the full back position. What this great player lacked in offensive ability he more than made up for in defensive play. He probably ranks with Tom Hammond of Michigan and Marc Catlin of Chicago in this department. The Illinois player, weighing more than 190 pounds, hit the line so hard that he frequently made ground when opposition was met. He also was a reliable man in the interferences, and was of great assistance in breaking up an opponent's forward pass attack.

Sundt of Wisconsin was Crangle's nearest approach.

Slater of Iowa is placed at right tackle because of his consistent play all year. While a marked man in every contest, the colored warrior seldom permitted gains through him. On several occasions offensive teams delegated as many as two men to keep him out of the plays. Being strong and powerful, he is the proper man for the position.

The other tackle position is awarded to McGuire of Chicago. It will be recalled that the Maroon forward wall from tackle to tackle was about the strongest in the conference, and McGuire was a principal factor in the line. He broke up many an opponent's plays before they were formed. Also aided the backs on numberless occasions by opening holes.

Penfield for Guard Post.

Capt. Graham Penfield of Northwestern is awarded the left guard position. This player was one of the main reasons for the Purple's success this year. He played a strong offensive and defensive game and as a leader was continually urging his teammates to greater efforts. He was seldom kept out of a play.

The other guard position is given to Tierney of Minnesota. Although this player was a member of a weak team, few gains were made through him. He always commanded respect of opponents and few generals elected to waste a down by sending a play at him.

Taylor of Ohio State played an aggressive game all season, but had the fault of leaving his position too soon.

Depler Best of Fine Centers.

Capt. Depler of Illinois is given the pivot position although closely pressed by Bunge of Wisconsin and Nemecek of Ohio State. The Illinois leader was an accurate passer, who always made sure to get the ball to the proper man before paying any attention to opponents. On defense he was equally strong. Vick of Michigan also rated well up with the centers.

This team as selected would be strong in every department. Forward passes could be used with excellent performers on both ends. The close and open attack could be employed for desired results. In Steketee, the team would be well fortified in the kicking department. On defense Aubrey Devine would be placed in the secondary defense and Stinchcomb at full back, where he would be the safety man.

HYDE PARK, 14; CRANE, 0.

Hyde Park ulace dsecond in the league by defeating Crane, 14 to 0, in a listless game at Stagg field yesterday morning. De Louch put the first score across from the 4 yard line in the opening quarter after the ball had been advanced on straight tactics. McCarthy scored the second touchdown in the last minutes of play on a short end run after forward passes and line plays had brought the ball to Crane's 11 yard line.

ENGLEWOOD ANNEXES THIRD ANNUAL TITLE, BEATING SENN, 41-0

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Englewood's high powered football machine smothered a badly crippled Senn eleven in the final game of the Chicago High school league yesterday at Stagg field. The score was 41 to 0, and for the third time Englewood has the undisputed championship of Chicago's public schools. It was a rather ragged game, with a lot of time being taken out by Senn's battered athletes. There were some sparkling bits of play by Englewood and some bad football by both teams.

ART FOLZ. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

For the most part it was a case of such superior strength on one side, that the simplest kind of attack was effective. Senn had a strong line, but plays off tackle and around the end generally netted substantial gains.

Folz in Brilliant Runs.

Art Folz, speedy quarter back of Englewood, did some sensational open field running, once dashing 70 yards for a touchdown after catching a punt. Gentry and Stevens, his running mates, often got loose for big gains, and Vickers, sturdy full back, seldom failed to make good distance in hitting off tackle.

Perhaps the Senn team didn't play as bad a game of football all season as in this fray. Big "Dutch" Kueller, star of the team and one of the best prep full backs in these parts, entered the contest with a lame shoulder. He hurt it on the first play and again on the second and had to leave the field. He wasn't able to return, and the whole Senn offense seemed demoralized.

Some Desperate Football.

Sparks, the regular quarter back, was out of the game because of a broken army suffered in a recent game, and there were two or three others in the battle who acted as if they should have been in the hospital.

Along with it, Senn did some things that aren't in the book on how to play football. They continually resorted to forward passing when down close to their own goal and at least two or three times lost the ball because it was intercepted. Once they actually attempted a forward pass on a fourth down on their own thirty yard line with eleven yards to gain.

However, a few of the Senn boys must be admired for their skill and gameness. Little Half Back Brown on several occasions got loose for sparkling runs. At the finish a large part of his uniform had been torn off. Big Bengston did some splendid defensive work at left tackle, and Allen's defensive playing at guard was impressive.

Purple Interference Strong.

Englewood had no complicated formations, but always had wonderful interference for the man carrying the ball on end runs. They simply swept the enemy to one side. But Englewood, too, played some bad football. The Purple must have been penalized at least a dozen times for offside and holding.

Once when Englewood was close to the rival's goal, with a yard to go on a third down, Englewood attempted a pass over the goal line, and when it failed the ball went to Senn on its own twenty-five yard line.

Near the finish the Englewood fellows tried some long forward passes, not because they were needed, but just for practice in case they make the trip to California to battle the Long Beach team. One suspects they may need something like that, as well as some shifts, when they bump against a team equal in strength. Lineup:

LANE, 14; LINDBLOM, 6.

Lane put a winning end to a disappointing season by downing Lindblom, 14 to 6, at White City. The Techs used their favorite short passes as a ground gaining and scoring asset, Pfleger passing 15 yards to Marquardt, on Lindblom's goal line, for the first score of the game in the opening quarter. Lindblom countered in the same period, intercepting a fumble on Lane's 25 yard line, and after a few ensuing plays, pulling a successful pass to Bruce, who scored. The goal was missed. Lane scored again in the last five minutes, when Wagner intercepted a lateral pass and ran 40 yards to the Lindblom goal.

DE LA SALLE BEATS ST. MEL.

In a twelve inning game marked by loose play, last year's De La Salle indoor champions of the Catholic league opened their season by downing St. Mel in the losers' gym, 23 to 18. De La Salle staged an uphill fight, four runs across in the ninth to tie the score. In the twelfth, a seven run rally decided the game.

LOGANS-STAYMS GAME FEATURES PRO GRID CARD

The honors of the Chicago Football league will be at stake in the battle this afternoon at Pyott field, where the Stayms and the Logan Square A. C. clash. The teams have never met before. They were scheduled at the tail end of last season, but the game was canceled on account of a snowstorm.

The Stayms have been beaten only once this year, the Thorn-Tornadoes turning the trick, but that was wiped out when the west siders turned the tables on them Thanksgiving day.

The crack Staley team from Decatur, who claim the midwest title, will appear at Normal park as the opponents of the Cardinals. The downstaters have not been defeated since they were organized early in the fall, while the only black mark on the record of the Cards is a setback at Rock Island.

Gil Falcon's Tigers, who gave the Staleys such a tough argument Thursday, will take on the Thorn-Tornadoes at Cub park. The Thorns are headed by Charpier, former Illinois full back, while the remainder of the team is made up of college stars.

Following is the schedule for today:

Cardinals and Staleys at Normal Park.
Stayms and Logan Square A. C. at Pyott field.
Tigers and Thorn-Tornadoes at Cub park.
Wallace A. C. at Aurora.
Pullman A. C. and Hammond Jrs. at Palmer park.

HARRISON TRIMS AUSTIN, 14 TO 7

Harrison's strong heavyweight team, which improved with every game of the city prep schedule, ended the season with a hard earned 14-7 triumph over Austin at Harrison field. Quarter Cushna of the winners scored the first touchdown in the second period on a center rush and the techs ended the half with a 7 to 0 lead.

Austin kept the pace with a score in the third quarter, when a long pass from Borwig sent an end scampering to the five yard line, and Borwig then went over through the line. Harrison also counted in the same period, Trucha riding over off tackle.

Boston College Eleven Downs Georgetown, 30-0

Boston, Mass., Nov. 27.—Boston college maintained its record as one of the few undefeated elevens of the country when it turned Georgetown back on a muddy field today, 30 to 0. Its scoring was made on varied plays.

Capt. Urban made the first touchdown on a 20 yard run, after a forward pass of 15 yards from Kennedy soon after play started.

Offer Folwell Four Year Contract to Coach Navy

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Prior to the start of the Army-Navy game this afternoon Head Coach Bob Folwell of the Naval academy eleven was offered an extension of his contract for four years regardless of the outcome of today's struggle. It was reported after the clash that Folwell had not given a definite answer.

closed and the tumult of the rejoicing seamen surging forth upon the field began, the ball was in Navy's possession on Army's 39 yard line.

When one says that the middies surged forth at the battle's close one shows remarkable restraint in the use of words. They boiled and bubbled, tumbled and rolled, capered and leaped onto the disheveled, scrambled mass where rove under summer sunshine the Babe Ruths and the George Burnses of fairer, warmer days.

Some Happy Middies.

They massed their colors in the midst of what seemed like at least a myriad of loving arms and jumping bodies. They marched to the army sections and gave vociferous cheers for their recent opponents and for the entire army family. Quite a celebration it was, and onlookers gathered the idea that the middies were in good spirits.

Between the halves Billy—or maybe his name is Nannie—capered to the center of the field and gazed in approval at the Army-Navy reunion of distinguished persons like Secretaries Daniels and Baker—the former's lad earned him the right to have his name take precedence—Gen. Pershing, Gen. Neville of France and other notable men connected with the two services.

Scattered through the boxes were the governors of five states. Gov. Smith of New York was unable to attend, but Govs. Ritchie of Maryland, Sproul of Pennsylvania, Beckman of Rhode Island, Edwards of New Jersey, and Townsend of Delaware graced the proceedings with their presence. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the new one-man supreme court of baseball, occupied a box completely surrounded by baseball magnates and movie cameras.

STRICT RULINGS KEEP WISCONSIN BOXING STRAIGHT

Unlucky the Fighter Who Bucks Commission.

BY RAY PEARSON.

For a numb[illegible] years boxing has been legal in Wisconsin, and, judging by conversation with one of the leaders of the sport there, it is going to remain legal unless some unforseen action is taken to knock the present law off the statute books. The reason it is going to remain legal is because those who control the sport have been successful in keeping it clean, and because they absolutely refuse to reduce in the slightest degree the strict methods which were adopted long ago.

WALTER H. LIGINGER. [Klein Photo.]

It is the boxing commission which is deserving of all credit for what has happened in the Badger state. The commission has been responsible for the clean nature of the sport in the past, and the men who form the commission will continue to rule with a strict hand in order to keep boxing as it should be. At the head of this commission is Walter Liginger, a man who knows sport—and by sport we main not alone boxing, but many other lines of athletic endeavor.

Head and Shoulders of Sport.

Liginger, as chairman of the Wisconsin boxing commission, is the man who has done much to gain the name of the "iron ruler" of boxing. He has been the head and shoulders of boxing ever since the game became lawful in the state, and his methods have at times brought him plenty of criticism.

It seems that "they" [we place quotation marks here because those to whom we refer consist of just two names of men interested in the glove sort] do not believe in discipline, and do not think that boxing should be ruled with an iron hand to keep it clean.

The only trouble that Liginger and the men who form the commission have had to contend with has been made by boxers and their managers, according to Liginger. He says that this trouble never would have cropped up, if the glove wielders and their managers followed the laws as laid down by the state and the commission. When efforts were made to override the powers in control there was trouble.

Sport Holds Its Own.

That is the situation as it appears in Wisconsin today. When one considers the success boxing has attained in Milwaukee, where the big Auditorium —probably the finest spot for the sport in the world—is located, and in Kenosha, it is really remarkable that the sport goes along so well without encountering greater difficulties. It is not often that the "comish" gets mixed in a jam with fellows who take exception to the rulings by Chairman Liginger.

WELLING A GAME GUY; ANXIOUS FOR ANOTHER CHANCE

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Joe Welling, the game little Chicago lightweight, felt none the worse today for the gruelling time he spent last night at Madison Square garden, during fourteen vicious rounds with the great lightweight champ, Benny Leonard. While Welling is not trying to take any credit away from Leonard for his magnificent victory, the westerner is sorry that Referee Johnny Haukop stopped the contest.

"I know I must have looked pretty bad during that fatal fourteenth round," said Welling, "but I felt as if I could see it through. Many a boy has come through under the same conditions and turned apparent defeat into victory. However, I am not kicking, and only hope Benny will give me another chance."

Nate Lewis, the manager of Welling, was all broken up over the defeat of his protégé, and entertains the same opinion as Joe, that Referee Haukop might have been a little hasty in stopping the bout.

The bout drew a gate close to $100,000, out of which Leonard received $35,000 flat. Welling got $15,000 for his end, which ought to provide sufficient balm for his wounded feelings.

Leonard was about town today as chipper as a lark. He showed no marks of the fight and was warm in his praise of Welling.

If Bill Brennan Knocks Out Dempsey, What? It's Possible

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Has Bill Brennan a chance with Jack Dempsey?

Ordinarily a person who would suggest that Bill has a good chance against the champion would be pegged as mad. Yet in boxing, as in baseball or football, you must never take anything for granted.

What an awful upset, what a tragedy in pugilism, so to speck, if Mr. Brennan were to knock Jack sprawling when they meet at Madison Square garden Dec. 14, next.

Not Conceded Chance.

We don't think that the big Chicago heavyweight has any more chance against Dempsey than a pair of deuces has in a Juarez poker game, yet it is within the range of possibilities for Brennan to kick in with a "wild" one and blow Dempsey out of the picture.

Have you thought what such an occurrence would mean to Dempsey? Should Brennan release a knockout haymaker the blow no doubt would cost the title holder close to a million dollars, for he is yet in his prime and purses for topnotch fighters are high.

Let us look at the situation in a cold, sober way. Brennan is a big man physically, and behind all this brawn there must be concealed some driving force. Supposing Bill should let one go with no particular objective in view and this wild effort should find a resting spot on Jack's jaw. What then?

Punch on Bell Turns Trick.

It is not unlikely to expect that the champion would take the same kind of a dive that most of his opponents have taken of late. When a punch is on its way it has no respect for the propeller or the person who is likely to intercept it in its course. If the blow lands on the bell it is curtains, that's all. So it would be were Brennan to hang one on Jack.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Charley Otis of New York, the demon finisher of the world's three cushion tournament, came from behind in the first of the afternoon games yesterday and defeated Hugh Heal of Toledo, 50 to 44, in seventy-four innings. It was the final appearance of the Ohio player, whose showing has been below expectations. Otis had two runs of 6, Heal getting a 5.

CLARENCE JACKSON

Heal made the pace for thirty innings, Otis not being able to produce any cue magic. The New Yorker, with a run of 6 in the thirty-fifth inning, climbed to the front with the count 19 to 18 in forty innings. But Heal sprinted along and assumed a lead of eleven points. With the count 25 to 34 against him, Otis ran 6 in the fifty-seventh session and was only three points behind.

They turned the sixty-seventh post with Heal leading, 43 to 42, but Otis uncorked a 4 and went out later with runs of 3 and 1. Score at each tenth inning:

Otis	4	7	10	19	22	32	46	50
Heal	7	10	14	18	33	38	44	44

Capron Loses to Morin.

The final afternoon game was "curtains" for Joe Capron, the dean of the contestants, losing to Charley Morin, 50 to 44, in sixty-six innings. Although Joe won only one game in eleven, most of his matches were close. Score at each tenth inning:

Mcrin	5	19	24	30	41	46	50
Capron	6	11	17	25	31	38	44

In the second night game De Oro defeated McCourt, 50 to 37, in 67 innings. De Oro's best run was a 4, while McCourt had a 5. De Oro had a 15 to 1 advantage in the first 19 innings and maintained it to the finish. Score at each tenth inning:

De Oro	10	15	24	31	36	45	50
McCourt	0	2	12	15	27	30	37

Morin Wins His Last Game.

Charley Morin of Chicago signalized his farewell appearance in the series by winning a great game from John Daly, 50 to 49, in eighty-four innings.

CHICAGO LIKELY SITE FOR GRAND AMERICAN SHOOT NEXT AUTUMN

New York, Nov. 27.—[Special.]—In trap shooting circles, it is being whispered that Chicago is likely to be awarded the 1921 Grand American handicap. Chicago and Indianapolis are leading in the running for the event, and both are putting up a determined fight to land the classic. However, the belief obtains that the Windy City will win out when the executive committee of the American Trapshooting association holds its meeting in Chicago January 7.

That the Grand American handicap next year will surpass even the high standard set in this event in the past seems reasonably assured. The suggestion made by F. D. Stoop of Montana, at the annual meeting of the American Trapshooting association in this city recently, that the G. A. H. be staged in September, is being followed out.

OFFERS HURLING RECRUIT $500 TO SIGN WITH SOX

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 27.—According to a report here today, Danny Long, White Sox scout, has discovered such a promising southpaw up at Santa Rosa that he has offered him $500 a month to attach his signature to a Chicago contract. The find is Walter Schmid, whose record for the year just ended stands at nineteen won, of thirty-two games pitched.

The player intimated today he would accept Long's offer. Del Howard, manager of the Oakland club of the Coast league, is trying to land him. However, there is little prospect of success for Howard, as Schimd, prior to the Chicago offer, has been negotiating to accept a contract with the San Francisco club.

Ray Schalk, Star Catcher, Enters Insurance Field

Ray Schalk, catcher de luxe of the White Sox, announced yesterday that he is a business man—in the winter, time. For the last two winters he has been a salesman for a metal concern, but this time he has gone into business for himself, in the insurance game, associated with Franklin J. Neuberger. Ray says he is ready to write any kind of insurance for any one. He will have his headquarters at 39 South La Salle street.

Three Infield Recruits Are Released by Browns

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 27.—The release of three infield recruits to minor league clubs was announced by officials of the St. Louis Americans today. Gene Robertson, who was with Columbus and Joplin, Mo., last year, returns to the latter. William Mullen, a city leaguer, and Paul Sperrauw, from Flint, Mich., go to Mobile, Southern association.

CUBS AGAIN TO GO WEST; PLAN START MARCH 3

Definite Date Depends on Season Opening.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Plans for the spring training trip of the Chicago Cubs were discussed yesterday at a conference between President Veeck of the north side club and Presidents William H. McCarthy of the Pacific Coast league and Charles H. Strub of the San Francisco team of that circuit.

BILL VEECK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The coast league officials stopped off between trains on their way home from New York and Boston, where they have been sojourning since the Kansas City meeting of the National association, departing for Frisco last night. Tentative dates for the spring jaunt of the Cubs were agreed upon, but not definitely fixed, as it will not be possible to frame the exhibition schedule until it is known when the championship seasons of the Pacific Coast and National leagues will open.

March 3 Tentative Date.

March 3 has been fixed as a tentative date for starting the spring trip. In regard to the action of the major leagues in selecting Federal Judge Landis as a one man commission, Messrs. McCarthy and Strub both expressed belief that the coast league club owners would be willing to submit all disputes between their clubs and the National or American leagues to the Chicago jurist for decision, and thought a one man commission would expedite the handling of all such cases.

Judge Landis was absent from the city yesterday attending the Army-Navy game in New York, a contest he seldom misses. He will return to Chicago tomorrow and, in addition to continuing to assist the federal authorities in drying up the wet spots in the city, will hold several conferences with baseball officials relative to the selection of commission headquarters and their early installation in Chicago.

Evers Due Tomorrow.

John J. Evers, new manager of the Cubs, is due to reach the city tomorrow and take up his domicile at the Congress for a stay of a fortnight prior to the annual meeting of the National league in New York the middle of next month. He will spend the time going over plans for rebuilding the Cub machine for the 1921 campaign, and attending the banquet planned in his honor for the night of Dec. 7.

FORM REVERSALS OF DIAMOND MEN GAME'S MYSTERY

Billy Evans Cites Several Surprising Cases.

BY BILLY EVANS.

[American League Umpire.]

Reversal of form is one of the mysteries of the sporting world.

BILLY EVANS

In doping out any sporting event it is possible to reach a logical conclusion provided those actively engaged run true to form. But they don't always do it. That makes it all the more intricate.

In baseball the very mention that a certain player is to pitch makes victory seem almost certain. Yet often the star pitcher fails to last an inning. His curves and fast ball are knocked all over the lot. He has failed to run true to form.

Pitchers Subject to Reversals.

Perhaps no player is more subject to a reversal of form than the pitcher, although the crack hitters often develop batting slmps that are well night unexplainable. They just happen. The crack hitter apparently hits them as hard as ever, but he seems unable to get the ball safe. His line drives to the outfield or sharp hits to the infield go directly into the hands of some player.

I doubt if the records of baseball contain a more unusual case than that of Doc Ayers during the season of 1920. Ayers, as a member of the Detroit Americans, got away to a rather poor start. He turned in some good games, but it seemed impossible for him to win with any consistency. Finally he lost his place as a regular and was used largely as a relief pitcher. It began to look as if Doc was slated for the minors.

Slated for Minors.

Just when things were breaking toughest for Ayers the Detroit club started to put through a deal for a Pacific coast league star. It was understood Ayers was to go to the Coast league team as part payment. The Detroit pitching staff was in bad shape at that time. A shortage of pitchers made it necessary that Ayers be started in a game against Philadelphia. Jack Coombs, who had charge of the Tiger pitchers, hadn't the slightest idea that using Ayers would affect the transaction. As a matter of fact, arrangements had been made for Ayers' transportation to the coast.

His performance that afternoon against the Athletics was a pitching masterpiece. He shut out Connie Mack's team with a few scattered hits. Despite the fact that the Philadelphia club finished last, any American league pitcher will tell you there was one thing the Athletics could do—hit the ball. Therefore, the performance of Ayers was more noteworthy than might seem.

Not Flash in Pan.

Evidently it was regarded as only a flash in the pan, as the Detroit club went right along with the deal. His work in that game, however, was so meritorious Coach Coombs felt it was necessary to start him again. To have sent him to the minors after pitching such a fine game would have left the Detroit club open to criticism. Coombs thought Ayers would fail to finish and the deal could be concluded. Once more Ayers crossed things up by pitching another shutout. Those two games were the talk of Detroit. The deal was momentarily halted, until Ayers' showing would permit it to be closed. Doc refused to falter, continued to pitch such fine ball that the Detroit club was forced to retain him. The showing of Ayers the latter part of the season was a complete reversal of his spring form.

It is admitted that Stanley Coveleskie is one of the greatest pitchers of all time, yet I saw Coveleskie put on one of the greatest single game reversals last summer that I have ever seen. The game was played at Chicago. As in all games between Cleveland and the White Sox, it was a battle. Bunching of hits early in the game gave Cleveland a five run lead. Give Coveleskie five runs and the ball game is usually over. For eight innings he toyed with the hard hitting Chicago club. Only three hits had been made off his delivery and two of them were scratches. Then things began to happen. Before the side was retired in the eighth, Chicago, on eight consecutive hits, all of them clean drives, had piled up six runs, enough to win the game, 6 to 5.

It was the most sudden, unexpected reversal of form I ever saw in baseball.

[Copyright: 1920: By W. G. Evans.]

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. METCALFE.

THE vital trick in most deals is trick one. But most players put their cards down perfunctorily at the beginning of a deal, and only begin to think after the mischief has been done.

The greatest difference between good players and mediocre is that the former read more meaning into deuces and treys, while the latter rarely notice anything below sevens and eights. A good illustration of this follows:

West secured eleven tricks.

South should have played the deuce of spades at trick one. The lead of the trey by north marked the declarer with the ace of spades alone, unless north had led a singleton, and even then south could gain nothing by putting up the knave.

North added one trick more to the disaster by stupid discarding. He should have thrown the trey and deuce of diamonds.

West dealt and bid three hearts, which closed the bidding. North had the original lead.

North lead the deuce of spades, the seven was played from dummy, south played the king, and the game was lost.

In this case also south should have reasoned that west held the ace of spades solus. Although this was not true, the play of the low spade by south would have given north and south four tricks in the deal.

Moreover, had the spades in dummy been only queen, ten, nine, and eight, south still would have saved one trick by playing low at trick one.

Alfred T. Baker, Father of Princeton Star, Dies

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 27.—Announcement was made here today of the death on his estate near Princeton, N. J., yesterday of Alfred T. Baker, retired textile manufacturer and father of the late Capt. Hobart A. (Hobey) Baker, Princeton football and hockey star. Mr. Baker was 58 years old. His famous son was killed in an airplane fall in France a few weeks after the armistice was signed.

YALE ARRANGES 1921 CREW DATES; RACES APRIL 30

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 27.—Yale representatives at a rowing conference in New York yesterday, have reported to the rowing authorities that a tentative schedule calls for two races between Yale and Columbia, on the Housatonic river at Derby, April 30. The university crew also will row Pennsylvania on April 16, over the same course. The Yale-Pennsylvania races will be on the Schuylkill and Housatonic in alternate years.

On May 21 at Ithaca, Yale will row with Cornell and Princeton, and assurance is given of a triangular event between these crews at Derby in 1922.

The Child's cup event for May 14 on the Harlem river will be between Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Princeton.

Iowa Basket Squad Loses Star's Services

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Iowa's first ill fortune in the newly arrived basketball season leaves the squad minus the services of Bob Finlayson, probably until after New Year's. The 1919 center and forward is in a hospital, a victim of appendicitis.

WOODS AND WATERS

By Larry St. John.

THE deer is a canny critter and only the inexperienced hunter underestimates its ability to look out for its own skin. Keen visioned and dull coated, it has the ability to see without being seen, to which may be added fleetness and a most highly developed sense of smell. Hunted and killed fair and square, as many of them are not, the deer is perhaps the best game animal on four feet.

LARRY ST. JOHN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The fact that upwards of 60,000 deer are killed annually in the United States may lead one to believe that killing a deer is as easy as rolling off the oft-mentioned log, but it is not—if the hunter uses legitimate methods.

It is hardly fair to the deer to "jack" them with a light and shoot them from a canoe, to hunt them with hounds in the township, or to shoot them at a salt lick. These methods were legitimate in frontier days, when every man had to kill his own meat, but there is no excuse for them now.

Deer depend a great deal on their ability to scent an approaching hunter, and before lying down Mr. White Tail invariably walks some distance down wind so as to get sufficient warning of an enemy's coming. For this reason the A. B. C. of successful still hunting is to approach the place where you have reasons to believe that a deer is lying or feeding up wind.

This does not mean that the hunter should follow a track that is going against the wind—in fact, the opposite is usually recommended; but the hunter should detour before he gets to the place where he expects to find his meat; this may be either a dense thicket, a burning, a "jam pile," a slough, a swamp, or some other place equally uninviting to a man, but attractive to an animal used to being pursued.

When the hunter finally gets his opportunity let us hope that he will make the most of it and not do like a fellow whom my friend, George Krauss, up Thunder river way, guided. He sat down on a runway and let a fine buck jump "clean" over the top of his head, forgetting that he had a rifle in his hand. But then he may have done the same thing that a fellow who hunted with "Shorty" Fournier did: he aimed at a passing buck, madly pumped all the cartridges out of his rifle, but forgot to pull the trigger.

These incidents are nothing compared with what the guides can tell. Yarns about buck fever are always told about tenderfeet, but, as a matter of fact, buck fever is largely a matter of temperament and almost as likely to happen to an old timer as a novice. However, it is costly. It loses the meat, and in some camps the penalty is severe, often resulting in the victime having his shirt tail amputated and hung on the ridge pole of the shack until he has redeemed himself.

ARMY MULES WIN HEARTS OF 8,000 AT STOCK SHOW

Local Horses Compete for Blue Ribbons.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

A gallant team of army mules won first place in the hearts of 8,000 spectators at the horse show of the International Live Stock exposition in the International amphitheater last evening. It was the opening performance of the horse show, which will continue all week.

The long-eared veterans were a part of the United States army exhibit of correct types of artillery horses, transport mules and cavalry horses. The mules pulled an ammunition wagon. The artillery horses drew a polished field piece.

Judging was confined to local classes. The blue ribbon in the combination harness and saddle entries was carried off by Edward Morris with Rexe Rene. John R. Thompson's Nance O'Neil was selected for second honors, while Lady Mary, the entry of Frank M. Flynn, was chosen third.

Lehmann Wins with Three Hunters.

By annexing the first, second, and third places, O. W. Lehmann made a clean sweep of the hunters' class. Shrapnel took first, while Surefire and Drumfire finished second and third. Midd Middleburg, the entry of Robert C. Wheeler, was awarded fourth money.

In the stockyards saddle horse class the honors were carried off by Norris W. Cochran, whose entry, Sorrel Joe, led a large field. Our Choice, shown by Arnold & Cross, was named for second, while Handsome, owned by J. E. Cherrill, annexed third position.

Georgia Boys Win Honors.

"Hurrah! hurrah! for Dixie" shouted the Dixielanders when it was announced that the trio of farm boys from Georgia had won first in the non-collegiate live stock judging contest yesterday afternoon. The Georgians coming from the former home of the razorback hogs and cattle ticks surprised their opponents when they ran their score up to 998 points out of a possible 1,350 in placing horses, cattle, and hogs. They were in competition with ten other states, three boys from each state.

"That's a go getter bunch from Georgia," is the expressive remark made by Mark G. Thornburg, Emmetsburg, Ia., who is in charge of the contest. The winning team scored highest in horses, third in hogs, and sixth in beef cattle. Michigan ranked second with a score of 968, and the Iowa team, coached by Orrie Beeler, county agent of Boone county, followed with 928 points. The other teams placed in the following order: Indiana, 915; Illinois, 900; Texas, 853; Missouri and Virginia tied, 846; North Dakota, 775; Nebraska, 770, and Minnesota, 736.

Girl Wins Honors.

John Clayton of the Illinois team registered the highest individual score. Miss Myrtle Kearns from Minto, N. D., was the only girl in the contest, but she did her part to win honors for the team sent here from the northwest. Miss Kearns is 17 years old.

The real "branding" of the animals in this year's roundup will start tomorrow. Beginning in the morning and continuing until next Saturday night, the judges, who are posted and know the "brands," will be kept busy "stamping" according to the merits of each one of the 10,000 animals. The pure breds will then be ranked where they belong in their breed.

CHILDREN WILL PROFIT BY NEW SEARLES RICHES

Boston, Mass., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Albert Victor Searles, the artist, who gets by settlement $5,000,000 of his uncle's $50,000,000 estate, said today:

"I shall go on living just about as I have been. I have certain ideas regarding education. I believe that we are sadly lacking in good taste. I have a plan whereby children could be taught things in a way that would give them good taste in architecture, in clothes, in various things."

Searles lives in a three room apartment, very simply, without a bit of ostentation. He eats his meals at restaurants. He looks to be about 35, but intimates he is 51. He believes he has an idea about airplanes that will revolutionize their construction, but is keeping it secret.

STATE TO TEACH 266,557 HOW TO SPEAK ENGLISH

The immigrants' commission, created by the last legislature has been directed by the statutes to investigate the educational needs of the foreign born of Illinois. A survey of the opportunities offered the non-English speaking immigrants to learn English and prepare for citizenship, has just been completed.

According to Grace Abbott, executive secretary of the commission, last year only nineteen cities and towns in the state had classes for adults; the total state enrollment, including Chicago's, was 4,341, and the average attendance about one-third that number.

"Through the war," Miss Abbott points out, "the average citizen learned something of the number of immigrants who had never been reached by the schools, when soldiers not only entered our army but even returned from France unable to speak the language. Illinois, by the recent establishment of the immigrants' commission, is the fourth to create a state-wide agency to deal with this situation."

The report made by the Illinois commission recommends, first, that local communities shall not only be permitted but shall be required to maintain classes wherever there is a demand for them. Second, it recommends that all minors over 16 years of age who are unable to meet the educational requirements of the child labor law for work permits shall be required to attend either day or evening classes.

RATES ADVANCE; RAILROADS' NET INCOME DROPS

September Figures Show Higher Expenses.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—September, the first full month in which the increased rates authorized by the interstate commerce commission were in effect, brought in a net railway operating income $2,338,411 less than the net operating income in September, 1919.

The net operating income for September this year was $75,310,311, while that of the same month of 1919 was $77,648,722. The commission calls attention to the fact that a considerable part of the September business was "billed in August at the old rates."

Many Conditions Different.

The commission also pointed out that in the revenues for the first nine months of 1920 were included about $80,000,000 of back mail pay, while September expenses included the current effect of the increased wage award by the United States railroad labor board, as well as $2,701,364 back pay and war taxes of $3,465,271, neither of which had a parallel in the 1919 expenses.

Operating revenues were $616,200,796 in September, 1920, as against $498,211,917 in September, 1919, while expenses increased from $399,904,137 in September, 1919, to $511,482,962 in September, 1920.

Western Roads' Earnings.

The net railway operating income of the railroads in the western district, however, dropped from $45,480,057 in September, 1919, to $39,584,374 in September this year. Revenues in that district totaled $242,311,173, as against $204,882,394 in September, 1919, and expenses amounted to $188,627,806, as compared with $150,409,582 in 1919.

The railroads for the entire country for the nine months ending with September had a deficit of $87,402,050 in net operating income as compared with a net operating income of $402,344,166 in the same period of 1919.

COLUMBUS RAID VILLA WAR ACT, GOVERNOR SAYS

Santa Fé, N. M., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—Doubt that the United States was at peace with Mexico on March 9, 1916, when Villa raided Columbus, is expressed by Gov. O. A. Larrazolo, in his executive order granting a "full, complete, and unconditional pardon" to the sixteen Mexicans who participated in the Columbus raid, and were serving long terms in the state penitentiary here.

"The first question," the governor's order says, "that arises, and which creates a very serious doubt as to the actual condition of things, is this: 'Were we at peace with the republic of Mexico on the 9th day of March, 1916, when the assault on Columbus took place, or did a state of war exist between the United States and Mexico?'

Cites Seizure of Vera Cruz.

"It is a fact that contemporaneous history known to all of us that on or about the 21st day of April, 1914, our troops, under the protection of our navy, occupied the Mexican port of Vera Cruz, and in the taking of military possession thereof, a battle took place between our troops and navy on the one side, and the Mexican soldiers defending the port, in which struggle several lives were lost on both sides.

"When the struggle ended our troops had the port and city of Vera Cruz, and we retained such possession until about the 23d day of November, 1914, a period of about seven months; this act on our part certainly created a state of war between us and the republic of Mexico, even though no actual declaration of war was made; under the authorities, a state of war may, and oftentimes does, exist between nations, without any declaration of war being made by either.

"Was Peace Concluded?"

"I am not in possession of data and information that will enable me to tell whether the relations between our country and Mexico had been composed at the time the assault upon Columbus was made by the Mexican troops, so as to have changed the condition of a state of war between the two nations into one of amity and cordial relations.

"If the state of war still continued to exist these defendants would have been prisoners of war, and should have been treated and dealt with as such, according to the rules of civilized warfare, and certainly our civil courts would have no jurisdiction.

"There is another point which is conclusive in the determination of the proposition of whether these defendants are guilty of the crime for which they stand convicted. It is another undisputed fact that all of these men were private soldiers in the ranks of the army commanded by Francisco Villa. I find them to be illiterate, belonging to the common laboring class of the people of that country; they all state that they were forced and impressed into service against their will and by force.

Privates Pawns of War.

"It is a known fact that the common soldier, known as a private in the ranks, is told never what the objective of any military movement is, particularly so when actually engaged in hostilities."

Gov. Larrazolo is a native of the state of Chihuahua, Mexico. Just after signing the pardon for these sixteen raiders he left for Mexico to attend the inauguration of President Obregon.

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

The installation of the newly elected officers of Butler Brothers post No. 358 will be held at the monthly meeting in their clubrooms on West Randolph street Thursday evening, Dec. 2.

An elaborate banquet in honor of the retiring officers will be given, and many prominent speakers, including State Commander MacCauley, will address the meeting.

The new officers are: Post commander, O. C. Saunders; vice commander, E. W. Bland; adjutant, R. C. Dudley; finance officer, E. Stepper; representative member, J. A. Preider.

FORMER WARDEN TO TALK.

Thomas Mott Osborne, former warden of Sing Sing prison and author of Within Prison Walls," will address the meeting of the Unitarian Laymen's league at Kimball hall at 7:45 this evening. A string quintet from the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play.

PREFERS LIFE IN PRISON TO ONE IN ASYLUM

Nolan B. Robinson, who killed his wife's parents after he had escaped from the insane asylum at Elgin, was yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Robinson was found guilty some time ago by a jury in Wheaton, and was condemned to be hanged. Attorneys went before Judge Mazzini Slusser however, and represented that the jury had not been instructed to take into consideration the fact that Robinson had been an inmate of an insane asylum. The American Legion obtained the attorneys.

Judge Slusser granted the man a new trial. A few days ago a jury found he was sane. Alienists who examined him also found him sane. Yesterday Nolan pleaded guilty to murder, and said he was willing to take a life sentence—more willing to do that than go back to the insane asylum.

"It Keeps me warm but doesn't Itch"

Because the patented fabric is two layers knitted as one—a thin layer of pure, soft cotton that feels comfortable next the skin, and a thin outer layer of fine warm wool that keeps the body heat in, and the cold out. And the air space between the layers ventilates the body and garment.

Duofold

the Warmth-Without-Weight Health Underwear

Provides all the comfort of soft cotton and the protective warmth of wool without any of the discomforts.

Body moisture is absorbed from the inner layer by the outer layer of wool, where it quickly evaporates, keeping the garment always fresh, never clammy, safeguarding against colds. Ask your physician!

Duofold costs more than ordinary underwear, but is worth the difference because of the added protection and comfort.

Go to the nearest Duofold dealer tomorrow morning and get a season's outfit of Duofold for every member of the family. It is the cheapest health insurance you can buy.

All the following dealers sell Duofold and stand by it. Get your Duofold tomorrow.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

BRITTAIN GIVES ZONING A STIFF DIG IN THE RIBS

Names State Body to Try and Wake It Up.

BY AL CHASE.

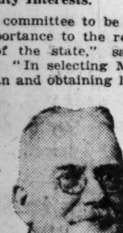
Town zoning, which many other cities already have in practical operation, but which seems to be sleeping peacefully in this neighborhood, got a fresh dig in the ribs on Wednesday at a meeting of the executive board of the Real Estate Association of the State of Illinois, which may actually wake it up.

CHARLES M. NICHOLS. [Moffett Photo.]

Joseph K. Brittain, new president of the state association, at the session held in the rooms of the Chicago real estate board, appointed a committee on municipal improvement to conduct a state-wide campaign on town planning, zoning, and housing conditions. He named Charles M. Nichols, Chicago realtor, and an authority on zoning, as chairman. The other members are F. Arthur Anderson of Rockford and E. H. Duff of Oak Park.

Vital to Realty Interests.

"I consider this committee to be of the most vital importance to the real estate interests of the state," said President Brittain. "In selecting Mr. Nichols as chairman and obtaining his consent to serve, I have secured the most able and best qualified man in Illinois.



E. H. DUFF. [Arnold (Oak Park) Photo.]

"He has been a student of zoning, city planning and housing conditions for years and has been instrumental in bringing to Chicago during the last year the ablest experts on zoning in the United States, Canada and Europe to discuss the subject before civic bodies and the city council and it was under his direction the present zoning ordinance for Chicago was drawn.

"Amendments of the Illinois zoning law must be secured from the new legislature before zoning can be made really effective in the state, and I believe that under the direction of this committee the essential amendments can be secured."

Names Legislative Committee.

Mr. Brittain also appointed a legislative committee, one representative from each board, and instructed them to select a steering committee of five, which will prepare and introduce all bills deemed necessary to the welfare of the state realtors. The four members on the legislative committee in this neighborhood are F. K. Root, Chicago; C. A. Wrightman, Evanston; C. E. Whitmore, Oak Park; and C. T. Norton, North Shore Real Estate Board.

P. ARTHUR ANDERSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

But Mr. Brittain doesn't believe in legislation for solving our housing problem.

"By the time any housing legislation could be enacted—and it probably would be found to be unconstitutional—the housing crisis would be past. The law of supply and demand is rapidly getting things adjusted and eventually will solve the problem. We don't need any legislation."

Other Steps Taken.

Several other important steps were taken by President Brittain. For instance, he appointed a finance committee, with J. B. Whitehead of Rockford chairman, Harry Goldstine of Chicago and J. W. McDowell of Peoria to have charge of the expenditure of a budget calling for $15,000 a year for three years. Plans already have been made by the committee to raise this money among the sixteen boards in Illinois.

He also announced that an executive secretary would be employed to have charge of the new Chicago office to be opened in the loop shortly.

Root Heads License Body.

He appointed Frederick K. Root of Chicago chairman of the Realtors' license committee. S. K. Hughes of Champaign was named chairman of the agricultural development committee, a body which has never functioned before, although authorized.

J. B. Whitehead of Rockford was made chairman of the local boards committee to organize new boards throughout the state. Every board is to have a new boards organization to cooperate with the state board committee.

ADDS TO WEBSTER GARAGE.

The United States Brewing company has contracted to convert the remainder of the old K. G. Schmidt brewery at Sedgwick street and Grant place into a garage and has leased it to H. T. Jurgensen, who is now operating the Webster garage in part of the remodeled brewery. The term rental will be $195,000.

Left to right, upper row—Perkins B. Bass, Paul Steinbrecher, Callistus S. Ennis, Edward S. Judd, Edward M. Willoughby, George H. Taylor, Valentine H. Surghnor, Ivan O. Ackley.

Lower row—Joseph Donnersberger, Henry A. Knott, Edmund A. Cummings, President Adolph F. Kramer, William A. Bond, Frank G. Hoyne, John F. Wallace.

Beg Your Pardon

Andrew G. Halas writes that the reported sale of the forty-two flat building at 4720-32 Racine avenue by him to Henry W. Drucker for an indicated $128,500, subject to $120,000, is incorrect. He says: "There was no sale made. I was only making a record of the one-third interest owned in this property by Mr. Drucker and hence the notice of the sale at $128,500 conveys the wrong impression of the value of this property, as I paid $150,000 for it." THE TRIBUNE'S figures were taken from the county records, which made no mention of it being a one-third interest.

The new north side office of H. O. Stone & Co. is at 1029 Wilson avenue, the corner of Kenmore, and not at 1029 Kenmore avenue, as announced in this department last Sunday.

Why?

Horace H. Herr, editor of The American Contractor, asks this pertinent question in the current issue of his paper:

"Twenty-five bank building projects were reported to The American Contractor last week. If building at present construction costs is such folly from a sound business viewpoint, will some one please explain why it is that for the last six weeks from ten to twenty-five bank building projects have been gotten under way each week? If it is good business for the banks to build new structures, why is it unsound to lend money on other building projects?"

Speechless Banquet Reveals Life Secrets of Realtors

Fourteen ex-presidents of the Chicago Real Estate board heaved a composite sigh of relief at the big turkey dinner given in their honor on Wednesday in the board rooms, when they discovered that President Adolph F. Kramer, toastmaster, had originated a brand new after-dinner idea by presenting to a talk-tired world the speech less banquet—where one man does the verbal labor of fourteen.

The 280 realtors had filled their tummies with turkey and trimmin's and had settled down to hear the fourteen ex-presidents burst forth in varying degrees of eloquence when President Kramer sprung his surprise.

He briefly remarked that so many nice things had been said by former presidents and toastmasters about realtors in general and themselves in particular, at former banquets, that they were beginning to believe them themselves. He then introduced Prof. Frederick Thrasher of the department of sociology of the University of Chicago, who he said would have the minds of the ex-presidents and others read and divulge things never heard of before by the realtors.

Bares Life Secrets.

And he did. He blindfolded Donald F. Bond, a Midway student, who interspersed the regulation "mind reading" stunts of describing articles touched by Prof. Thrasher, with comments on the ex-presidents pointed to by the professor.

"That's Ivan O. Ackley, who's going to be married soon and is now in the market for a house," he said when the last ex-president was pointed to.

Edmund A. Cummings he described as the oldest living ex-president, Edward M. Willoughby was called the board's beau brummel, and the date of "the most important event in his life," his marriage, was given. Valentine H. Surghnor was described as the board's youngest ex-president.

Calls It Great Idea.

When ex-President Joseph Donnersberger was reached the mind reader described a scene which took place in the office of the late P. D. Armour when the late Marshall Field was present, when Mr. Armour signed a bond for Mr. Donnersberger, who had just been elected a county commissioner.

"'It's a great idea, this speechless banquet,' said an ex-president after the dinner. "If they'd only adopt it everywhere, the talking part of our big dinners would be as popular as a good vaudeville show. I'm strong for it."

TWO SUBURBAN SUBDIVISIONS CHANGE HANDS

Two more subdivisions have been added to the John H. Gelhardt organization's list. Lawndale Manor, held in trust by the Chicago Title and Trust company, has been secured. This is at the northwest corner of Oak Park avenue and West Thirty-first street and covers about forty-five acres.

About two weeks ago Carl A. Carlson was deeded seventy-five lots in this subdivision and in nine days has installed seventeen cellars for new bungalows. He plans to build seventy-five. Improvements, such as sewer, water, gas, and sidewalks, are being installed and some have been completed.

Mr. Gelhardt also has secured the Riverside subdivision one block to the northwest. It contains thirty acres. It was turned over by Frank G. Hajicek, president of the Lawndale National bank, and will be subdivided and bungalows built. Improvements are all in.

$300,000 BANK BUILDING WAITS OGDEN AVENUE

Milwaukee avenue will have another monumental bank structure just as soon as the Ogden avenue extension is cut through far enough to allow work to start. The Security Bank of Chicago will erect a structure to cost approximately $300,000 at the intersection of Chicago, Ogden, and Milwaukee. It will be 150 feet northwest of the old site of the bank.

Jens C. Hansen, president of the bank, bought the new site more than a year ago for $74,000. He recently transferred it to the Standard Safe Deposit company, which is owned by the stockholders of the bank. The property fronts 120 feet on Ogden avenue extended; 78 feet on Milwaukee avenue, and 78 feet on Chicago avenue.

O. G. Shoe Co. to Move Its Clark Street Store

O'Connor & Goldberg have leased the 29½x120 four story building at 16-18 South Clark street from the Campbell estate, represented by A. Lawrence Mills, for twenty years from May 1, 1921, on terms understood to be at a net annual rental of $16,000 for the first two years and $18,000 for the balance of the term. It is now occupied by Murphy Bros., tailors. The O-G firm will move its shoe store from 6-8 South Clark street, which property was recently leased by E. F. Keebler & Co. to Stevens, Maloney & Co., stationers, for ninety-nine years from May 1, 1921, at a term rental of $1,673,000.

Big Garage Being Built at Bishop and W. Fifty-ninth

One of the largest and most complete garages in the city is now under construction at the southeast corner of West Fifty-ninth and Bishop streets. It will cost approximately $125,000 and is being erected by the McKeown Transportation company, from plans by Architect Zachary T. Davis. It is 200x125.

John Mohr & Sons Erect $75,000 Office Building

Work is now under way on a $75,000 three story fireproof office building, 50x100, at Ninety-sixth street and the Calumet river, on the west bank, for John Mohr & Sons, boiler manufacturers, from plans by Architect Zachary T. Davis.

Work Starts on New South Side Presbyterian Church

The Drexel Park Presbyterian church has just started work on a new $60,000 edifice at the northeast corner of Marshfield avenue and Sixty-fourth street on a lot 55x125, from plans by Architect Zachary T. Davis. It will be brick with stone trim and will have 500 seats. There will be a Sunday school in addition to the auditorium. The Rev. Clinton C. Cox is pastor.

Catholic Bishop Buys Site in Mayfair for Nunnery

The Catholic bishop of Chicago has purchased the entire block of frontage on the west side of Latrobe avenue, between Sunnyside and Agatite avenues, 266 feet, with a depth of 120 feet, as a site for a nunnery. The buying price was $10,000, and the sellers were Jacob M. Lenz, Fred R. Weaver, and William L. Runzie.

Realtor Notes

McKey & Poague, Chicago realtors for the last thirty years, moved yesterday from their quarters in the Woodlawn Trust and Savings Bank building, where they have been for several years, to their own office building, recently erected at 1170-74 East Sixty-third street. They maintain a loop office and five branch offices.

Steinbach & Co. of 3635 Broadway announce that on Dec. 1 they will move to larger quarters at 4021-23 Broadway, and at that time will change the firm name to Steinbach & Linehan. S. P. Linehan will become a partner.

Checker Taxi Buys Old Plant of Pioneer Truck

You've probably noticed the checkerboard decorated taxis around the loop more frequently during the last few months. Their owners, the Checker Taxi company, has been increasing their number considerably and, as a result, has been forced to secure larger quarters. The company has purchased from the Pioneer Truck company the one and two story building at 4628-48 West Madison street, lot 125x175, for an indicated $95,000, subject to $45,000, and will use it as a garage, repair shop and general offices. The main offices are now at 608 South Paulina street. The Pioneer Truck company recently opened a big plant at Valparaiso, Ind.

Umbrella Mike's Hangout Becomes Chocolate Shop

Another stronghold of demon rum succumbs to the rapid onrush of milady chocolate. It's "Johnson's" men—meaning particularly newspaper men—famous old "333" West Madison street, where Umbrella Mike in the days gone by used to rest one foot on the rail and hang his famous rainstick on the mahogany. Johnson's, which for long months after the fateful July 1 remained an oasis in the West Madison street Sahara, has been leased by Edwin Romberg to the Herman Chocolate shops for six years at a total rental of $37,925. It will be used as a candy shop with light lunches. Ralph C. Hefter & Co. represented all parties.

Mutual Produce Company Buys West Side Corner

The Mutual Produce company has purchased from Carlton L. and Charles W. Elmes the property at 914-28 Fulton street, at the northeast corner of Sangamon street, improved with a two story brick building partly covering the 150x100 lot, for a reported $165,000. The buyers, who occupy a part of the premises and rent the balance to various commission concerns, expect to extend the present buildings at once to cover the entire lot. Levinson & Hocman and John Vennema were the attorneys.

Closing hog trade was strong, with sales generally at 10c advance, the day's average at $9.97 standing highest since Monday, when the market declined around $1.00. Prevailing prices are largely $1.65@1.70 below previous Saturday.

Trade in cattle at the finish of the week was extremely dull, the few selling showing around $1.00 decline from high time of the week, with many left unsold.

Week's receipts of hogs were about the same as previous week at 173,800, the two largest weeks since May. Estimated average weight for the week at 224 lbs increased 2 lbs compared with previous week, when it was lightest of the year. Average previous week and a year ago was 222 lbs.

The average price of hogs for the week at $10.15 stood lowest since December, 1918, and 20c lower than the nine year average for corresponding week since 1918.

Sheep and lamb trade closed in bad shape, with the week's average price of sheep at $4.50, lowest since 1918, and lambs at $10.65, lowest since 1918.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 38,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 32,000 sheep, against 35,566 cattle, 31,939 hogs, and 23,876 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 75,000 cattle, 175,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 108,262 cattle, 201,653 hogs, and 113,102 sheep a year ago.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Dry goods values are very unsettled, without much sign of broad action being in sight. Production continues to decrease, but goods are offered freely, second hands at liquidation levels. Yarns were weak. Print cloths showed little more activity. Jobbers will conduct liquidation sales in several places next week, it was announced.

North American Company.

G. C.—The North American company is a holding corporation, owning and operating a number of large utilities companies, some of which are highly prosperous and one or two are not. Its consolidated income account for 1919 showed 8½ per cent earned on $29,793,300 of one class stock, compared with 5½ in 1918. The holding company has no funded debt of its own, but as its subsidiaries have large issues of bonds and notes the stock is rather "far from the ground" and not suitable for a savings investment. Dividends have been paid at the rate of 5 per cent a year for about a dozen years past.

Brief Answers.

S. T. B., Madison, Wis.—A purchase of General Motors stock would be a speculation at present. The stock is of no par value, dividends of 25 cents quarterly in cash and 2½ per cent in stock are being paid.

W. I. M., Tomahawk, Wis.—The Gillette Rubber company, the Dennos Food Sales, and the Sanitol company have not made public complete statements recently. Some information was published about them a year ago.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Bar silver, 40¼d per ounce. Money, 5½ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 6 3-16@6⅝ per cent. Three month bills, 6 11-16 per cent.

PARIS.—Prices moved irregularly on the bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 56 francs 40 centimes. Exchange on London: 57 francs 40 centimes. Five per cent loan, 85 francs 20 centimes. The dollar was quoted at 16 francs 43 centimes.

GRAINS HIGHER; EXPORTERS BUY WHEAT FREELY

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

An unexpected reduction in the selling pressure on all grains, combined with large export purchases of wheat [illegible] Manitobas and gulf, and higher rates of exchange were responsible largely for a marked change in the excessive bearish sentiment which has dominated the grain markets and brought about a substantial rally yesterday, with the close at intermediate prices.

The trade gave more attention to bullish news, and there were various reports which tended to create more confidence among holders, for the time being at least.

At the finish wheat was 3@3¼c higher, corn 1⅛@1½c, and oats ⅜@½c higher, barley ½@1c higher, while rye was 1½c lower. Provisions were strong with light pressure, and pork gained 47½c, lard 20@40c, November leading, and short ribs 25c.

Bear Week in Grains.

It has been a bear week in wheat, with the close well toward the low point of the season, and 8¾@13c lower than a week ago, December leading. In the face of the break in wheat and all the depressing influences financially and economically, corn is 2@3½c higher than a week ago, oats are ⅞@1¼c higher, rye 8¾@9c lower, and barley 1½c higher to 1½c lower, while pork is off 22½c, lard 2½c lower to 72½c higher, the latter on November, and short ribs are off 20c as compared with a week ago.

Heavy buying of wheat by houses with seaboard connections was on from start to finish yesterday. Those who do a large business for Canadian grain interests were conspicuous. The surplus was taken off the market Friday and early yesterday and reports of 2,000,000 bu taken for export at the seaboard Friday and 2,000,000 bu yesterday, making around 12,000,000 bu for the week, were the main bullish factors.

Shorts Buy Corn Freely.

Corn was bought by commission houses that have been active on the selling side all week and at the close the local element took the corn on offers. The market showed independent strength, and prices moved up 2c at the extreme, with the close ⅝@⅞ from the top. Country offerings were light. Bearish news cut no figure. Active buying of December and selling of May at 6¾c difference was credited to leading elevator interests.

With no pressure on oats, prices advanced and closed at nearly the top, although gains were small. Elevator people bought December and sold May mainly at 4c difference.

Rye was higher on short covering early, but broke toward the last after exporters stopped buying. There were give-ups on 75,000 bu for seaboard houses. Cash sales on track were 1c over December. A sale of 50,000 bu was made to go to store. Barley was firmer, with light offerings.

Provisions Close Higher.

Provisions felt the effect of better buying by shorts and small packers and of lighter offerings, with the close around the top. Shipments of lard and meats were smaller than the previous week and last year. Packing at Chicago since November 1 aggregates 530,000 hogs, or 250,000 under last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A more friendly feeling toward the buying side of grains, especally on the breaks, was expressed among traders after the close. Many expected to see higher opening Monday, but on any further advance free selling was expected to be encountered, as there is no great change in the economic and financial conditions which have had such a depressing effect. Short covering in coarse grains has been on for a week, with December corn up 3½c from the low of Friday. The bulk of the selling is regarded as having been by eleventh hour bears.

Grain prices have been on the down grade for eighty-seven days, according to Joseph Wild of E. W. Wagner & Co., and the decline in values has been one of the most severe known in the history of the trade. The problem in wheat has been to find investors. As compared with the December pre-war averages, wheat is 60@80c above those figures, corn 8@10c, oats 4c, rye 60c, and hogs 2@2c.

The effect of low grain prices on general business is beginning to disturb the trade. An instance of what has happened was given in a Winnipeg message which said a car of oats shipped from a far western point returned only 15c per bu net to the producer, or slightly above thrashing cost. Under such conditions farmers cannot buy manufactured goods freely. Members of the Board of Trade are openly criticising a banking system that they say, was unable to take care of financing the farmers when they most needed help.

A cargo of Manitoba wheat was bought to come to Chicago yesterday and is expected to arrive some time late next week. Fort William cleared around 3,000,000 bu wheat on Thursday, included in which are said to be several cargoes for Chicago.

FARM DISTRICTS STILL FIGHT SHY OF LIQUIDATION

BY O. A. MATHER.

Refusal of the agricultural districts to liquidate their commodities in the face of declining prices is reflected in the weekly statements of the federal reserve banks. It is the complaint of bankers that the process of credit deflation is being delayed because farmers will not dispose of their products and pay off their loans to any extent commensurate with the liquidation that is going on in the industries and in merchandising.

As proof of this contention is the closing of a number of small banks in agricultural communities within the last fortnight because of impairment of reserves due to inability to liquidate loans. It also is true the big city banks have been forced to extend further accommodation to their country bank correspondents to tide them over this situation.

Loans Rise, Deposits Drop.

The consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks shows an increase in loans of $62,063,000, those on government obligations expanding $33,-281,000 and those on commercial bills increasing $28,770,000. Bills bought in the market receded $27,524,000, so that total bills on hand expanded $34,532,000. Despite the increase in loans the member banks reduced their reserve account by $70,942,000. Holdings of treasury certificates of indebtedness receded $37,478,000, the expansion of last week being a temporary accommodation to the government. Total earning assets declined $2,948,000. Gross deposits dropped $104,122,000, although government deposits declined $3,-658,000. Federal reserve note circulation expanded $18,194,000. Gold reserves increased $15,506,000 and total reserves expanded $31,052,000. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined was 44.4 compared with 44.1 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, was 40.03, compared with 40.26 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, was 42.13, compared with $2.37 per cent in the preceding week.

Stock Liquidation Reflected.

The New York Federal Reserve bank showed an increase of only $1,297,590 in loans, those on government obligations declining $4,355,659, but those on commercial bills expanding $5,653,249. This slight expansion reflects the liquidation that has been going on in the securities markets. The banks reduced its borrowings from sister institutions by $27,-130,000, this item now standing at $10,-000. Bills bought declined $11,474,-981. Total earning assets declined $16,-397,531.

Gross deposits receded $35,765,540, although government deposits increased $658,268. Federal reserve note circulation expanded $6,699,650. Gold reserves increased $8,010,324 and total reserves increased $8,728,327. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined was 40.8, compared with 40 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, was 41.9, compared with 40 per cent in the preceding week.

Clearing House Banks.

The New York clearing house banks again showed a deficit in legal reserve requirements, this deficit being $4,085,-500, compared with an excess of $12,470,-380 in the preceding week and marking a decline of $16,555,880. This decline was largely the result of the banks decreasing their reserve account at the federal reserve bank by $15,692,000. Aggregate reserve declined $15,852,000.

Loans receded $13,355,000. Net demand deposits increased $5,760,000. Time deposits declined $395,000. United States deposits receded $32,609,000. Cash in vaults increased $5,150,000. The figures follow:

SPIEGEL'S Reductions on Attractive Home-Needs

Open an Extended Account

After making your selection you can arrange to pay for your purchase by monthly remittances in convenient amounts, extending your account over any satisfactory period. No interest or extras are charged—you get full benefit of our Stock Reduction Sale prices.

In our effort to reduce our stock we did not consider wholesale cost when reducing our price. We know that the greatest bargains are those bought the quickest, so we reduced those Home-Needs, of which our stock was the largest, to the lowest possible figure. Hundreds of Home-Needs not illustrated have also been sharply reduced—some to actual wholesale cost at today's market.

Blue Ribbon Fiction

OVERLOOK HOUSE by Will Payne

She stood against the wall waiting for the trolley car. All the time she was wondering, with a kind of despair, whether she had chosen the best way of going.

ROMANCE, adventure, a sinister mystery, detectives working at cross purposes, a first-class villain or two, love menaced by hidden perils, devoted married lovers—what more can you ask of good fiction? You will find them all in the Blue Ribbon serial, never before published, which begins herewith. It is a capital yarn by one of the best American story tellers, and will keep you guessing to the end of the final chapter. Start reading it now.

OVERLOOK House stands two hundred feet above the sea—as though a giant had carried out his domiciliary ideas in the renaissance style of architecture. Unfamiliar passengers in the little yachts and launches which ply those waters in the summer season sometimes mistake it for a hotel, or at least a country club, for it seems absurd that a mere family should require so much space as those gray stucco walls inclose. A battery of artillery might maneuver handily on the brick paved terrace in front of the house.

From its hilltop the house looks down to the sea across an unobstructed space, but sixty acres of carefully tended woods screen it from other points of view—running down to the asphalt public road and trolley line which skirt the western boundaries of the grounds. Passengers on that side see only a wall of dressed stone, six feet high, with the woods beyond.

"I want plenty of room," Judge Tillman Crane had said to the architect; and, having made that one stipulation, he left the other details to his wife and the architect. When he finally surveyed the result—contemplating the broad reach of gray wall and the spacious apartments within—he expressed his satisfaction in an amused chuckle. On the opposite rim of the continent there is an arid region—sere, barren, and forbidding, as though nature had spoiled it in the making and set a match to it and gone off and left it—which nevertheless teems with human activity. Gaunt derricks arise over it as though a colossal child had been repeating one pattern with a set of rude building blocks. There are many clusters of huge iron tanks, cylindrical in form, painted red or gray. Big iron pipes run interminably over the dun ground. The summer sun is

The BROOKS APPLIANCE

Always Holds

PUT on the Brooks Appliance, discard the old, uncomfortable and dangerous truss and resume all vigorous exercise. You will enjoy both your work and play, free from the annoying discomfort of bothersome and painful steel springs, knobs and pads.

Many hundreds of physicians and surgeons wear and recommend the Brooks Appliance, condemning makeshift trusses as more harmful and dangerous than any other method of retaining and treating rupture.

The Brooks Appliance is a triumph of scientific and mechanical genius, the outcome of more than thirty years' experience. The results accomplished by it are testified to by hundreds of people whose condition was identical with yours.

Painted by
F. X. Leyendecker for The Brooks Appliance Co.

Always Comfortable

YOU need not hesitate about engaging in any athletic sports that necessitate bending or twisting, or any strain upon the abdominal organs when you put on the Brooks Appliance.

You who are suffering from rupture should know that the worst support ever devised is a hard, unyielding steel spring truss, which prevents Nature from ever having a chance to restore these parts to full strength.

To save you who are ruptured from such painful, makeshift trusses, the Brooks Appliance was devised—a soft, automatic, rubber air-cushion that will give you the relief that over 715,000 people are enjoying now!

10 Reasons Why You Should Accept This Offer

1. The Brooks Appliance is absolutely the only rupture retainer embodying the principles that inventors have sought for years.
2. The appliance ALWAYS HOLDS and CANNOT be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters the flesh nor causes irritation.
4. Unlike the usual "pad," it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable and positively cannot be detected through the clothing of either men or women.
6. The soft, pliable bands do not give the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness or steel spring.
7. There is nothing to get foul—and the appliance can be washed as frequently as desired without injury.
8. There are no metal springs to rust or torture one by cutting or bruising the flesh.
9. All materials are the very that money can buy, making the appliance durable and safe to wear.
10. Above all else WE GUARANTEE YOUR COMFORT—at all times and in all positions.

THE HUMAN HAND is the best support in the world for a rupture and the Brooks Appliance most closely resembles it. When you try it you will notice at once how greatly the appliance resembles the touch of the human hand. Within an hour after you receive your Brooks Appliance you will discard forever any other kind of support. This we guarantee at our own risk, leaving the decision entirely with you.

Can you afford not to investigate and satisfy yourself, when it costs you absolutely nothing to prove what the Brooks Appliance will do for you? Entirely at our own risk, we will send you a Brooks Appliance on trial. If you want to feel your best, fill out the coupon below and mail it today!

No matter if your rupture is old and severe, or only recently developed; no matter if you are old or young, you should not fail to profit by this NO-RISK FREE TRIAL OFFER!

fierce; sand blows, cutting the face like bits of metal thrown from a gun. And everywhere there is the strong reek of oil. It flows black and pitchy into the pipe, but at a far off other end it comes out in a deluge of shiny gold. Six weeks' income from that oily desert settled the bill for Overlook House. Judge Tillman Crane gave an amused chuckle over that, too.

The servants' quarters on the third floor are as roomy as the master's apartments in most houses—even houses that make very considerable pretensions to opulence. A stairway at either end of the house leads up to them, but the stairway is shut off from the main hall by a blank door. Only one who has some business in the servants' quarters opens that door.

About 11 o'clock of a Thursday morning in the latter part of June Mrs. Lester Hilton glided northward in the main hall of the second story, approaching the door which gave to the stairway leading up to the third story. She moved quickly, her feet falling without a sound on the thick rug, her dark eyes turning nervously from side to side of the hall as though, perhaps, she feared a door might open and somebody step out to witness her movements. The blank door was straight ahead of her, but a cross hall ran to the right there. Mrs. Hilton threw an apprehensive glance behind her, but the big main hall lay empty at her back. As she looked around again a rather formidable figure strode out of the cross hall, confronting her.

It was the figure of Lena, a maid, in a maid's black gown and little white apron—tall and strongly made, but not uncomely. It was, of course, a perfectly familiar figure to Mrs. Hilton; but just now Mrs. Hilton's nerves were taut and tingling and Lena's blonde face was puckered in a scowl of wrath. The light of battle gleamed in her pale blue eyes, her lower lip protruded, her ample breast labored, her capable fists were balled—all as though she might immediately fall upon Mrs. Hilton like an enraged Valkyr.

Very naturally, then, Mrs. Hilton's nerves jumped and she drew back. But Lena herself was no less disconcerted. A look of alarm swiftly succeeded the scowl upon her face. She, too, drew back and began stammering an apology the exact purport of which Mrs. Hilton did not catch. After one disconcerted moment Lena turned on her heels and fled down the cross hall. Evidently it had not been Mrs. Hilton whom she had expected to meet there.

Looking in the direction whence Lena had disappeared, Mrs. Hilton waited a moment to compose her nerves and to consider, mechanically putting a finger up to her lips, which trembled slightly. Then she closed her lips resolutely, opened the blank door, and went upstairs. The door she sought up there was closed. She listened at the crack a moment, turned the knob, and entered the room, shutting the door behind her. It was a servant's bedroom, roomy like all the apartments in that house, with two windows, simply but sufficiently furnished. If Mrs. Hilton's purpose had been housewifely she might have noted with disapproval that the room was not in order and the bed lay tumbled just as its occupant had climbed out of it that morning. But her purpose was not housewifely. She stepped across to the open closet and at once saw what she wanted—a saffron cloak and a black straw hat, with a military air, adorned with a jaunty red feather.

She took them both, throwing the cloak over her arm and holding the hat in her hand, crossed the room swiftly, and stepped into the hall—and there encountered a second figure almost as disconcerting as the first.

Perhaps a male observer would not have been much disconcerted by this figure in any case. It was the figure of a maid, in the maid's badge of black gown and white apron, but round and lissom, with wavy dark hair, full, deep blue eyes, bowed red lips, a straight nose, and a dimple in either cheek when she laughed. She was not laughing now, however. Her blue eyes sparkled with anger, her breast heaved, her plump hands were clinched. Dashing toward the retreat of her bedroom and encountering Mrs. Hilton, astonishment swiftly overlay these signs of wrath.

"O!" she cried, checking her headlong rush. Then, as soon as she had caught her breath, she asked with a pretty touch of foreign accent: "You want me, Meesus Heelton?"

With the plunder in her hands, Mrs. Hilton could only carry it through; so she said, "Why, Katey, what's the matter?"

Katey seemed to pay no attention at all to the plunder in Mrs. Hilton's hands. Her w[illegible]gs rose upon her afresh, and with the prospect of a sympathetic listener she gave vent to them, her eyes sparkling, her breast heaving, her hands clenched.

"It's that meeserable Lena, Meesus Heelton! She think she do me up because she is beeg like a horse! I go away from here! I leave right off! I'm not goin' be used like a dog all the while. Can I help it if those foolish fellows come all the while honeying around?" She tossed her wavy head in high disdain. "I don't ask 'em come around me. I tell 'em go way and mind their own beesiness. Much I care. Not so much like that!" She snapped her slim fingers in scorn. "It's that Louis. I didn't ask him come along. All the while he comes himself. My goodness, I guess that Louis ees old enough to know what girl he wants to go with! That beeg horse Lena get her clutch on Louis like he's all made of gold and only man in the world. She declare she punch my head, Meesus Heelton. She not punch my head." Katey stamped her trim foot in outrage over the intolerable idea. "I know what I do," she plunged on darkly, palpitating with wrath. "I get me a good gun! I fix that Lena, she come fooling round me any more. Mr. Ted got a good gun. I borrow it of him." Screwing up her pretty face in the darkest scowl of which it was capable and using the most sinister tone she could command, Katey affirmed tragically, "I shoot one great beeg hole in that horse Lena!"

Mrs. Hilton—in spite of her preoccupation—was trying hard not to laugh. She didn't think that anybody ever need stand in much fear of pretty, good natured, careless Katey's wrath—fleeting as a little cloud over the sun. The girl had been employed in Judge Crane's household for several months. Under other conditions her tenure might have been shorter, for she was not a very good maid—being incorrigibly heedless and unamenable to discipline; not because she was impudent or lazy but because of a gay and childlike irresponsibility. In spite of her good nature and although she seemed never to intend it, she was always stirring up trouble—a sort of disorganizing element below stairs, like a sprightly, adventurous bluejay in a cote of sedate, orderly birds. But satisfactory household servants were hard to get, and notwithstanding her failings as a maid everybody above stairs had a liking for the sparkling, amiable, pretty creature. So Katey remained; and Mrs. Hilton now perceived that she had stumbled upon a downstairs triangle with Louis, one of the gardeners, as one angle and Katey and Lena as the other two.

So she gave Katey some soothing advice and assurances, and concluded—since the plunder was in her hands in plain view—with the statement, "I want to use your hat and cloak a little while. I thought you wouldn't mind."

"O, I not mind at all, Meesus Heelton!" Katey assured her heartily, and—her wrath already forgotten—she showed her dimples as a new idea delighted her. "I be proud for you to take 'em. You look very swell in that hat and cloak, Meesus Heelton. You got the figure for 'em and you know how to wear your clothes. Maybe you get you a hat and cloak like 'em, so?" A childlike inability to "keep her proper place" as a servant was one reason why Katey would never make an ideal maid.

"Perhaps," said Mrs. Hilton with a laugh. "I'll bring them back before long."

"O, keep them long as you like—till night—Meesus Heelton," Katey replied handsomely, dimpling.

So Mrs. Hilton went downstairs carrying the yellow cloak and the black straw hat that had a military air, with its jaunty red feather. And as she left Katey, care again took undisputed possession of her mind. The adventure had not started well. Lena had seen her, and then Katey. She had a despairing sense that she was bungling it, and she mustn't bungle it!

She was about Katey's height and build, but older—32, in fact. Her hair was darker than the maid's—dark fairly to blackness. With dark eyes and a complexion of dusky olive, faintly touched with color, she looked as though her veins might carry a strain of Jewish blood, although her nose was as straight as Katey's. Without pausing at the second story she sped on down to the ground floor. At that hour the big central hall was empty; spaciously open doors at right and left showed no glimpse or sound of occupancy. Mrs. Hilton threw the saffron cloak over her shoulders, turning up its collar, paused an instant before a mirror to settle the jaunty hat on her dark head, and fled through the back door.

This was the latter part of June, with trees and shrubs in full leaf under a bright sun; but the wind was in the north, off the cold sea, tingling one's cheeks like an icy bath. Stepping out of the house, Mrs. Hilton saw no one. The garage and stables, where men might be loitering at any hour of the day, were some distance away. She bent her head and fled toward the avenue of slim evergreens that led through the formal garden on that side of the house. At the further side of the garden she took a bridle path which wound down through the beautifully kept woods and so gained a wrought iron gate in the stone wall along the public road. There she stood against the wall, waiting for the trolley car.

Her journey from the house had been accomplished safely; she had met no one; but her nerves hurt cruelly. The tension showed in her restless eyes and a little mechanical moistening of her dry lips. All the while she was wondering, with a kind of despair, whether she had chosen the best way of going; whether, after all, it wouldn't have been better to have asked for a car and chauffeur and gone in her own proper dress instead of masquerading in Katey's clothes and going by trolley. She couldn't tell whether or not that would have been better. At any rate, she was committed to the masquerade, and she stood restlessly against the wall, waiting for the trolley, fearing that at any moment an automobile containing some one who knew her might appear, or a horseback party or a pedestrian. She kept her face down and toward the wall.

Windham lay two miles down the coast—south—from Overlook House. But the branch railroad which served that coast region ran on five miles to the village of Stony Cove, and a trolley line connected the two towns. It was to Stony Cove, at the end of the branch railroad, that she was going.

She heard, to the south, the welcome grinding of the trolley car wheels against the rails and the thin toot of the whistle for the crossroad and stepped forward to signal the car. It was most unlikely that any one she knew would be traveling by that public conveyance; her acquaintances had pleasanter means of locomotion. The public road and trolley line ran along a little valley there, with bold wooded hills on either side. The scene, therefore, had a pleasant effect of remote, primitive forest; but that effect was preserved, at great expense, by skilled landscape gardeners.

When the trolley stopped Mrs. Hilton took in its occupants at a swift glance without seeing a familiar face, and climbed into a seat in the middle of the vehicle where her upturned cloak collar would protect her in case acquaintances should pass in an automobile. The three mile trolley ride was a matter of a dozen minutes, and she alighted on the main street of Stony Cove. There was a granite quarry near by. Salty mud flats at the edge of the village, through which a tidal creek meandered, provided rare clams. In summer time the lobster fishermen found brisk demand for their catches from summer cottagers and from the resort hotels along the coast. These small and partly seasonal industries were Stony Cove's only reasons for being. The main street of the village had a weatherbeaten, bedraggled air. Mrs. Hilton had never viewed it before except from the seat of an automobile.

She remembered the sign, however, indefinitely, and saw it again as the trolley car rolled away. The sign said "Stony Cove Hotel," and was attached to the wooden awning of a narrow, sad looking three story frame structure almost innocent of paint. No one wanted to stay at this village hotel; every one wanted to stay on the shore or back in the country; the hotel had a dejected look of finding favor with nobody. Mrs. Hilton crossed the street, passed under the sagging wooden awning, opened the dingy door, and found herself in a dim, narrow hall, with a closed door on either side and stairs leading steeply up.

"Up here," said a masculine voice from the top of the stairs, and she ascended swiftly—understanding that he had been looking out of the window and had seen her alight from the trolley.

The man who awaited her at the top of the dim stairs wore his hat and a light overcoat, for it was chilly in the heatless hotel. He did not bother to remove his hat as she ascended; in fact, he did not bother to wait for her, but moved down the hall and entered a room, leaving the door open for her to follow. A glance showed that this room was the little parlor of the hotel, with a threadbare ingrain carpet and old fashioned walnut chairs and sofa upholstered in black horsehair. It occupied a corner of the building, however, and was quite light. Mrs. Hilton shut the door after her, and in the good light the man and woman silently looked at each other—a tremulous, questioning, fearing look on her face; a frown on his.

He was a handsome man, smartly dressed, but a keen judge might have guessed something unstable and undependable in his good looks. Too many nerves; flighty nerves, another judge might have said. His face was long and thin, with sloping brow and a boldly sculptured profile; his eyes were prominent—thrust forward. Altogether, in fact, his face was thrust forward; overeager, even avid. If he had removed his hat his dark hair would have showed a neat part through the middle—a vivid sort of man; one might have got the impression that it would have been somehow better if he had been a woman. There was something sullen in the frown with which he greeted her; but he was pale today, with dark circles under his eyes; and she instantly caught, behind the frown, a look of suffering. It did not occur to either of them to say "Good morning" or shake hands. The situation was too exigent for that.

She spoke first, saying: "What is it, Lester?" It was the look of suffering in his face that softened her tone.

He motioned to the sofa, and when she sat down she kept her hands in her lap. It would have been very natural for him to have wished to hold her hand and for her to have wished him to. But she had come up there with some forbidding things in her mind, and she kept her hands in her lap. He understood it well enough. There were some things in his mind, too. So he let her keep her hands to herself, and in addressing her he used her full name, like any friend, instead of the pet nickname which had once been current on his lips.

"I'm in an awful hole, Edith," he said; and then, referring to his talk with her over the telephone when he had summoned her to meet him there, he asked anxiously: "The next mail comes at 3 o'clock?"

"About 3—along in the middle of the afternoon," she replied.

"You've seen the judge since the morning mail came in?" He had asked that, too, over the telephone, but he seemed to need a reassurance.

"Yes; we were walking up and down the terrace together—the judge and Mrs. Crane and Teddy and I—for half an hour or so. We were walking there when I was called to the phone and you spoke to me."

His restless eyes questioned her a moment and he asked plumply: "You noticed nothing? He seemed as usual?"

She repeated what she had said over the wire: "Why, nothing at all. He seemed just as usual."

This was in the main mere repetition—a prologue. He must say, now, why he had summoned her there in that strange, peremptory fashion. She waited the explanation and felt the beats of her heart. He glowered at the worn carpet a moment, hating the plunge, and turned whiter; but it had to come. Obscurely and irrationally he blamed her for the necessity of having to tell her. They seemed quite safe from intrusion in that musty, dingy little parlor; completely safe from eavesdropping, since there was no place for an eavesdropper; yet he spoke very low, and the words slipping out in that bodiless way had their sinister effect:

"A letter to the judge from our office went into the mail last night. If he gets it it's all up with me."

He gave a glance around the empty room and from the breast pocket of his overcoat produced a long, creamy yellow envelope, addressed in typewriting to Tillman Crane, Esq., Overlook House, Windham. On the reverse side the flap of the envelope bore engraved directions for returning it in case of nondelivery. There was no firm name in the return card, but only a street number on Wall street.

"It was exactly like that, Edith," he said, showing her the envelope. "It will come in this afternoon's mail. I want you to get it, when it does come, before Judge Crane sees it, and put this in its place." She saw that with some sort of rubber stamp he had made a blur over the two postage stamps on his dummy envelope so that, at a glance, it looked as though it had been through the postoffice and the postage stamps had been duly canceled. In short, he had been very cunning about it. She knew he was capable of being cunning, and her heart hardened; so she still kept her hands in her lap and was looking at them as she replied, fairly in a whisper:

"I don't think I shall do it."

who had no fixed prejudices against cleanliness.

All this being so, how was to to go about the new enterprises? He had many warm friends. With a few of these he discussed his problem in detail, and he entered upon a lively correspondence with others—men of affairs, who had been his college classmates. After a month of this there came a letter and a visit to a distant city, which finally shaped his plans. Some new friend, unknown but powerful, was interested in him. When he received his honorable discharge from the army he returned to Warrensville with a new look in his steady eyes.

For a few days after his return he saw very little of Nellie. The strike had taken place and final negotiations for settlement were now in progress. She was still busy eighteen hours a day. Late one evening, however, she came into his study, and without waiting for an invitation dropped into the big chair beside the desk at which he was at work.

"Well, it's over," she announced. "They've come to terms, and for a few moments, at least, both sides are satisfied. Now I can breathe."

"That's fine," he said rather absently, finishing the sentence he was writing before he turned to her.

She fidgeted in the big chair. It was clear that she had something on her mind.

"Archie," she began abruptly, "do you realize that we're seeing practically nothing of each other these days?"

The Rev. Archie nodded. Then, courteously, but with obvious reluctance, he laid down his pen and gave her his whole attention. This was not the time he would have chosen for a "show down," but since Nell wanted one he decided to take charge of it and spring his surprise—but deliberately and after a logical opening.

"That's because we're both workers now," he pointed out, "and our free time, if we have any, doesn't happen to coincide."

"But—Archie—what are we going to do about it? Since you've begun to write those articles for the Standard Magazine and to do tutoring you're busy every minute."

"I know, dear; I'm sorry." His tone was quietly friendly, yet she felt a thousand miles away from him. "But of course you understand my position, don't you?" he went on. "If you choose to earn money, that is your privilege, and the money is your money. I cannot permit you to spend it on me or on the house. I myself must earn enough to cover our expenses, and since my parish could not pay it I had to look for it outside. Fortunately I have found it. I am now able to meet all our expenses and to leave a reasonable margin."

"But—you're working yourself to death," she gulped.

He looked at her steadily.

"So are you."

She was instantly on the defensive.

"How can you say that? There is absolutely nothing the matter with me?"

He held her eyes.

"Isn't there? Are you sleeping well these nights?"

"Well—not just recently," she hedged. "The strain of the strike——"

"Are you eating normally——"

She flushed.

"Why, I haven't much appetite—and the stuff Helga gives us isn't very appetizing."

He ignored the obvious advantage of this last admission.

"You're on the verge of a nervous breakdown," he reminded her. "Is the new work worth it?"

She turned on him fiercely.

"O, I see what you're leading up to!" she cried. "You want me to give up my work and sink back into the dead-alive existence I lived before I had it. You want me to spend half my time at housework, and the other half in church work talking to a lot of women who bore me to death, and deferring to their opinions. And all the time I'm doing these things I've got to be squeezing pennies to make both ends meet. I'm sick of it, Archie. Don't ask me to do it any more, for I can't. Every since you came home I've known we had to have that understood, and now the time has come."

He nodded.

"I know how you feel," he conceded. "I have felt it right along."

"Yet you want me to give up——"

"I'm not asking you to give up anything. I'm merely asking you to make a comparison of values. You get $1,800 a year, don't you?"

"Yes."

"And you pay Helga $600?"

"Yes—and she's not worth it," Nellie defiantly admitted. "But I can't find any one else."

"That leaves you $1,200—$100 a month. How much of that hundred a month do you think Helga wastes? You know neither of us eats much of what she cooks."

She hesitated.

"I suppose that must be considered," she admitted honestly.

"Shall we say that she wastes $25 a month? I am sure it is at least that."

"Y-e-s, I suppose she does."

"That leaves you a balance of $75 a month—about $18 a week. How much of that shall we allow for Helga's food?"

There was something of his own Nellie in the expression of her eyes as she looked at him.

"Cornering me, aren't you?" she half smiled. "Well, say $4 a week."

"That leaves about $14," he quickly pointed out, "to check up against a neglected household and parish work, a very lonely husband, and a probable nervous breakdown, with its attendant expense, which may run into hundreds. Is it worth it, dear?"

She stiffened.

"That's sophistry."

"O, no, it isn't. It's mathematics and common sense. But that's not all. I myself am now earning $1,200 extra a year. I went out for it and got it. It's not much, heaven knows, but it meets your $14 a week and sees it $11 better. Don't you think that on $2,600 a year we could get along for a time?"

She was silent. He went on.

"In all this," he continued, "I haven't even touched on the vital point. I've left that for the end. It's this: Are you happy?"

She was silent, and this time he followed up his advantage.

"For if you are, my dear, that settles the whole question. I know that you used to be happy before I went away. It doesn't seem to me that you are happy now. But if you are, as happy as or happier than under the old conditions, then we must find some way in which you can go on with your work."

Her silence held for a long minute, during which she seemed to be thinking hard.

"I could be happy, I think," she said at last, "if you were different."

"Different? In what way?"

"Why—if you didn't mind. I have the feeling all the time that you—well, as you said, that you're lonely and—and—disapproving, and that I—well—that I'm not quite playing the game."

He shook his head.

"That isn't fair," he reminded her. "Up till this hour I've made neither complaint nor criticism. But, for the sake of the argument, Nellie, tell me this: If I were as merry as a little grig, and so centered in my work that I hadn't time to worry about anything, would you be happy in this new work? For God's sake, think deeply, Nell, and give me the truth—for this is important."

This time she was silent for several minutes. Then she met his eyes.

"No, dear," she said steadily. "Of course I wouldn't. I want you, too. I want you first of all. And sometimes I'm frightfully unhappy and discouraged about my work. I can't really feel that I helped much in this strike, though they say I settled it. The girls are so headstrong and unreasonable, poor things. And I worry about you all the time. O, Archie, don't let's lose each other!"

The Rev. Archie drew a long breath.

"Now we're all right," he said, and, rising, took her in his arms.

After that he told her the plan. They were to go to a new and much larger parish the first of January, a parish which could afford to pay its pastor a living wage, a parish noted for its broad minded and successful welfare work.

"Elmhurst is a good sized city," he explained, "and you will have as much welfare work as you want, but not more than you can comfortably carry with your other duties. You will have your own income, too, for a third of my salary is to be paid to you for your share in the parish work. I made that stipulation, and the trustees, though they seemed dazed by the novelty of the suggestion, finally agreed to my conditions. Some one has got to begin that sort of thing, I pointed out. Sooner or later all parishes must pay the minister's wife as well as the minister. Why shouldn't we be the first?"

Holding her close in the big chair, feeling the softness of her wet cheek against his, the Rev. Archie felt himself in that triumphant moment very much a man. He had solved his modern problem. He had met his wife on her own ground and nobly conquered her. But, even as these gratifying reflections passed through his mind, she deftly pricked the bubble of his self-complacency.

"Then Mr. Driscoll did 'hustle,' as he promised, to get the appointment for you!" she joyously declared. "I didn't dare to ask him about it during the strike. But his biggest mills are in Elmhurst, you know, and he and I picked out that church for you last March!"

OVERLOOK HOUSE

affection for her. It tasted like aloes in her mouth.

Two minutes' brisk walking had taken her out of the village, on a fine asphalt country road, with the trolley track running along its side. There was a foot path on the other side and she kept to that. In her absorption she had fairly forgotten that her immediate purpose was to let a trolley car overtake her, and it was only in the most mechanical sort of way that she was aware of a purring rumble behind her and a yellow shape sliding past. The shape stopped just ahead and she looked up automatically as a cheery voice called:

"Hello, Katey! Hop in. I'll take you home."

She was looking at a muscular young man in a tan colored sweater, bareheaded, his thick yellow hair tumbled by the wind. Having brought his low, rangy, big headed car to a stop by the roadside, he had half turned in his driver's seat, one strong hand resting on the wheel, the other reaching over to open the door so that she could step in beside him. The natural pink of his smooth cheeks was turned bright red by the keen wind and he was showing a beautiful set of teeth in the friendliest of grins.

She had raised her eyes mechanically, and as he got a full look at her face, his grin vanished with the swiftness of a well managed transformation scene on the stage—as where a flower garden is almost instantly succeeed by a blasted battlefield. He looked amazed and stammered:

"O—that you, Edith? I thought it was Katey." And his astonished eyes were saying, "That's certainly Katey's hat and cloak!"

She was caught; but her mental processes were quicker than his, and she had had a much longer, harder discipline. So, without the least hesitation she smiled back at him and said, "Well, take me home, Teddy," and she stepped in beside him.

As his astonished eyes were still saying, "That's certainly Katey's hat and cloak," she gave a little laugh as the car started, saying, "Yes; these are Katey's things. You seem to know them!"

He frowned a bit at that jibe, although it struck home, and stepped on the gas.

"It's just between us, Ted," she went on, in confidence; "a little masquerade. You're not to tell anybody that you saw me."

"Sure not!" he replied promptly, and with a certain fellow feeling, as of two people both of whom could appreciate the advantage of not being told on.

"I mean it, you know," she said, very soberly. "Not a word to anybody that you saw me. Promise?"

"O, honor bright!" he assured her, and smiled again.

She knew that was final, and in the little pause she thought he was rather waiting for some explanation, so in order to distract his mind, she teased him with: "But you did recognize Katey's hat and cloak."

He let the car slacken somewhat; his rosy face set itself grimly; he brushed a hand over his tumbled yellow hair and looked around at her in afflicted candor. He was very fond of Edith Hilton—with that touch of filial affection which many young men have felt for attractive women of greater age. He was, in fact, 24, so that her 32 seemed far along in life to him; but in some respects he was not even 24, having been too healthy and happy and too busy with innumerable other things to grow up to his proper age. In utter and afflicted candor he unbosomed himself to her, quite as though she knew what he was talking about:

"Why, Edith, that's all rot! It makes me sick! Of course, I know Katey. Why shouldn't I? She's human, ain't she?" With intense earnestness, as though it were a vital point which some one had disputed, he declared, "She's a good little blockhead, Edith! I'd bet my neck there's no harm in her at all. She likes to flirt, and I guess the fellows she takes up with like to flirt, too! But what harm is there in that? I had no more idea that she was at that dance than anything in the world. Billy Harlow and Chet Beals and I just happened to stop there—just looked in, for greens, you know, to see what was going on. Why shouldn't I have danced with Katey? There was no harm in it in the world." He looked gloomily down the road and added, in high affliction, "Peggy's using me like a dog!"

She had known nothing whatever of the subject matter of his conversation before that; but his brief statement told her the whole book. She wanted to laugh, but knew that she must not.

"And is that why you were so tickled at the prospect of taking Katey in the car with you?" she asked—understanding that his proper masculine pride of independence had been wounded, so that he must show himself independent when a chance came.

"Why, if Katey was walking to the house and I was going there in my car, why shouldn't I ask her to ride?" he demanded. "That's only human and decent, isn't it? And then," he added darkly, "I suppose somebody would be saying I had a date with her." But he had to look around at her—hurt and appealing—and add, "Peg's using me like a dog."

A little contraction came in the woman's throat and her heart was constricted. She loved the boy and would have trusted him anywhere in any real test of manly character. But the man she had just left—also hurt and appealing—came up in her mind, and she was thinking, "They're all so much alike—crying to be petted and to have the blame thrown on somebody else." There seemed to be no reason why it should be so, but a feeling of that masculine alikeness made her heart ache. She slipped a mothering hand under Ted's thick arm, giving it a little hug, and said, "I'm sure there was no harm, Teddy; it will come out all right."

He took that bit of comfort from her gratefully and looked more composed. "It ought to come out all right, because it is all right," he said more cheerfully, adding, with another touch of gloom: "But it's foolish of Peggy to make a fuss about it."

This powerful car was covering the distance to Overlook House in less time than the trolley had taken. Soon they were sliding into the little valley which divided Judge Crane's wooded hills on the right from another opulent summer resident's wooded hills on the left. And Mrs. Hilton's nerves were tightening up again, for the next step in her adventure was now to be taken.

"Drive on to the farther gate, Ted," she said. "I'll get out there—and, mind, this is a little secret between us."

"Sure!" he repeated, and followed her directions.

She sprang out of the car, turned to give him a smile, and passed through the tall wrought iron gate. A roadway led up to the house, but, as before, she chose the bridle path, on which she was less likely to meet any one. As Ted turned his car around he had a glimpse, through the gate, of her yellow cloaked figure, topped by the jaunty red feather, going upward through the trees. Then the stone wall blotted her from his view.

Her task was to get into the house unobserved, if possible, replace Katey's borrowed garments, and then to keep Katey under her eye as 3 o'clock drew near, for Katey took the mail from the postman and distributed it to the various members of the household. Mrs. Hilton, therefore, must keep watch of Katey, get Judge Crane's letters from her, and put the creamy yellow envelope then in her cloak pocket in place of the one that had been mailed at New York the night before. All that was on her anxious mind as she followed the bridle path toward the house—especially keeping Katey under her eye.

But she was not to see pretty, heedless Katey again.

At the moment he thoroughly hated her and could have struck her with pleasure. "It's jail for me if you don't," he said.

She looked up at him then, with a woeful sense of his instability, and although she had hardened her heart she felt pity. "Tell me," she said.

He mortally hated telling her, feeling that she couldn't really understand—was a perfect blockhead about such affairs as he had to relate. Nobody could really understand. Telling it made him seem altogether in the wrong, and he wasn't so altogether in the wrong—only some accidents had happened to him. If he'd only had a bit of luck everything would have been all right, and she couldn't understand how it all really turned on nothing but a trick of luck. With that feeling about it, he hated telling her. There had been a time when he would have dealt with the crisis emotionally—and successfully—kissing her hand, pleading his cause. But, unfortunately, he had dealt with quite a number of crises emotionally, pleading his cause—crises nothing like this in importance, either. That rôle had been worn a bit threadbare; he felt that kissing her hand wouldn't answer this time. With a secret bitterness, and quite irrationally, he charged her with heartlessness on that account.

"You wouldn't understand it, Edith," he muttered doggedly. "There's a big deal going on in Hidalgo Petroleum—a great lot of oil property in Mexico and Central America. The judge and Danforth Crane are buying it. I know, because they're buying it through us. The English are buying it, too. I know that. There's going to be a big contest for control of it. I know all about it, Edith," he iterated, with a smother of anger, as though she had been denying it. "It's the chance of a lifetime to make a big killing. Of course, I bought the stock for myself. Who wouldn't?"

He looked up at her as though challenging her to deny that; but merely buying Hidalgo Petroleum told nothing to the point. He struggled with his loathness for a moment, and went on doggedly:

"We—Pennell, Hilton & Co.—handle a lot of business for the judge. He's up here playing with his horses, or cruising around on his yacht, or out at the ranch in California, or anywhere else. He telegraphs or telephones his instructions to us. But often he leaves a great lot of stuff in our hands—so we can get at it, you see, when he's out of town and wants something done about it—wants to sell it or turn it in for a consolidation and so on. For one thing, we've been holding $5,000,000 of Alpha Oil debentures more than a year. There may be a consolidation or a reorganization, but there's no particular sign of anything happening yet. Those five millions of debentures have just lain there in our hands for more than a year . . ."

She thought she knew what was coming, but he hesitated over it a moment, looking white and sick and miserable.

"I've used some of those debentures—about two million and a half. That Hidalgo Petroleum is going to come out right, Edith. It's bound to. It simply can't help it! It ought to have come out right before this, and I'm sure it would if it hadn't been for this last little ruction down in Mexico. That's holding it up; but, you see, it's all straightening out now. The buying will start up again any day. I've bought a lot of it, Edith. It's stuff the banks won't lend much on. I had to have a lot of money to carry it. I'd never have got in so deep . . ."

But that was a long, technical story, involving many convolutions of the stock market which she could not understand. Looking back, he was fairly at a loss to understand himself how he had got in so deep.

"It's bound to come right, Edith!" he urged, his low voice growing more passionate. "I'm as sure of it as that I am alive. I simply got caught in a place where I had to have money. It's sure to come out right. You know I want the money for you as much as for myself. You have your share." In spite of himself, he was taking the sentimental tack again. "I want you to have money; lots of it. I've always wanted that. You like money, and you ought to have it."

She did like money, much money—or the conditions of living that required much money; and she had taken her share of such money as there had been. To herself she didn't deny her guilt on that count, and she kept her eyes to her lap as she asked:

"What does it come to, Lester?"

"It comes to this," he answered. "The last day of every month we send our customers a statement of their account as our books show it—how much they owe us, or how much we owe them, and a list of any securities of theirs that we are holding. That statement goes out to every customer the end of every month. . . . For three months now Judge Crane's statement has been handed to me before it was mailed. I've changed it—doctored it—so that it showed all the debentures on hand that he left with us."

For a moment he looked at her very miserably, and a kind of limpness overcame him, as though he had subtly wilted. "Of course, we have to keep a record, with receipts for the securities that are passed out, and all that. I've forged the judge's name. That's what it amounts to."

Her eyes fell and moistened with pain; she put a finger up to her lips.

But, having made that bald confession, he immediately reacted, in characteristic fashion, and exclaimed bitterly: "It would have been all right except for that ass Pennell! . . . Pennell! He doesn't do two hours' real work in the office in a week. He can't! He doesn't know enough! He just stands around with his air of a fine gentleman and a leading citizen and a connoisseur and all the rest of his rotten bunk!" By way of summing up his wrath and contempt he blurted: "If Ed Pennell's sister hadn't married Judge Crane, Ed Pennell would be playing second fiddle in a suburban theater today—and getting fired because he couldn't play in tune!"

That was, more or less, an old story to her, although he had never before expressed it with such heat. She might have reminded him that if Edward Pennell's sister had not married Judge Crane, and if she herself had not been a friend of the Crane family, there would have been no stock exchange firm of Pennell, Hilton & Co. doing a very flourishing business because it enjoyed the patronage and influence of Judge Crane and his son, Danforth Crane; and, in that case, Lester Hilton would probably still have been the rather hand to mouth curb broker and obscure promoter that he was when she married him. But she didn't wish to remind him of that; her mind was occupied by things of far greater importance than his childish jealousy of Edward Pennell.

"I do the work," he affirmed bitterly, "and Pennell pockets 60 per cent of the income! He never does anything at the office except to ball something up. There would be no trouble now if he hadn't butted in." Finally, he had to blame somebody else, and Pennell was the most convenient person to blame.

With a little touch of weariness she asked: "What did he do?"

He saw that she wasn't sympathizing with him in his blaming of Pennell, so he replied somewhat sulkily:

"I've told you that we send out statements to our customers at the end of the month. It's always been done that way. But this affair of Tillson, Crompton & Co. came up. They're brokers, same as we are. They made a rotten failure, and it turned out that they'd been taking securities of their customers that lay in their hands—practically embezzling 'em. That gave Pennell a great little idea. Without saying a word to me about it, he got in an auditor to go over our books and check up the securities on hand and send out statements to our customers, with a circular letter asking the customer to check up the statement and report whether or not it was correct. He thought that would be a fine stroke of business—doing it unexpectedly, you know, on the eighteenth of the month, without notice to anybody in the office; and then if there was anything wrong we'd find it out."

Of course, something was wrong; very wrong indeed; two and a half million dollars of Judge Crane's debentures were missing. His silence, as he glowered pallidly at the floor, took that wrongness into account.

"And then—to show you what an ass he is—he up and told me all about it," he added. "It was just by accident. I ran across him in the Metropolitan club about half past 6 last night, and he up and told me all about it—just what he'd been doing. He said that in order to prevent any possible leak in the office he had decided to keep it strictly to himself, but now that it was done he wanted me to know about it—expecting me to admire and approve his wonderful sagacity. The statements had been put in the mail that afternoon."

His breath seemed to fail him on the last words. He swallowed and rubbed his clammy hands together as in imagination he lived over again that awful fifteen minutes at the club when he had been compelled to sit still and look unruffled while the unsuspecting senior partner blandly explained that those statements had been made out and put in the mail. He mechanically wiped the cold sweat from his brow, and when he looked up at her again she knew that he was suffering like a man on the rack.

"There I was, you see," he went on. "The statements were already in the mail. I couldn't stop 'em. I knew the only chance on earth was to catch that statement up here before it fell into Judge Crane's hands. Of course, I didn't dare wire you and I didn't dare trust the long distance telephone with an explanation that you would understand. It was after 6 o'clock then—near 7 when he got through talking. But I remembered from last summer that the night mail from New York often got up here after luncheon. I had to bank on that. I went down to the office and fixed up this other statement of Judge Crane's account." He tapped the long, creamy yellow envelope in his lap. "Then I caught the night train to Boston and the first morning train up here. I thought that ought to give me time to beat the mail. I remembered this place at the end of the railroad and that there was a little hotel there."

That was, pretty nearly, the end of the story, and the climax. The defenses and alibis which his weakness and vanity were always building up around him sort of caved in. He looked humbly at the charming woman beside him—in a maid's borrowed hat and cloak. In spite of himself his low voice shook: "So I telephoned you from here, Dodo—that you must come at once, life or death, and let nobody know about it. I knew you'd help me out; it's life or death to me. If Judge Crane gets that other statement, showing half his debentures gone out of our hands, it's all up with me."

She kept her eyes to her lap, but he felt that she yielded.

"Of course, I don't want to hang around here," he explained. "Somebody might see me and start up some talk. I want to catch that twelve-forty train back to Boston. . . . It's perfectly easy, Do. Just watch for the mail and slip this letter in the place of the other one. You have the run of the house down there. You can do it easily—and that will be the end of it. I know it's going to come out straight in two or three weeks. I know it!" he repeated with energy. "We'll be fixed for life. . . . You can do it easily. I trust it to you, and take the train back to Boston at twelve-forty."

Her eyes were still stubbornly downcast; her mind was full and a-throb, and her heart also. There was a good deal to be said—and of the highest importance—but she felt that this was not the time or place. Just now she must decide whether she would save him or ruin him; and as to that there could really be no debate. She looked up at him, reached over, and took the letter and arose swiftly.

He had been sure all along that she would yield; but her manner of doing it rather daunted him. For a moment husband and wife looked at each other, she standing, he on the sofa. She saw his pallor, the stamp of suffering on his face; and she saw clearly his naked weakness and instability.

"Come up Saturday for the week end, Lester; we will talk then," she said low.

"I will," he promised with a touch of eagerness, as though he were being let off lightly.

She had discovered a pocket on the inside of her borrowed cloak and she slipped the letter into it. And then, unexpectedly to herself—illogically—she stooped quickly and kissed his brow before going swiftly from the room. There was a suggestion of farewell about that; and two minutes later he was indulging a resentful feeling of being misunderstood and unappreciated.

Mrs. Hilton went down the dim stairs and out into the bedraggled village street, her mind in a tumult. There was no trolley car in sight and she walked briskly on up the road, where, in time, a car would overtake her. She was aware of her disguise, and that was an item in the humiliation that searched her heart. She hated shabbiness, and this was shabby enough! There had been some shabbiness all through.

She had not been married very long before discovering that captivating, vivid, dashing Lester Hilton—with his subtle, appealing air of ill luck, gallantly borne—was somewhat shabby inside. Automatically she had sought to hide it, as a woman with proper pride seeks to hide the patched place in the rug by putting something over it. Her married life with him—six years of it now—had been more or less a progressive discovery of patched places. The great windfall of the Pennell, Hilton & Company partnership had promised to set everything right; but she felt now that he was a man who could stand prosperity even less than adversity. When he telephoned her from the Stony Cove hotel that forenoon her prophetic heart had prepared her for something shameful—but hardly as shameful as this.

Her standing in the Crane family was almost her dearest possession. No doubt, as her husband had said, this would be easy enough—as easy, for example, as stealing one of Mrs. Crane's brooches. But there was fairly the bitterness of death itself in the thought that she was going back to Overlook house to betray and outrage her friends' phone around a bit. But he would not do that. He would wait and rest and let the blessed peace of home sink into him.

His glance fell on his familiar desk, and he blinked. It was no longer familiar. Its polished surface was dim, and littered with a miscellaneous collection of letters, circulars, and pamphlets, heaped in utter confusion. That was the way Nellie used to keep her desk. The memory brought understanding. In his absence, of course, Nellie was using his desk, and carrying on her correspondence with characteristic lack of order and system. He got up and looked around the room. There was a lack of order and system there, too. There was also a lack of polishing and dusting. Things had been disturbed and changed about. All that was natural, he reminded himself. He had been away eighteen months.

He left the study and entered the living room. There, too, was the same effect of—well, neglect was the word. The house simply didn't seem at all like Nellie's. She had always taken such pride in the place and in keeping it immaculate. Nellie was not systematic, but she was extremely neat. She was a good cook, too. How often, in camp and in the trenches, he had thought of Nellie's cooking. A glance into the dining room, with its array of dim silver on the sideboard, was all he cared to take. Plainly the apparition was not given to passionate cleaning. He smiled and returned to his study. Compared to most of the quarters in which he had lived for eighteen months, the dusty, cluttered little room was a heaven. He dropped into his chair, closed his eyes—and opened them abruptly.

A key was turning in the front door lock. Even as he sprang to his feet with pounding heart the door opened. A babble of voices filled the hall, accompanied by the sound of many moving feet. Highest of the voices was Nellie's.

"Come right into my study," she was saying. "It's cozier there——"

The words died on her lips. She gasped, smothered an hysterical scream, and rushed into the arms that opened to receive her. Behind her a crowd of girls and women, a dozen or fifteen in all, watched with fascinated interest the reunion between the minister and his wife.

Neither Nellie nor the Rev. Archie ever recalled what was said in those first moments of his home coming. For a few rapturous seconds both forgot the presence of their audience and clung to each other, wet eyed. Then there were the inevitable explanations—the why—didn't—I know—I—sent—it—I—never—got—it banalities of a meeting. And then, on a sudden realization, the Rev. Archie released his wife and looked questioningly at the audience. The glance reminded Nellie of the group she had forgotten. She gurgled into half tearful laughter.

"O, Archie, and I've got my committee here," she babbled. "And—O, girls, this is my husband, just back! I know you'll excuse us—of course you understand—I want you all to meet him——"

She was bringing them forward now, one by one. Elsa Linsky, "one of my best girls," who shook hands in speechless awe; Eva Muratore, "who is my right hand worker"; Mrs. Stransky, "who was so wonderful during the last strike. You know I wrote you about it, Archie."

In a daze, with a big question running through it, her husband shook hands with every one. The women filled the room and overflowed into the hall. They were losing their awe of him and talking loudly and in several tongues. He realized now who they were—the factory girls of the committee Nellie had appointed soon after she accepted the position of head of the welfare work in the Centi silk mills last year. She had written him about it at the time, but he had not taken it in. It was at this point that the question in his mind was answered.

Nellie was looking puzzled, confused, unhappy.

"Archie dear," she said, "I've got the girls here for a very important meeting. There's another strike threatened. I could hardly get some of them to come. Now that I've brought them we simply must talk things over. I'm——"

He helped her out.

"Of course, dear. I understand. I'll run upstairs and freshen up a bit. Perhaps in an hour or so——"

She interrupted with breathless eagerness.

"Yes, dear, if you only will. And we'll surely be through in an hour. The girls won't want to stay longer than that, anyway. You don't mind? You're sure? O, Archie, to think you're really home!"

She went with him to the door, but more with an effect of hastening his departure than one of lingering companionship. On the threshold, however, she hesitated, then crossed into the hall with him and partly closed the door.

"You're sure you don't mind, darling?" she whispered. "I'll get rid of them just as soon as I can. You know that——"

For an instant she clung to him, looking up into his eyes, while the expression in hers told him all she had not said in the crowded moments of their reunion. With a throb of thanksgiving he held her close and laid his cheek against hers in a wordless caress.

"You'll find your dressing gown on its old nail in the closet," she called after him as went upstairs. The Rev. Archibald whistled softly as he undressed and waited for the bathtub to fill. Whatever the changed condition of her life might be, the heart of his Nellie had not changed. He was sure of that, and nothing else mattered.

This theory he tried to convey to her in the long talk they had late that night, as she lay in his arms. Wretchedly they had faced an unwelcome fact. He had only three days' leave, and those three days would be among the busiest she had ever known. The strike was imminent. The heads of the factory were desperate. She had more influence with the girls than any one else. From morning till night she must be at headquarters, and there were night conferences and calls that she could not ignore. A strike would mean such long drawn out misery. Manufacturers and employés were equally determined. If she had only known that Archie was coming! But, of course, he hadn't even known himself till he sailed—and she had failed to receive his cable, as well as his telegram. And he must go back to camp in three days—it was all too awful! But he would get his final discharge in a few weeks, and then she hoped to be able to readjust her work——

It was at this point that the encircling arms of her husband slightly relaxed.

"But, dearest," he protested, "surely you don't mean that you're planning to keep this thing up indefinitely. Why, the war is over!"

He was conscious of a corresponding relaxation of his wife's grasp.

"War work has been only a part of my work, Archie," she pointed out. "Factory work won't be over, and the labor problem will be the biggest we have to face. That's my real work, you see. I've built it up. I've made myself a power—in a small way, of course," she added modestly. "I'm doing what I have always wanted to do since I was in college. I'm helping, too—I really am, Archie. And there's another point, you know," she hurried on, as he remained silent. "We need the money. We can't possibly live in these days on your salary of $1,400. We fell $300 behind the last year you were here. We'd have been $400 behind last year, and more than $600 this year, if it hadn't been for my salary. I have figured it all out."

His attention was caught and held by one word of her address.

"Salary?" he echoed. "Do you mean to say you're on salary?"

"Why, of course! I wrote you all about it. The factory people are paying me $1,800 a year, and Mr. Driscoll, the president, says they'll do better next year. I wrote you about it."

"I never got that letter."

The Rev. Archie spoke confusedly. Eighteen hundred dollars a year! His wife was earning that! And his salary was $1,400—all his church could pay. Deep within him an impulse, fierce and primitive, clamored its protest. His wife was earning more than he did, and however faithfully he labored he could not hope for a higher return from the poor little parish he loved. It was not the sordid question of the money that his soul considered. He was not concerned with the purchasing value of dollars and cents. He only felt, abysmally and unanalytically as yet, the injustice of his position. He had worked hard always. He had prepared himself reverently for the call to the service he had chosen. He had made good in his field. Then he had offered his life to his country and had lived in indescribable horror for months, and had returned, master of his soul and mind and body, for what? To be partly a dependent upon his wife—to live, partly at least, on her earnings!

Further than this he did not let his thoughts go. He was suddenly conscious of a great weariness of that tempered soul and body—and the only one to whom he could have turned for comfort was the one who would not understand. He gulped like a wretched small boy. Then, close beside him, from the darkness came her cooing voice.

"But we're not going to discuss these things now, darling," it said maternally. "You're tired. Go to sleep, and we'll talk over everything tomor——"

She checked the words. She would not have time for him tomorrow, or the next day, or the next. She must be "on the job," as his boys would have put it. She would not have time for him till he got his discharge and came home and adapted himself to her leisure hours. A deep sigh broke from him, stifled by the sudden pressure of her lips on his.

"But, O, Archie! What does anything else matter?" she whispered. "You've come back—and we've got each other——"

The next morning the Rev. Archibald strode into the dining room with his head back and shoulders swinging. It was a glorious day, and he felt equal to anything, though the sight of Nellie, already at the breakfast table with her hat on and poring with puckered brow over a mass of mail, brought him a momentary but intense twings of feeling.

"O, there you are, dearest," she said, glancing up with a worried frown as he stopped by her chair. "I was so afraid I'd have to go before you got down."

She returned his kiss almost perfunctorily, but on an obvious afterthought and with swift compunction drew down his head and kissed him again. Then, rising, with an efficient gesture she swept the mass of mail into a large hand bag and pushed her chair back into place with one knee.

"I must rush off now," she said with the new effect of breathlessness he had observed the night before. "I'm ten minutes late as it is. Helga will give you your breakfast. I'm sorry it isn't better. She's not a good cook, but she was the best I could get. If I had known you were coming——"

She was standing by his side now, with one hand on his shoulder.

"O, Archie!" she broke out. "This is all so maddening for you! Don't think I don't realize that——"

He smiled up at her, patting the hand on his shoulder.

"Never mind," he said. "It's all right. Trot along."

"But—what are you going to do?"

"O, I've got a lot to do. I'll see Dixon, for one thing, and get a line on his work——"

She nodded, relieved, and her face brightened.

"Good-by, then. I'll try to get back for lunch."

The door closed after her, and her husband stared down at his plate. She would try to get back to lunch! He found himself stupidly repeating the sentence. It formed into a sort of refrain. She would try to get back to lunch——

An odor of breakfast entered the room, accompanied by Helga. That young person's master accepted in silence the soggy muffins she served him, and a pair of boiled eggs which he masticated with difficulty. The lady's conversational overtures he politely rejected.

When he had finished the meal he seized his cap and swung out of the house for a long walk, carefully selecting an unfrequented back road. He had much to think about, and a tramp in the country would give him the best opportunity for meditation. It was a hot day, but when he passed the outskirts of the town and found himself in the open country his heart grew lighter. After all, wasn't he acting a good deal like a disappointed schoolboy in taking so seriously an inevitable economic adjustment in which he and his wife must share as well as others? Undoubtedly, in thousands of American homes this morning, other returned soldiers were facing a similar problem.

He was his sane and optimistic self at 11 o'clock when he dropped into his substitute's bachelor quarters. Dixon received him warmly.

"I've been over to see you," the substitute explained. "I wanted to catch you before you left the house. I hadn't heard till breakfast time that you were back. Home to stay, I hope."

The Rev. Archie explained and Dixon's face grew sober.

"Then you may not be back permanently for a month or so," he said blankly. "That's pretty bad. You see, I——" Despite his effort, his manner grew complacent. "I've had another call. I'm only waiting till you get home to drop things here."

Finding his hearer interested, he went into details. He was going to Brockton, a larger place than Warrensville, and offering better—er—good opportunities. The stipend, too, was more generous. He was to have $2,400 a year. On that a single man could worry along, even in these times.

Young Mr. Dixon was not a tactful person. He suddenly realized that he was putting his foot into it. Poor Mason was getting only $1,400, and he had a wife to support. But of course the wife was earning a lot now. That would help. He wondered how the Rev. Archie liked the new conditions. Indeed, the whole town was wondering over that. Young Dixon reddened self-consciously.

The other man put him at ease with a few friendly words of interest and congratulation, and the talk shifted to parish matters. Conditions were unsettled because human beings were unsettled. There was an immense boiling and seething even in this little social caldron of Warrensville. Everybody wanted something different. People didn't know quite what they wanted, but they were bound to get it, and get it quick.

From his trustees, later in the day, the minister got the same impression of local unrest, of lack of interest in church affairs, of a "divine discontent" that took the form of yelping for higher wages, whether or not the workers were worth them.

"It will take some doing to get folks back into the fold," said his favorite trustee. "Frankly, young Dixon wasn't the man for this place. He did his best, of course, but he hadn't the strength nor the hold over people that you've got. I guess you can bring 'em to time," he comfortably added.

His hearer digested this in silence. Dixon, who had not the strength for Mason's job, and who could not hold the Warrensville parish together for a year and a half, was moving on to a larger field, with larger opportunities and a larger income, while he, who had the strength, remained behind to build up what the other had allowed to disintegrate. Abysmally, though he would not yet allow the thought to take shape, the Rev. Archie began to suspect that there was something wrong with the world. Also, another refrain began to echo in his mind: "The laborer is worthy of his hire!"

His companion, a shrewd man in his simple way, understood his silence.

"I wish we could give you more money here," he said, going to the point with characteristic directness. "I tried hard to put through an increase. I might have got $1,800 for you, but just before the meeting the trustees heard about your wife's new work and income——"

The nerves of the Rev. Archie, already somewhat sorely tried that morning, suddenly snapped. His brown face whitened.

"So," he said coldly, "because my wife was temporarily earning some money my parish decided to let me live on her. That is the idea, is it?"

The older man looked confused, but snatched at the lifeline of a word in the minister's speech.

"We didn't think it was temporary," he defended. "We understood that Mrs. Mason has taken the work permanently. She's getting a fine salary for a woman," he ended, pacifically, "but I guess she's earning it. Driscoll, the president of the mills, told me yesterday she was working about eighteen hours a day just now."

"Yes, she is," conceded Mrs. Mason's husband, rather grimly.

"I hear she's hired a girl, though," contributed his friend, "that she's paying $50 a month to. So I guess you're looked after all right, eh?"

Mr. Mason robustly asserted that he was looked after all right, and the conversation returned to parish interests. But three days later the minister went back to camp taking not only his problem with him, but some very definite theories concerning it. He had no wish to shirk an issue which must be met. It was the Rev. Archie's habit to look life in the eye. Looking thus at it now, and sustained by the Biblical authority which concedes that even ministers may expect a fair compensation for their labors, he thought he found his answer. In fairness he could not interfere with his wife's new activities, even though in following them she was obviously shirking the obligations she had assumed in his church and home. The thing for him to do, he reasoned, and the only way in which he could preserve his self-respect, was to beat Nellie at her own game.

First, he must earn more money than she did. Second, he must put her part of his church work into other capable hands. Third, he must wrestle with the servant problem and find a cook who could cook and

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE LITTLE FOLKS HAVE A PARTY. BY WM. DONAHEY.

"GENERAL," said the Lady of Fashion as she drew up a chair and sat down in front of the Teenie Weenie fireplace, "we ought to think about paying up some of our social debts."

"What's a social debt?" asked the Clown, who was lying flat on his Teenie Weenie stomach on the caterpillar fur rug in front of the fire.

"A social debt," answered the Doctor, "means that when you have been entertained by your friends or invited to a party you must pay them back by inviting them to one of your parties. After you have gone to a party you are in debt until you have paid them back with a party."

"J-J-Jinks! Let's pay up our debts," shouted the Dunce, who had visions of a party with lots of good things to eat.

"We owe so many of our friends some sort of entertainment that I thought it would be a good thing to have a big party at the schoolhouse," suggested the Lady of Fashion.

"What social debts do we owe?" asked the General.

"Well," said the little lady, "we were entertained with a lovely nut dinner at Mr. Squirrel's which we have never paid up. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Mouse have entertained us twice and Tilly Titter had us to her house warming."

"Well, I think we had better give a party," said the General, "for we certainly want to treat our friends right."

"We ought to invite the Rhyming Rabbit," said the Poet, who was fond of the gruff old rabbit.

"Land sakes!" answered the Old Soldier, glaring at the Poet, "why, that rabbit couldn't get into the schoolhouse; he's too big."

"When are we going to have the party?" asked the Dunce.

"I think it would be nice to have it next Saturday night—November the 27th," said the Lady of Fashion. "That would give me time to finish my new evening gown."

"Ah, jinks, j-j-j-jimminie fishhooks!" bellowed the Dunce, "we don't have to wear dress suits, do we?"

"Why, certainly," answered the Lady of Fashion. "You don't expect to go to a party with your everyday clothes on, do you?"

"Ah, crickety Jim guns!" wailed the Dunce, "m-m-m-my dress suit is so blamed tight I won't be able to eat anything." And the poor Dunce looked quite dismal as he gazed into the tiny fireplace.

The next day the Teenie Weenies set to work getting ready for the party, and that afternoon the tiny invitations were written and sent out to the invited guests.

The Turk Gogo and the Dunce sawed open a big hickory nut and removed the meat, with which the Cook made a huge hickory nut cake, as round as a dollar and fully half an inch thick.

The Indian reported that he had seen a bottle of cream which had been standing on the back doorstep of a house for two days. As the people who lived in the house were away, the General decided it would not do a bit of harm to take enough cream out of the bottle to make ice cream.

The Indian, the Sailor and the Cowboy carried some buckets and a ladder over to the house where the bottle stood, and, climbing to the top, they soon lifted the paper top and dipped up four buckets of cream.

The little fellows carried the cream to the shoehouse, where Paddy Pinn made two thimblefuls of delicious ice cream.

All the desks were cleared out of the schoolroom and the place was decorated in blue and yellow under the direction of the Lady of Fashion.

Saturday afternoon the Teenie Weenies washed and scrubbed until they fairly shone. In fact, they used so much water they emptied the big water tank, which holds almost a tincup full of water.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Mouse were the first guests to arrive, but they were soon followed by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mouse and Tilly Titter, the English sparrow.

The Squirrel was late, but he explained matters after he had squeezed himself through the tiny doorway—that he had been chased up a tree by a dog and was forced to wait a bit.

The guests were met at the door by the General and the Lady of Fashion, who welcomed them to Derby Hall.

The Lady of Fashion was never more beautiful, and she was kept busy all evening, for every Teenie Weenie man wanted to dance with the little lady.

After a wonderful dinner had been served the floor was cleared and the little folks and their guests danced until a very late hour. In fact, the sun was peeping over the eastern hills when the Teenie Weenies crawled into their tiny beds.

The REVEREND ARCHIE RECONSTRUCTS

by Elizabeth Jordan

Back from the War, He Learns a Thing or Two About Life and the Girl He Left Behind Him

THE REV. ARCHIBALD MASON covered with one stride the three veranda steps leading from the garden path to the front door of his modest home. Being young and athletic, the Rev. Archibald could do this. At the door he stopped, and with a slow, ecstatic, boyish grin plunged his hand into his pocket for his latch key.

It was all exactly as he had pictured it, this homecoming, and he had pictured it a thousand times—in camp, in the trenches, on battlefields, and even at the bedsides of dying men, who had died with a hand in his and with dimming eyes upon his face. His "boys" had loved "the Rev. Archie," and the Rev. Archie had loved his boys, but in making with them the tragic journey through the dark valley he had often found himself looking back for the light that would guide him on his return to the living world—the light of home. Some day he would go home again—back to his flock, back to the New England village where he shepherded that flock, back to his tiny house—back, and here the Rev. Archie always drew a deep breath—back to Nellie!

He had been married to Nellie five years when the war broke out, but their romance was still as wonderful as on the day he had given her the first kiss—which, incidentally, was on the day he had been ordained. Through eighteen months of filth and stench and vermin and heroism and exhaustion and indefatigable service he had dreamed of Nellie and of his home coming when peace dawned. And now he was home, just as he had dreamed it—in the warm dusk of a summer night, and beyond that door was Nellie, who, of course, had received his telegram, but would naturally expect him to ring the bell when he arrived. Nellie didn't know how he had cherished that latch key—how, throughout the months of his absence, it had been his talisman, always within reach of his fingers.

The smile on the features of the Rev. Archie suddenly faded and was replaced by an expression of bewilderment. Yes, that latch key had always been within reach, in this right hand pocket; but, by Jove, it wasn't there now. Where was it? He began a frantic search through the pockets of his uniform, half fearing, half hoping, that the door would fly open in the interval, and that Nellie, whose strained ears might have heard his cautious footfalls on the garden path, would gather him in. That would be wonderful—but not quite so wonderful as to unlock the door himself and walk in as casually as if he had not been away at all.

His nervous search continued unrewarded. The key he had carried for eighteen months had disappeared within the last eighteen minutes, for he remembered taking it out just before the train reached the home station. His fingers had trembled as he did so; evidently, in slipping the key back he had missed the opening of the pocket and the key had dropped on the floor of the car. The little disappointment was absurdly poignant. He had so loved his dream! He had so planned all the details! No one but Nellie was to know of his arrival till morning. He and Nellie were to have that first evening quite by themselves after he had walked in——

The Rev. Archie's boyish smile reappeared. What was he fussing about? He touched the button of the electric bell and heard the response inside. In another instant——

The instant passed and brought no sound of footsteps. It brought, however, a sudden realization of the fact that the house was dark. In his previous absorption in the detail of the lost latch key he had not observed this. Now it puzzled him. Surely Nellie would have had the house ablaze—yet, no, of course she wouldn't. Nellie knew what that might mean—the spreading of the news of his return, the coming of neighbors and friends. No, Nellie would feel as he did. This first evening must be theirs alone.

He heard footsteps now, but they were not Nellie's. They were slow and indifferent steps. Slow, too, was the opening of the door—a limited opening of a foot or so, in which appeared a small, unfamiliar figure surmounted by a head on which he caught the detail of a mass of pale hair. Also, over the shoulder of this apparition he saw the reflection of a light at the far end of the house—probably in the kitchen. It was all very unexpected, and before the Rev. Archie could fully take it in the apparition addressed him.

"Mis' Mason she not home," it stolidly announced.

"O!"

For an instant, stunned into speechlessness, the Rev. Archie stared blankly at the apparition.

"But—I telegraphed," he stammered.

Something that might have been defined as a beam of intelligence illumined the features of the apparition.

"Tel'gram in hall," she announced; "yust come. Mis' Mason she not home."

Gently but firmly the Rev. Archie pushed open the door, passed the apparition, and stood in his own front hall.

"I am Mr. Mason," he pleasantly announced as he did so. "Come into my study, please, and we'll get some light on this matter."

Much light had already dawned. The apparition was, of course, a general housework Nellie had engaged—though why she should need, in his absence, a luxury she had never been willing to have when he was at home, was a problem he did not attempt to grapple with in this moment. Passing the hall table, he saw the dim oblong of his unopened telegram. He had sent it late, because he had not known until he reported how soon his leave would begin—and then it had been further delayed. He entered his study, dropped his traveling case, turned on the electric light, tossed his cap on a table, dropped into his familiar desk chair, and smiled up at the apparition, who smiled doubtfully in return. Things were moving rather rapidly for the slow mind of the apparition.

"Now, let's get this straight," suggested the master of the house. He was rapidly recovering his habitual poise, though the shock of his reception had been great. "Where is my wife?"

The apparition looked vague.

"I not know," she confessed. "She go way, 2, 3 o'clock. Not come back."

For a few rapturous seconds both forgot the presence of their audience.

The Rev. Archie started to his feet.

"Not come back?" he gasped. "Not come home to supper? Something must have happened to her!"

The apparition shook her head. A pale smile disturbed the habitual mask of her face.

"Not'ing happen," she observed reassuringly. "Often like dat—not come supper."

The Rev. Archie sat down again, suddenly and in response to the prompting of his knees. Not coming home to supper often, and yet employing a servant to look after her—— But those were side issues. He attacked the immediate problem.

"Where is Mrs. Mason most likely to be just now?" he asked briskly, with an instictive movement of a hand toward the telephone on his desk.

The apparition looked blank.

"Not know," she repeated. "Maybe club, maybe canteen, maybe committee—Mis' Mason she all time busy."

"O. And she's well?"

"O, yaas, she well."

The husband of Mrs. Mason reflected. He understood the whole thing now. War work, of course, and Nellie would be in it up to her pretty neck. She was that kind, Nellie was. No half-way measures for her. Also, it was right that she should be that kind. Naturally, as the minister's wife, she would lead the activities of the women in his church; for Dixon, who was temporarily filling Mason's pulpit, was a bachelor. He remembered now that she had written about the new work, though never in detail. He smiled again at the apparition, who suddenly decided that the new master was "nice man" and singularly easy to look at.

"All right," he said cheerfully. "No doubt Mrs. Mason will soon come in. Meantime, I'll make myself at home. By the way, what's your name?"

"Helga."

"Very well, Helga. That will be all."

The apparition struggled against a humane impulse and lost the fight.

"You want some supper?" she asked.

He shook his head.

"Not till my wife comes," he loyally declared. "Then perhaps we'll fix up something together. We've often done it before."

He nodded a friendly dismissal, and the apparition moved cumbersomely toward the door. On the threshold it paused, struck by a thought.

"Maybe Mis' Mason she not come soon," it predicted, and respectfully closed the door behind itself.

Left alone, the minister leaned back in his chair, clasped his hands behind his head, and frowned reflectively. The details of his dream were not as he had dreamed them, but the dream itself had come true. He was at home—in the dear, familiar study he had hardly dared hope to see again, and somewhere in the little town was his Nellie, well within reach, no doubt, if he cared to tele-

When that old Museum was new and beautiful the Franklin was a successful air-cooled car

Twenty-two years ago the first Franklin was put on the road. It had an air-cooled motor with valves in head. It still runs satisfactorily. And today the new Franklin Sedan stands as the most successful car ever built—if you measure car success by things that count.

Riding comfort, as known to Franklin Sedan owners, is tangible. You can feel it. It is with you on all roads. If you ever experienced it you would count it highly important. It is unique, different from what you have accepted as comfort.

Driving ease should include many things; it does in the Franklin. Turning the switch starts the motor. An electric heater primes the carburetor. Intake manifold is heated by exhaust gases. Cooling system—just air—is freeze proof.

Economy—the most comfortable miles per dollar—is given by the Franklin Sedan in unmatchable degree. Twenty miles per gallon or better. Twelve thousand miles on tires or better. A long-lived car of high resale value. You can prove these before you buy.

If you would be wealthy, think of saving as well as getting.
—Benjamin Franklin.

Franklin economy is unequaled. 20 miles per gallon of gasoline. 12,500 miles per set of tires.

'Tis a Crowning Glory Indeed When Waved and Beautified the Silmerine Way

By no other means can you acquire such pretty waves and curls, so perfectly natural in appearance.

Instead of the hair being dull and dead looking—as where the cruel curling iron is used—it will have that bright gl ss and luster as of "hidden sunshine." Instead of being harsh, coarse or brittle, your tresses will be delightfully soft, silky and fluffy.

LIQUID SILMERINE is a real boon to women of thin, straight, lifeless, tously hair, or hair with broken, split or uneven ends. Entirely harmless. Easy and pleasant to use—leaves no sticky, streaky or greasy trace.

Liquid Silmerine is quite economical to use—a $1.00 bottle lasts for months.

Phelactine is non-irritating, non-odorous, non-poisonous—a child could safely eat it.

How to Keep Age-Lines and Wrinkles Away

When wrinkles begin to appear it is a good plan to bathe the face once a day for awhile in a harmless solution made by dissolving an ounce of Powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is remarkably effective for erasing the hateful lines, not only because of its astringent action, which tightens the skin and thus irons out the lines, but also because of a helpful tonic effect. There is nothing better for flabby cheeks or chin. Be sure to ask for Powdered Saxolite.

War Discovery Does It Easily

Quick healing antiseptic, originally invented for wounds. Wonderful for skin eruptions or itching anywhere. Free trial proves it.

To really end dandruff, dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and simply wet the scalp thoroughly with it. The results from the first application will prove how easily this scalp disease can be ended by a few of these simple treatments. It stops the annoying itching instantly and is as harmless to the hair as water.

This is the same wonderful antiseptic agent discovered in the war, which healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, pleasant and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test it is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

Compare Kloria with anything ever used for eczema, itching skin eruptions, irritations. Note how quickly wounds, sores, boils and burns heal. Test it for pyorrhea (sore, bleeding gums), and notice how promptly the soreness and bleeding disappear, usually in one week. Try it for mouth-wash and gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat—how clean the mouth feels. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists. 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

FREE SAMPLE

Write us for a free sample, enough for a convincing test. The results will be a revelation.

Why wear "ready-made" clothes?

For less cost, these master tailors will build your suit or overcoat to your special order

HERE is the greatest sale in tailoring history; your chance to secure a fine made-to-measure suit or overcoat—custom tailored throughout—at practically the bone cost of production. But immediate action is necessary. For this offer is limited to the first 5000 men in Chicago who respond to it on, or after, November 8th—and hundreds are coming in every day.

Chicago men owe this offer to New York City, where we are just now introducing this famous "maker-to-wearer" service to New York men.

We decided, in opening up our wholesale offices in New York to retail trade, that our best advertising plan would be to get 5000 Royal suits on the backs of 5000 alert New Yorkers in the shortest space of time. For there is no advertisement for Royal Tailoring like a Royal Tailored suit itself.

But because we want to play fair, and show no partiality, we are duplicating this offer to our friends here in Chicago.

Now is the time to buy clothes—and this is the offer to cinch while it is still open.

Note to out-of-town men: Our 10,000 dealers in other cities are co-operating with us during this sale—selling Royal Tailoring with little or no profit. If you are not a resident of Chicago—see your local Royal dealer. He has an extremely interesting proposition to offer you while this sale is on.

$2 Invested in Vogue

a tiny fraction of your loss on one ill-chosen gown

Will Save You $200

This year, above all others, when extravagance and waste are to be avoided, you should have Vogue at hand. For now every woman must devote even more than her customary care to the selection of her wardrobe, so that not one hat, gown or wrap may remain unworn and its price wasted.

The gown you buy and never wear is the really expensive gown. Gloves, boots, hats, that miss being exactly what you want, are the ones that cost more than you can afford.

Vogue suggests that before you spend a single penny on new clothes, before you even plan your wardrobe, you consult its great Winter and Spring Fashion numbers.

L'ECLAT—a manteau du soir by Madeleine and Madeleine, in turquoise blue velvet embroidered in points in silver thread and beads. The front of the coat and collar are of white fox.

A COZY TOQUE AND COLLAR created by Verlaine in grebe, to be worn on chilly autumn days. The one-loop bow fastening the collar and the loops on the toque are of chestnut brown velvet.

SANS SOUCI for the afternoon by Madeleine and Madeleine, in navy blue serge, embroidered on the high collar and pockets in royal blue. The sides below the pockets have a dull silver design of ordinary paper clips sewn on with dark and light blue thread.

FOURTEENTH CENTURY is the title given this model by Madeleine and Madeleine. It is of black serge, lined with a beautiful shade of rose velvet, and the motif on the side is in black silk braid. The hitched-up skirt is a frequent Madeleine characteristic.

AFTERNOON DRESS by Martial and Armand, in navy blue serge embroidered in silver with waxed ribbon outlining the collar and sleeves, forming the belt, and extending in narrow panels down one side of the skirt. Note the extremely high, pointed collar.

See what this new way does for teeth

There is a new way of teeth cleaning which millions now employ. Leading dentists everywhere advise it.

You can see the results wherever you look—teeth that glisten as they never did before.

This is to offer a ten-day test. Then to urge that you let your mirror show how much it means to you and yours.

Fights the film

The object is to fight the film which causes most tooth troubles.

That viscous film you feel on teeth is their great enemy. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Then it dims the teeth, and night and day it may do ceaseless damage.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Very few people escape these troubles which are caused by film.

What ruins teeth

Much of this film remains on teeth under ordinary brushing methods. Many tooth pastes even favor the film. Thus millions find that well-brushed teeth discolor and decay.

The reason lies in film, and dental science has for years been seeking a way to combat it.

The way has now been found. It has been proved by decisive clinical and laboratory tests. Its efficiency is beyond question. And this method has brought to millions a new era in teeth cleaning.

The methods are all embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a dainty tooth paste which complies with every modern requirement. That is the product we ask you to test in your home.

Acts in numerous ways

One ingredient of Pepsodent is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva to digest starch deposits that cling.

Another result is to multiply the alkalinity of the saliva to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of decay.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps the teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily cling.

Thus in several ways, new and efficient, Pepsodent combats the teeth's great enemies. It brings essential results which nature intended, and which old methods failed to accomplish.

The way to know

Ask for a 10-Day Tube. Watch the results, then read the reasons for them in the book we send.

Those whiter, cleaner teeth you see mean safer teeth. They mean that film, great tooth wrecker, is being day by day combated.

Compare the results with old methods. Then judge how much this new way means to you and yours. Cut out the coupon now.

Three little arts that develop attractiveness

HERE are three simple little arts employed by many beautiful women, which will promptly make your skin more attractive:

First, you can increase its beauty by just powdering the right way. For this a special cream is needed as a base for powder, a cream which disappears instantly. Pond's Vanishing Cream does just this. It is made entirely without oil. The moment you apply it, it vanishes, never to reappear in an unpleasant shine. Before you powder soften the skin and smooth down the roughnesses by lightly rubbing a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream on your face. Now apply the powder. This gives a smooth, velvety look. It makes the powder stay on two or three times longer.

YOU can protect the texture and color of your skin from exposure by applying the right protective cream. For this, as for the powder base, of course you must have a cream that will disappear. Pond's Vanishing Cream disappears instantly and will not crop out again in a hateful shine. Before you go out apply a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream. In this way your complexion will be finer in texture, purer in color instead of being coarsened, chapped and yellowed.

SMALL particles of dust and grime are constantly being ground into the pores of your skin. It is they that give your face a dull, muddy look. To remove them and make your skin fresh and clear, you need a very different cream, a cream with an oil base, to dissolve the dust. Not Vanishing Cream, for this has no oil, but a pure cream with an oil base. Pond's Cold Cream has just the right amount of oil to remove all the dust that lodges deep in the pores. At night give your pores a deep, thorough cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream.

Every normal skin needs these two creams. Neither cream fosters the growth of hair.

Get a jar or tube of both creams today at any drug or department store. Then follow these little rules and you will be amazed at the new beauty your skin will gain. Bit by bit you will become more and more attractive.

The New Way to use Face Powder.

NOW you can use a compact face powder that cannot break or spill. This new kind of compact was invented by the specialist who perfected the famous La-may Face Powder. The package contains enough La-may Powder compressed to last you for generous use for about two months. The compact cake of powder is covered with porous cloth. The powder is held under the cloth. It cannot spill. You wipe your puff on the cloth and this sifts the powder through just as you need it. There are two qualities of packages. Both are very flat. One box with compact and puff for fifty cents. The other is a Silverene Vanity Box with hinged cover and two-inch mirror, containing compact and flat lamb's wool puff for only one dollar and fifty cents. This better box is the same quality that sells in jewelry stores for about three dollars. This box looks like sterling silver but will not tarnish. When this La-may Compact Box is empty, you refill it by getting the fifty-cent La-may Compact Box from your dealer. The compact and puff from the fifty-cent box will fit the La-may Silverene Vanity Box. Ask your dealer to show you this wonderful new idea. La-may Silverene Vanity Boxes make excellent, inexpensive Christmas presents. La-may Face Powder is also sold in the loose form in two sizes, thirty-five and sixty cents. La-may Face Powder is guaranteed absolutely pure. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. NEW NAMES in the HALL of FAME

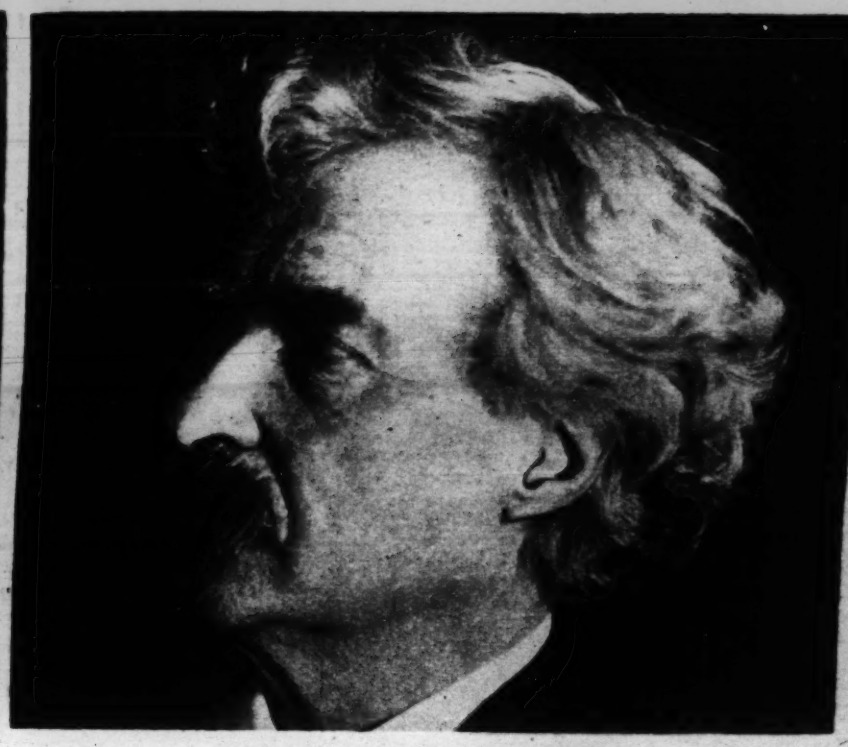
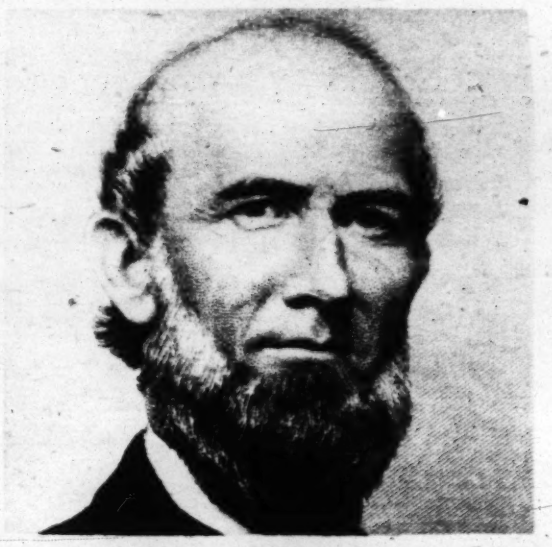
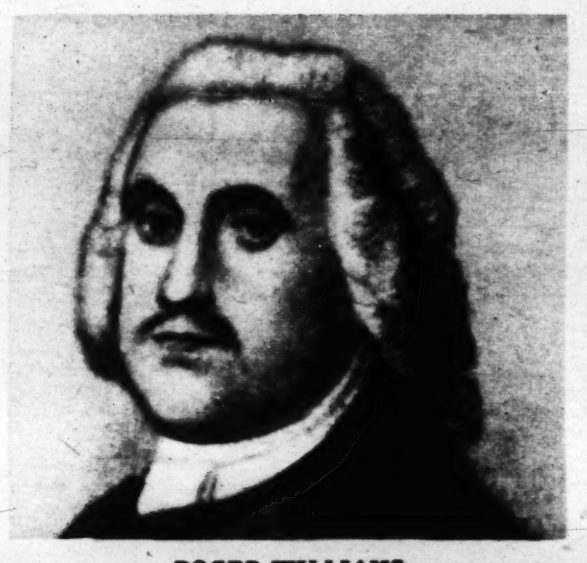
AUGUSTUS SAINT-GAUDENS
Sculptor; famous for his Lincoln statue in Lincoln park, Chicago.



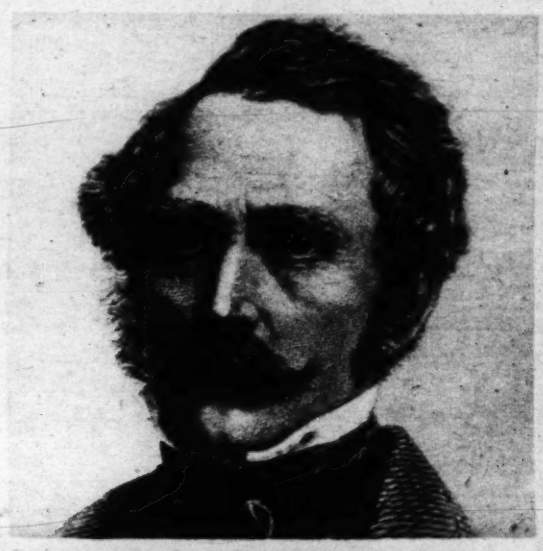
SAMUEL LANGHORNE CLEMENS
Best known as Mark Twain; the most distinguished American humorist.



JAMES BUCHANAN EADS
Engineer, designer of ironclads in the Civil war, and bridge builder.



ROGER WILLIAMS
Advocate of religious liberty and founder of the colony of Rhode Island.



WILLIAM THOMAS GREEN MORTON
Dental surgeon and discoverer of the use of ether as an anesthetic.

PATRICK HENRY
Revolutionary orator and statesman and early governor of Virginia.

ALICE FREEMAN PALMER
President of Wellesley college; dean of women, University of Chicago.

THE FIFTH ELECTION TO THE HALL OF FAME, completed early this month, resulted in the choice of seven new names—those of six men and one woman—to be added to those already on the memorial roster at University Heights, New York City. Elections are held every five years, 102 distinguished American men and women serving as electors. Thirty names might have been chosen this year under the rules of the election, but only seven received the required number of votes. Bronze tablets bearing their names will be unveiled at the Hall of Fame in May, 1921.

"California Syrup of Figs"
Laxative for Children

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California" Syrup of Figs today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Children love the "fruity" taste of genuine "California" Syrup of Figs which has directions for babies and children printed on the bottle. Ask the druggist for "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. Beware!

Dye Right!

Don't Spoil Your Material in Poor Dye that Streaks, Fades or Runs

EACH package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye old, faded garments, draperies, coverings, everything, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods, new, rich, fadeless colors.

PERFORMANCE

WHY DRIVERS SWEAR BY THIS TRUCK, NOT AT IT

WHILE the purchase of the first truck may not be influenced by the driver's opinion, the performance of that truck in the hands of the driver often determines the selection of a second one. Clydesdale preference among drivers is founded upon two facts—mechanical excellence which includes power, adequate speed and ease of adjustment, together with the Clydesdale Controller which enables the driver to forget everything but the road.

A FINE example of such excellence is found in the case of the Primalt Products Company, whose high quality beverages are known for many miles around Chicago. They say:

"With the constantly growing demand for Primalt Products, we must have deliveries upon which ourselves and our customers can depend absolutely. Through the dependable performance of our Clydesdale Truck Fleet, our deliveries are uninterrupted, night and day, summer and winter. We have found them good trucks and the service through their Chicago Factory Branch is highly satisfactory."

The secret of many a Southern dish lay in its plantation molasses

The mellow flavor of old-time plantation molasses

TIME was when home-made molasses was a popular Southern delicacy. Then for years real sugar cane molasses practically ceased to exist.

Today the famous old-time delicacy is yours again. Two Louisiana boys, spurred by delicious memories, decided to restore to the world the beloved molasses of their boyhood.

They named their molasses Brer Rabbit, in honor of the hero in the plantation stories of their childhood. Today it is the most popular molasses in America.

Try it and see the difference that plantation flavor makes in your baked beans.

Get Brer Rabbit, either the light molasses (gold label—for table use as well as for cooking) or the dark molasses (green label—a stronger flavor for cooking), at your grocer's today. Penick & Ford, Ltd., New Orleans.

WHERE OUR CIRCUS ELEPHANTS COME FROM

The possibilities in every woman's face

THE soft, appealing charm of a fresh, lovely skin—of course you want it. Every girl does. Every girl wants to be attractive, lovable, admired.

You can make your skin so exquisitely soft and clear that at first glance it will awaken admiration and delight. By studying it—learning its possibilities—then giving it every day the treatment that suits its particular needs—you, too, can win the charm of "a skin you love to touch."

An oily skin and a shiny nose can be corrected by regular use of the simple treatment given above

Perhaps the attractiveness of your skin is spoiled by a tendency to become excessively oily. You can correct this embarrassing condition by using every night the following treatment:

Just before retiring, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into your pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The first time you use this treatment you will notice how much firmer and drier it makes your skin. Use it regularly every night and see what a difference it makes in your appearance—how much smoother, lovelier your skin becomes under this care.

A special treatment for each of the different skin needs is given in the famous booklet wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Get a cake today and begin using your treatment tonight.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is on sale at all drug stores and toilet goods counters in the United States and Canada. A 25 cent cake lasts for a month or six weeks of any treatment, or for general cleansing use.

"Your treatment for one week"

A beautiful little set of the Woodbury skin preparations will be sent to you for 25 cents

Send 25 cents for this dainty miniature set of Woodbury's skin preparations, containing your complete Woodbury treatment for one week.

You will find, first the little booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," telling you the special treatment your skin needs; then a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap—enough for seven nights of any treatment; a sample tube of the new Woodbury Facial Cream, with samples of Woodbury's Cold Cream and Facial Powder, with directions telling just how they should be used. Write today for this special new Woodbury outfit. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, Perth, Ontario.

THE KU KLUX KLAN AGAIN—The famous organization of the south, with its sinister paraphernalia, has been revived in Georgia, where a state charter was granted recently under the title "Knights of the Ku Klux Klan." Here is a midnight gathering at the foot of Stone mountain, near Atlanta. W. J. Simmons, imperial wizard of the order, says the klan is now a law-abiding fraternal body and has no connection with the "night riding" and burning of cotton gins which have been reported of late in the south. The original Ku Klux Klan made its appearance at the close of the civil war and died out after the passage of the enforcement act directed against it in 1871.

With the Stanley the first cost is the last cost

"Dropped— and received many a bang—on our auto trips for a year and a half —now as good as the day we bought it"

"NOTHING that we own has given us greater pleasure or been more of a convenience than our Stanley Vacuum Bottle, which has accompanied us on our auto trips for a year and a half. It has been accidentally dropped and received many a bang but is as good as the day we bought it, and no coffee ever tasted better than that which comes piping hot out of our bottle, hours after having been put there"—writes a well-known California motorist.

No mishap, no jolt or jar, no matter how severe, no violent change of temperature—nothing on any of his trips could have robbed this motorist of his coffee "piping hot out of the bottle," for he had it in the new Stanley Vacuum Bottle which will not break.

The loss of the contents of the bottle—usually just when needed most—the trouble and expense of procuring a new glass "refill"—these are the inconveniences now happily eliminated by this new invention.

The new Stanley Vacuum Bottle is made entirely of steel. It can never break.

Even if it drops on a hard floor, or rolls downstairs, or falls from an automobile—it will not break.

Every Stanley Bottle is lined with blue Amalite—a sheer mineral coating which is fused into the steel itself. This keeps the bottle always sanitary and will not rust or tarnish.

Sold in one and two-quart sizes by all the better stores. An attractive gift for man or woman. Prices (East of the Rocky Mountains): black standard finish, quart size, $10.00 —2-quart size, $15.00.

AN ELEPHANT DRIVE IN INDIA—Part of a herd fleeing its pursuers through the jungles. Tame elephants, trained in hunting, are usually used to decoy their wild brothers into traps.

AFTER THE ELEPHANTS ARE CAUGHT they are made fast by great ropes to trees. Then they are branded and driven into stockades. The native elephant driver in this picture is mounted on one of the tame hunters.

CAPTURED ANIMALS ARE HERDED WITH TAME ONES, and, as soon as possible, are given a bath. The elephant loves to bathe, and the process takes his mind off his troubles and makes him easier to "civilize."

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Questions people ask about taking yeast for health

What is the newly discovered substance in yeast which promotes health?

IF one single element is lacking in the foods we eat, the body's ability to produce energy slows down. We soon lack vigor and feel "below par" without this one element, called vitamine. It gained dramatic significance in the Russo-Japanese War and again in the World War: soldiers fed on a steady diet poor in vitamine fell off in health. Authorities on diet and nutrition have been tremendously interested in this discovery. For years they have experimented to learn more about this health-giving substance. It is now known that yeast is the richest source of this essential vitamine.

Physicians have long prescribed yeast for pimples and boils—complaints that come with a "run-down" condition. Today yeast is recognized as a valuable conditioner for people who are "below par."

Do we get this substance in our ordinary foods?

The vitamine in which yeast is so rich is lacking in many every-day foods. We get it in fresh vegetables, particularly in the leafy vegetables, but we may be getting an insufficient supply of it. Spinach, one of the most prized vegetables, is only one-fourth as rich in this vitamine as yeast is. The ordinary meats and fish do not contain it at all. Milk is not so rich in it as was once thought. In many of the manufactured foods we eat it has been removed in the process of preparation. Yeast can be safely added to any diet. Scientists agree that we cannot get too much of the health-giving vitamine it supplies.

Just what do we take yeast for? And how does it help?

For "run-down" condition—People who are "below par," who grow tired out easily, who are never quite "fit," who have lost the sparkle and vigor that goes with perfect health—these are the people who are benefited by taking yeast. It furnishes a large quantity of the needed vitamine, stimulates the appetite, and helps digest the increased food the stimulated appetite demands.

For constipation—Yeast is not a laxative. It is a food which helps the body get rid of waste matter, and restores normal conditions. It is by its nature suited to the stomach and intestines. And it will not form a habit.

For pimples and blackheads (acne) and boils—These ailments are usually the result of "run-down" condition, with constipation as a contributary condition. Yeast in addition to correcting these conditions has a recognized curative value in cases of "acne" and boils.

Won't it, when eaten, have the same effect it has in raising bread?

No. In the body yeast is assimilated just like any other food. It is easily digested, and only one precaution need be taken. Those who are troubled with gas should first dissolve the yeast in boiling water.

What is the most pleasant way to take yeast?

Some like it plain, just as it comes in the cake. Many prefer it in fruit juices, in water or in milk. Many like the "cream-cheesy" taste it has spread on bread or crackers.

Take from one to three cakes a day—before or between meals. In all acute cases, consult your physician.

NEW YORK

FREDERICK STOCK, now in his sixteenth year as conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and his twenty-sixth season as a member of the organization. He came to Chicago in 1895 to join the orchestra as a viola player, and was concert master when Theodore Thomas died in 1905. (TRIBUNE photo.)

CREPE DE CHINE IS INVITED TO THE PARTY

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The sash of today makes us think always of the old maid aunt of the family. You know how, when Molly's children all go down with the measles and Molly herself is hurried off to the hospital, Aunt Louisa is the first person considered to fill the emergency. And now, when Sally's cook leaves just on the day when Sally is entertaining the bridge club, Aunt Louisa is called over to make the mayonnaise and the Bavarian cream.

Similarly, the sash nowadays leaves any trifling duties of its own to minister to bereaved parts of the gown. Thus, for the evening gown the sash frequently performs the part expected of a train.

This is particularly true of the informal little evening frock. Make this of crepe de chine, with long sleeves, and tie about the low waist line a two tone ribbon. Then let one of the ends of this sash dip on the floor, and you have something for the country club dance. Shorten the ends of the sash or remove it altogether, and your crepe de chine frock, with its long sleeves and elliptical neck line, is perfectly good for the country club bridge luncheon.

Now, isn't it true? Isn't the sash just like the accommodating Aunt Louisa—right on hand when you want it and self-effacing as a violet when the need for it has vanished?

In the more formal type of evening gown the ribbon sash frequently forms cascading draperies at the sides—and these, by the way, are still worn—or else the same accessory, formed of tulle or lace, lets its streamers trail on both sides of the skirt.

This isn't all. The sash for the other kinds of costumes is now sustaining the same duties as does the chintz curtain in the gray walled room. It lightens up these somber daytime frocks which we are now affecting. Try a sash of scarlet mousseline on one of the black, or navy, or gray, or beige dresses. Echo it, perhaps, in the lining of the bell sleeves, and see the result. Cheerio!

Perhaps the most decorative of all the sashes are the girdles made of silver or delicate toned ribbon which are strewn with such dainty blooms as marguerites and rosebuds and forget-me-nots, and worn by the young girl on her party frock of tulle. These sashes are particularly delightful when carried out in silver ribbon with a picot edge in delicate color, which color is stressed in the flowers themselves.

A far cry from this Burbanked sash is the girdle that is frequently used on suits. Cire ribbon of contrasting color is employed widely by the French designers, and who can estimate the toll of smartness collected by one simple little navy blue suit from a narrow girdle of light blue cire ribbon?

However, cire ribbon is by no means the solitary expression of the French artist's girdle temperament. Many are the new inventions sought out. In this breath we may mentioned a navy blue suit from Paris, which, after twisting a two inch girdle of the suit material, fastens it at the side with two buttons and then lets the ends, gradually widening until they reach eight inches, drop to the hem of the skirt.

The evening dress of the present has other ways of catching a train than through the sash. Side panels of lace or tulle are frequently the method used. Thus, the model at the left—a dark green velvet with a band of silver cloth outlining the decolletage and with girdle and straps made of silver beads—flaunts a double train formed of mingled green and silver tulle.

CATCHING a train from panel or sash is one of the accomplishments of the season's agile evening frock. At the left, for example, a dress of dark green velvet trimmd with silver cloth and silver beads achieves its two trains through side panels of green and silver net. Next, a crepe de chine proves that it can be quite as dressy as any other evening material when set off with black Chantilly lace and with flowers of gold tissue. The crepe de chine model following this contributes a bodice made of an all-over design of gold beads to skirt and sash of sea foam tint. Last, black lace over black satin testifies again to the unevenness of modern hems. The wrap at the right is white unspotted ermine.

Right next to this we illustrate a new phase of evening dressing. Recently a little foundling has been laid on the doorstep of Six O'Clock, and is being brought up exactly like the other children. This foundling is Crepe de Chine. Nowadays the smartest dressmakers in New York are using this fabric, not only for afternoon gowns but for evening ones as well. And by the time they are through trimming it with gold or silver lace, embroidering it with jet or gold embroidery, or combining it with chantilly, how in the world would the little thing ever dream it was not really one of the family?

The crepe de chine evening frock is frequently white and not infrequently it is trimmed with the black of either jet or lace. For the fact cannot be overstressed that the black and white evening dress is perhaps the most fashionable of the hour, and the foundling has not been made to feel any difference in the designer's treatment of it.

Here, consequently, white crepe de chine is combined with black lace in this informal little evening gown. And the only note of color is afforded by flowers cut from gold tissue which are appliqued at the points of the skirt flounce. You will notice that the neck line is cut straight across. So are those of many of the other new evening dresses. That elliptical line or else the tepid square kind are seen more constantly than any other form of decollete. Even the most formal evening dress is higher than of yore.

And a fact which I have already pointed out is that Six O'Clock does not always rule out the long sleeve. This, either the wide flowing one or else the extremely tight model, is encountered in the dinner gown, or even in its more formal sister.

Indeed, whatever else may be the fashion in evening wear, goose-flesh is not. To learn the truth of this we have only to look at one of Callot's late creations, with its trained skirt of black broadcloth and its bodice of white lace continued into long, flowing sleeves. And in looking at this model we locate another phase of present fashion. It is that broadcloth is being employed for evening gowns. Black broadcloth is particularly good, and not only the white lace which we have mentioned but motifs of white embroidery on the skirt place this creation of Callot's in the safely black and white column.

Whether you are young, or just think that you are, you will turn inevitably to one of the lovely tulle or chiffon dancing frocks in which this season is so rich. These come in all sorts of ravishing tints, and frequently they are brought out by some introduction of black chantilly or black taffeta. For example, one of the most charming of dance frocks which I have seen lately had a plaited skirt of sea foam tulle which was inclosed by leaf shaped panels of black chantilly. The bodice was of the tulle, over satin of the same exquisite tint, and the low waist line met the lace panels in a girdle of silver flowers with cellophane leaves.

Green is a favored shade of the dancing frock, and in the third model from the left we are showing crepe de chine in this tint. The fashionable little square necked bodice is wrought of an all-over design of gold beads interspersed with green and black flower motifs of embroidery. The sash of crepe de chine may be adjusted to either trail on the ground or to behave as pictured.

The unevenness of the skirt hem is a favored theme of the fashion Boswell of this year, and it is brought out both in this crepe de chine model and in the one of black lace following immediately after. This dress is posed over a black satin underslip, and it indicates that in order to be fashionable one need not subject the skirt to an army of occupation. The waist line does not always invade the hip line. The truth of it is, in fact, that the small, slim woman will always turn to the short waisted frock such as this when she desires an effect of added height.

In the mad pursuit of tulle, chiffon, and crepe de chine the dance frock has by no means forgotten the pictorial qualities of net. White net makes some of the most charming of these models, and particularly effective are the full skirted ones with quaint little bodice of colored satin echoing the romantic period of the second empire.

Introducing
New Modes for the Holiday Season

LA MODE of gayety has chosen chiffon for her favorite dinner and dancing frocks. The delicacy of their colorings can be likened only to the exquisite colorings of the sky at sunset. Soft and graceful in outline, they are infinitely charming, while the large selection of styles and low pricing make selection unusually simple.

The long side drapes are the special features of this dinner frock of combination colored chiffon. In many beautiful color combinations. $125.00.

Polka-dotted with sparkly beads is the blouse of this dinner dress, while yards and yards of soft chiffon fashion the graceful accordion pleated skirt. $175.00.

Jade, blue, henna or flame—each one a symbol of joyous music, these chiffon dance frocks have underbodices of rich silver lace and, of course, have billowy, many draped skirts. $65.

Evening Wraps

BLUE Chiffon Velvet fashions many beautiful wraps, but when embroidered in silver boullion and trimmed in brown Flying Squirrel it evolves itself into a glorious wrap that will lend a comforting warmth and an enchanting charm to the loveliest of gowns.

Removing Superfluous Hair

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me, have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

I DON'T know whether it is that women are becoming more fastidious in every detail of grooming or whether it is the modern girl's tendency toward outdoor life and athletics that is responsible for the oft-repeated queries about the removal of superfluous hair. I do know it is a subject of wide interest.

"Our grandmothers lived such protected lives that even their skins came under the laws of protection. They wore sunshades, for a healthy tan and a languid, fainting lady were not synonymous of beauty in those days. However, she did protect her face from the wind and sun by veil and parasol, but having no motor to dash off on a hundred mile jaunt to call on a neighbor she stayed at home on her trellised porch and made tidies for chair backs and sofas. But who'd want to spend a perfectly good afternoon making tidies to save your skin and chairs?

Maybe the sun and wind beating down mercilessly on our present day outdoor girl has to do with a coarser texture of skin, but my suspicions are that with all her protection a close analysis would have revealed the woman of former days carrying this facial blemish, superfluous hair.

Detriment to Good Grooming.

Miss Mary E. Hall, who has had many years' experience of specializing on the work of removing superfluous hair by electrolysis, is of the opinion that women are ever striving to look better groomed and consider superfluous hair on the face a detriment to good grooming, which it is.

There is much more demand for this kind of work than there are scientific operators to perform it. And a woman would a thousand times better leave it alone than have the only face she has consigned to the haphazard care of an incompetent and unskilled operator," she says.

"I have seen faces that have been totally ruined," she adds, "by work that has not been done scientifically. One young woman looked to me as though she had been through a terrible fire, so badly burned had she been. Others carry a pockmarked appearance as the result of inefficient handling of their cases. I most firmly contend that this kind of work should be licensed work, for no other reason than to prevent accidents such as the above."

Electric Needle Only Way.

Of course, the only way to remove permanently this superfluous growth is by the electric needle. The work is done at a cost of from $5 to $7.50 an hour. It is advisable to pay for the best service rather than to attempt to economize on a poor operator.

The use of a depilatory on the face is decried, too. It is a habit once adopted you become a slave to, with the hairs returning soon and coarser each time.

The depilatory, too, for use in removing hair under arms is not for every woman's use. First, there is the danger of leaving it on too long, and, second, the perspiration acid and the sulphid of barium used in most depilatories results in irritation to a number of skins. For such the razor blade is the better way.

The X-ray treatment for superfluous hair has not arrived at infallibility yet, but it undoubtedly will in course of time and with the demand which will create itself.

The theory that cold creams are responsible for this superfluous hair on the face is unfounded where vegetable oils are used in the creams. There might be grounds for suspicion where animal oils are used, but the pure food law does not permit that now.

Answers to Queries.

J. J.: THE RED NOSE AND COLD feet and hands are due to poor circulation, undoubtedly. How about a nice little three mile walk a day? A cold shower in the morning followed with a vigorous rub down?

MRS. B. C.: DON'T USE AMMONIA or borax on your hair when you shampoo it—at least, don't use it in such quantities as you are doing. A pinch of borax or a drop or two of ammonia wouldn't do any harm, but it's too frequent and overuse brittles and dries the hair.

SKINNY: FRESH MILK CONtains building substances found in no other food. Milk builds not only fatty tissue but it builds every tissue in the body. Why not take a milk diet? I advise this being done under a physician's direction, or at least his consultation. Different cases require different amounts of milk and different treatments to counteract constipation which sometimes follows milk drinking.

LOVE LETTERS

How does a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is willing to pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

WHOLE WORLD CHANGED.

MY Sweetheart: Since leaving you tonight the whole world is changed, and all because you told me you loved me and were willing to join me as my companion throughout this life. All the way home I felt as though I were walking on air, and although it was night I fancied I could hear the birds singing joyously in concert with the song of happiness swelling in my heart. And now, as I sit dreaming before my fire, I realize what happiness has been conferred on me.

Darling, you shall never regret the confidence you have placed in me. All my life will be devoted to making yours bright and happy; to prove myself worthy of the great trust you place in me. Sweetheart, you have given me the most precious thing in the world—your heart, with all its love—and whatever comes I shall guard it to the end.

At times I hardly dared hope to win you; it all seemed so far above me—a prize beyond my reach. And then you began to show me in your own sweet way that you were not uninterested in me. Even now, I can scarcely believe that this happiness has fallen to me. Your love is a gift beyond price.

How I long for the day when we shall actually belong to each other. Even now the hours until I shall see you again drag, but your face is always before me—awake or asleep—and this vision I would only change for you alone.

During I pray you may be kept in health and happiness. Nothing on my part shall ever be lacking to this end. God bless you, my precious one.

With all my heart's love, I am and will be to the end,

Ever your own loving

BRUCE.

9841—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 42 inches. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 40 inch material with ⅝ yard of 30 or 36 inch contrasting.

9849—Woman's one piece apron. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material with ⅝ yard contrasting.

9832—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards of 36 inch material with ½ yard of 40 inch contrasting and ⅞ yard of lining.

How to Use the Patterns

A DRESSY model, suitable for afternoons and informal evening affairs, is No. 9841, and it would make up attractively in two materials. Satin and tricotine, velvet and tricotine, charmeuse and georgette, etc., would all be pretty.

The skirt is in two pieces, and is a straight, gathered pattern. It is made with a plait each side of the front, and these can be held in place to a hip depth by stunning buttons. The waist is made to open in the front, and is cut kimono fashion.

The sleeves shown in the pattern are pretty, and a little out of the ordinary. The lower part of the sleeve is cut with a shaped tab, and this can be of the contrasting material used for the bib and sash. Of course, short sleeves can be made if preferred, and will not need trimming at the edge.

No dress is really complete today without embroidery of some kind. If the color and material are suitable, silver or gold threads are much used, and beads are always good. The bib, the sash ends, the sleeves and the front of the skirt are places where embroidery will look well, or, instead of embroidering some design on the front of the skirt, a border could be used all around.

The bib and sash should be lined and a thin silk the same color can be chosen. The skirt is slashed down the left side of the front for a placket, and the one strip kind should be used.

A piece of the skirt material on the straight, measuring three and one-half or four inches in width and double the length of the opening, is cut and sewed in a narrow seam, beginning at the top on one side, sewing it down to the end of the slit, and on up to the top on the opposite side. To prevent puckering at the end of the opening, cut a tiny slash each side of the end, making the cut slant out from the edge as far as the width of the seam, leaving a tiny "V" of the cloth exactly at the end.

Then, as you sew around the end, open the placket and backstitch, taking the stitches just inside the clipping; if the seam is stitched on the machine it will be sure to be all right at that important point. Then hem the opposite side of the strip down over the stitched seam on the wrong side. One side of the finished strip is turned under to make a faced hem, and the opposite side stands out to make an extension hem. Then the faced hem should be fastened to the dress material at the bottom of the opening to keep it back where it belongs.

No. 9849 is one of those useful apron patterns that are popular with so many women who do their own housework. It is cut in one piece and is intended to be slipped on over the head.

Percale would be serviceable and pretty, and a white ground with a colored figure or dot would be prettier than a plain color.

Why not buy enough for several aprons, choosing the same pattern, but having each one a different color on the white?

Lavender, pink, and blue; or green, tan, and blue would make a pleasing variety. Make the collar and edge of the sleeves of white Indian head or fine pique, and where the apron is slashed at the neck, punch and work small eyelets and lace the opening together with narrow ribbon, matching the figure on the percale, in color.

No. 9832 is a good design for serge, tricotine, velvet, or the lighter materials such as satin or charmeuse. It is cut with an underwaist, and the vest is fastened to this. The outside is put together separately and fastened to the underwaist across the back at the bottom.

The vest can be made of something sheer, like fine net and lace, or a contrasting material like satin if the dress is of woolen, and it can be heavily beaded or embroidered.

The sleeves are cut with a dart seam at the back, from the wrist to the elbow, and this sort of pattern makes a prettily shaped sleeve. Be sure that the elbow comes in the right place for your arm, for it doesn't look well or feel comfortable if the dart ends too high up or low down.

It is not a waste of time to cut a sleeve out of some old muslin, marking the seam lines accurately, basting carefully and trying it on. In order to be sure about the length and fit it is necessary to have it come well up on the arm, just as it would be if it were sewed into the armhole; then it will not be difficult to make any needed alterations.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Miss Louise Best, district health officer and nurse in the Red Cross public health service, looks after forty school districts in Maine, which cover an area of 250 miles of hilly, thinly settled country. She has had to act as nurse, doctor, cook, teacher, publicity agent, lecturer, and organizer, sometimes working throughout the entire round of the clock.

Stenographers, clerks, cashiers, and other women employés of one of the big packing companies in St. Louis have organized a sewing club in an effort to combat the high cost of clothing by making their own summer and vacation outfits.

Miss Elizabeth Remington, secretary of the Reptile Study Society of America, spends her spare time in hunting snakes in New York and New Jersey.

Many cultured Russian women formerly of high position in their native country are now waitresses in Constantinople.

Recent figures show that 60 per cent of the immigration into the United States is composed of women and girls.

Mlle Zella de Milhau, who received a Croix de Guerre from the French government for her work as an ambulance driver in the war zone, has been sworn in as a motorcycle policewoman at Southampton, L. I.

More than 300 women in Mexico earn their living by acting as professional bull fighters.

The women of the Loo Choo islands conduct all business and have charge of everything pertaining to money except the spending of it. The straight backs and erect carriage of the Loo Choo women are due to the custom of carrying everything on their heads. No matter what the object, be it large or small, it is perched upon their thick, black hair, and off they walk in the most nonchalant manner, apparently paying not the slightest attention to keeping the object in place.

Women "drummers" are barred from membership in the Travelers' Protective association.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union movement in Japan has more than 4,000 members.

Women in thirty states can vote for the next president of the United States.

REAL LOVE STORIES

SHE WAS GRATEFUL.

MY landlady was such a disagreeable person that I went out of my way to avoid her. She was absolutely unreasonable in the matter of repairs. I had learned by experience that it was useless to ask her to do anything. But for reasons of my own I did not want to move.

The house needed papering and painting badly. I finally proposed that she let me have it done at my own expense. To this she ungraciously assented.

I called in a decorator from another town. I had perfect confidence in him and I told him I wanted the work done during my absence that summer. Then I telephoned my landlady and suggested that, inasmuch as I would be out of town, she might look in from time to time and keep an eye on the work. This was merely a sop to her pride, for I knew Mr. Ford would not allow any one to interfere with his plans. But I did want to keep the old tyrant in good humor.

About a month after I left town I was vastly surprised to receive a pleasant letter from my landlady. She had, she said, conferred with the decorator several times. He was doing beautiful work, and she was going to pay the bill. Was there by any chance anything else I wanted done about the house?

I was suspicious of this sudden friendliness. I wrote back mentioning several things that I thought ought to be done. Then I added that if she was expecting to raise my rent she need not do anything for me, as I would not pay another penny more than I was paying.

She replied promptly, assuring me that my rent was not to be raised and that the repairs I had suggested were already under way. I could hardly contain my curiosity until September.

Two days after I returned to town the mystery was cleared up. My landlady came to call on me and invited me to her wedding. She was going to marry the decorator. They had been sweethearts in their youth and her first husband had come between them. She was so grateful to me who had inadvertently brought them together after long years of separation that she could not do enough for me.

60,000 Yards of Wonderful Drapery Cretonnes, Values to $1.50 yard, at the Astounding Price—a yard 29c

To buy these lovely cretonnes at 29c a yard is like buying the finest cane sugar at 3c a pound. At that rate you'd buy a cellarful of sugar, and you ought to buy a winter, spring and summerful of these cretonnes!

These are without doubt the greatest cretonne values ever offered the public by any store. Not only is the price extraordinary, but the merest glance reveals the fact that every print has decorative value to an unusual degree. They were made for a distributor who stands high in the world of art fabrics, one whose doors have never been open to inferiority of color or design. You'll find these identical patterns in the finest homes of Old England. Fully one-half are printed on a heavy linenized utility cloth of splendid texture, especially useful for various cover purposes, such as furniture or automobile slip coverings, sofa cushions, reed furniture seats and backs, scarfs, etc. The balance are designs for hangings, each selected for its specific purpose by a trained and critical eye. The color combinations are practically without limit, every known color having been successfully expanded into harmony. Ample yardage of each color is available for extensive room treatments. Choice, yard, 29c.

The possibilities of this sale are so great that in order to facilitate the selling we will place the cretonnes on sale in the Upholstery Department, Fifth Floor; Second Floor, South room; Main Floor, and Bargain Basement.

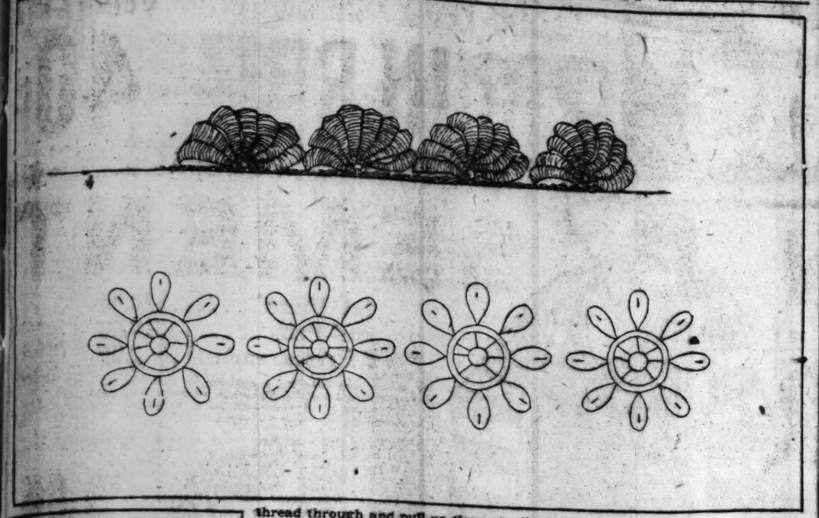
Practical and Fancy Needlework BY CLOTILDE



Questions on problems connected with needlework will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Needlework Editor Sunday Tribune.

DESIGNS IN CROCHET.

A GREAT many wonderful designs in crochet and knitting are shown, suitable for pillow cases and sheets and towels of all kinds, whether guest, bath, or the usual sized hand towel. And, of course, there is no reason why these same patterns cannot be used on anything else one desires.

The pattern shown today is especially attractive and is not slow work or difficult to do. The number cotton or silk used for the work as well as size of the needle will, of course, depend on what the edging is to be put.

Make a loose chain the desired length. Throw the thread over the needle seventy-five times; then insert the crochet hook through the fifth stitch of the chain, counting from the needle end of the chain. Draw the thread through and pull up through all the stitches on the hook to chain one.

Throw the thread over the needle twenty-five times again and repeat until you have eight roll stitches in the same chain stitch; then fasten in the fifth chain and repeat until you have made the right length.

An unusually pretty design for eyelet work is also shown today and it may be used as a border, or insertion, or one single design can be used on collar ends, cuffs—in fact, anything.

The double circle inside the petals can both be done in a close outline stitch, and a tiny single featherstitch used as a filler, or the space between the circles can be done in laid work. The tiny circle in the center can be an eyelet, or it can be well padded and embroidered, or French knots can fill the space.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

MRS. E. C.: There is a lining organdie that is exceedingly good for dresses, whether heavy or light material, and it is less expensive than net. If you care for anything as heavy as percales, that is also good. I can't think of any "good inexpensive silk substitute" better than all wool challis. The linen finished Indian head is a good substitute for linen, and the more it is laundered, the more it looks like linen. If you are thinking of making an envelope chemise for a gift there is nothing better than crepe de chine.

MRS. E. C. V.: I will try to find a copy of the bag directions and mail to you.

MISS G. N.: I am sorry but we have no pattern for the collar and cuffs. Can't you copy them with the aid of the picture and story? I am glad you and your friends like the patterns.

MRS. W. L. O.: I will try to find a copy of the bag story and mail to you.

MISS L. F.: There is no "Fashions Blue Book," but you could probably copy the one you like from the picture

THE RIGHT MANNER.

IT didn't take long for Dorothy to get over her nervousness after starting to work for Mr. Black, the president of the firm. It lasted only about a day. She found him so considerate and patient that before she realized it she felt entirely at ease in the new office, and all her awkwardness disappeared.

He told her yesterday that her work has given great satisfaction. He was especially pleased, he said, by the courteous and intelligent manner with which she addressed and attended to all the people who called to see him. That was the thing that he was most particular about. He wanted to be assured that whether he was there or not visitors would be promptly and politely taken care of and all messages carefully and accurately transmitted.

Dorothy was delighted, of course, with the assurance that she was pleasing her employer and that, more than anything else, helped to give her just the touch of confidence in herself that she needed.

"Being nice to people is something you don't need to be posted about beforehand, Dorothy. Your own good sense and natural inclination are enough to guide you correctly there," Ann said to her.

Dorothy acknowledged the compliment with a smile. "But I really was delighted to have Mr. Black tell me that," she said. "Especially because the girl in the general office who has been taking care of adjustments and complaints lately isn't a bit nice to the people who come in. It has annoyed me to hear her use an impatient, sharp tone or to see her totally ignore people who speak to her. It's a mystery to me that she has been able to keep the job as long as she has."

"Why don't you tell her what Mr. Black said to you about the importance of being courteous to everybody who comes into the office? That might have some effect on her," said Marion. "It may even help her to save her job."

"I was tempted to tell her," said Dorothy, "but I decided that it would sound awfully conceited, if I did. I wouldn't care how it sounded, though, if I could prevent her from losing her job."

"Someone in authority is bound to notice her lack of courtesy before long, and if something doesn't happen to make her change her ways it will probably go hard with her."

Ann had been studying Dorothy during this conversation, and she finally said to her: "I think what Mr. Black really appreciates in you, Dorothy, is not so much your courteous way of speaking to people as the fact that you are neither flirtatious nor chummy in that "hail-fellow-well-met" manner that so many girls think it smart to adopt, calling men they scarcely know by their first names, or even by their last, without taking the trouble of saying 'Mister.'

"No employer likes to have the girls in his office on too familiar terms with either the men in the house or those outside whose business brings them in frequently," Ann went on. "Mr. Andrews always objects to any of the girls around our office fooling too much with the men from outside, and he will not tolerate too great a familiarity between the men and women in the office."

Ann is right about this last, I think. Employers like to have the women in their offices possess enough reserve to keep them in a dignified relation to the men about the office.

A business girl takes dangerous chances with her job when she fails in ordinary courtesy to those about her, but she is also treading on thin ice when she becomes too friendly and unreserved with her office associates, particularly the men.

SLANG HOW IT LOOKS

"SHE TURNED ME DOWN FOR ANOTHER GUY!"

Douglass

Air Moistener

for Steam Radiators

Makes Steam-Heated Rooms Healthy

This is the Douglass Air Moistener which delivers to your home or office the moisture or humidity necessary to keep you well. It is automatic in operation. It takes the place of the air-valve on your radiator. It can be attached in a minute. After that you can forget it. It will go on forever furnishing humidity.

Seven-tenths of the dry-air diseases originate in rooms where there is little or no moisture. The dry-air diseases are coughs, colds, catarrh, tonsilitis, bronchitis, pneumonia and kindred ills. They seldom originate in the open air.

The Douglass Air Moistener discharges dry steam from the radiator into the air as humidity or moisture. It is absolutely noiseless. It works whenever the steam pressure is on and that is when you need it.

Steam heat dries the air you breathe and makes you an easy victim to the dry-air diseases. It dries out and cracks your furniture, throws the piano out of tune and destroys your plants.

The Douglass Air Moistener prevents all these troubles. It works by itself. It never needs attention. It will last a life-time. The cost is $7.50—very trifling when you consider the benefits derived from its use.

Two Douglass Air Moisteners are sufficient in the average flat of five, six or seven rooms. And when you move, you take them with you.

Will be placed on sale in all Drug Stores, Department Stores, Hardware Stores and Plumbing Shops.

The Douglass Air Moistener is Now on Exhibition and Demonstration in the Health and Sanitation Show at the Coliseum

Class—Define FEASTO!

"FEASTO is the world's greatest confection. A candy banquet in the palm of your hand. A luscious combination of crunchy peanuts, puffed marshmallow cream, chewing caramel and triple dipped in smooth, rich chocolate.

"The peanuts come from far-away Spain—the best grown. Are shelled and roasted scientifically in huge ovens. The marshmallow is of finest pure white sugar, whipped up to a creamy froth by superhuman electric beaters. The caramel is of real cane sugar and pure dairy cream, then boiled until chewy. Experts make the chocolate from the finest cocoa bean ever used in coatings. It is the nation's sweetmeat—and a perfect food." "

Necessary for Recovery.

A young man of 20, who has been a victim of Pott's disease for most of his life, and who has spent the last year lying on a frame as a treatment for his malady, has now improved in health sufficiently to be able to be dressed and to sit up for a short time each day. It is necessary for his progress toward recovery that he spend as much time as possible in the open air. He has a cot on a porch where he can lie, but unfortunately, he is without suitable wraps and other clothing and coverings. He is immensely self-respecting and has actually endangered his recovery by his intense desire to do something to earn the money necessary to provide for his own needs; but this will not be possible for some time to come, if ever; and in the meantime his need is becoming acute.

"I would like to be put in touch with some one who has partly worn but still serviceable clothing and covers to dispose of. Perhaps some mother who has lost a son would be glad to know that the unworn garments were being put to so good a use in serving the need of a living boy, who is making so brave a fight against great odds. Any one who is familiar with the requirements of outdoor sleeping and has any part of this equipment to dispose of would find here a recipient whose cheerful courage in bearing a heavy handicap is a source of inspiration to all who come in contact with him.

"He is a trifle over 5 feet in height and slight in build; wears a 13½ shirt. Exactness in fit is not essential, since he cannot get about; what he needs is warmth, cleanliness, and comfort.

"H. H."

I will be happy to send the name of this applicant to any one who desires to offer help.

Needs Clothes and Shoes.

"I have been a patient with pulmonary tuberculosis for almost three years. I thought that some of your readers might have a suit of clothes, size about 38, or a pair of shoes, size 7, that they had no further use for that they might send to me, as I am without friends or relatives. I would appreciate their kindness. J. B.

Clothes for Children.

"My wife left me with four children and a number of debts. Is there some one who has some clothing for a 12 year old girl who goes to school? I have to pay all these debts and I cannot afford to buy clothes. The girl wears a No. 2½ shoe. If you can help me I will be thankful. I have a boy 14 years, a girl 12, a boy 10, and a boy 8. J. S."

To Make Rose Jar.

"Will you kindly give me the recipe for making a rose jar?

"MRS. R. E. C."

Can some one supply instructions for making a rose jar?

A Fair Exchange.

"Is there some one who speaks either French or Italian who will teach me one of those languages in exchange for voice lessons? M. H. G."

Cannot Buy Clothes.

"I wonder if any one has any clothes they could spare for a widow striving to support two small sons, 6 and 9. I work so hard and find it impossible to buy clothes out of my earnings. My youngest son is in the hospital expecting to leave soon, and I have no warm clothing for him at all. I myself am sadly in need of clothes and will be most thankful for anything I may be lucky enough to receive. MRS. D."

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

An Amateur Baker.

Mother had been out of town for several days and I decided to surprise her upon her return with the best batch of bread ever baked. Incidentally, it was my first attempt.

I set my bread Friday evening and planned to have it all baked by 10 o'clock, when the train arrived. However, it would not rise, so, not wishing to admit defeat, when the train whistled next morning I threw the dough out into the back yard and covered it over with dirt.

Later that morning we were attracted to the back yard by a commotion among the chickens. They were gathered around and pecking at a peculiar seething and swelling little mound rising up in the yard. Possibilities of volcanoes and other peculiar tricks of nature were discussed, but finally a courageous neighbor lady began poking at the mass with a long stick, revealing my discarded dough, now as light and fluffy as any one could desire. Old Sol had done the work. G. T.

Trouble with the Engine.

When I was a little lad I took great delight in playing "choo-choo" with the aid of kitchen chairs. Eventually some trouble would develop with the engine, and I would do some great puttering around. One day in my endeavors to locate the trouble I put my head in between two rungs of the chair and when I wanted to extricate my head I couldn't do so. My cries soon brought my mother in, and, there being no saw in the house, she had to take me some four or five blocks down the street to a carpenter shop, where the rungs were sawed off. I made a funny sight with my mother holding up the chair over my head, and a delegation of my little friends at my heels. J. B. D.

Cured of Bluffing.

Some girls who lived a few doors from me were on their back porch one day eating ice cream.

One said to me: "We have ice cream. Don't you wish you had some?"

Not to be outdone I told her that I did have some. I went into the house and brought out some lard on a saucer, and told them it was ice cream.

One doubting Thomas said I should let her see me eat it. I took a big mouthful of the lard. Ugh! I can taste it now, but it cured me of ever trying to put something over again. M. G. B.

The Triumph of Quality

From a humble beginning years ago, the Larabee milling organization has grown to its present magnitude; until today the name of Larabee is known wherever flour is used throughout the world.

This triumph has been due solely to the unvarying high standard of quality that distinguishes Larabee's Best Flour,—a superiority that is at once apparent to every user.

Any grocer can supply you with Larabee's Best Flour.

She's the greatest little pal—always ready for a good time

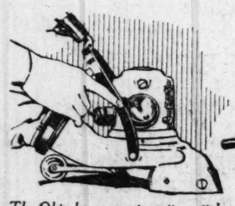
Do you and your wife have time to be pals together? Give her an Ohio for Christmas

DOES your wife have time to be your pal? Is she always "fine and dandy?" Always able to take time out for play? Or is she tired and worn with the work of cleaning her house? If she pays for a clean house with her health, and at the sacrifice of your happiness together, the price is too great.

Give her an Ohio Electric Cleaner for Christmas and save her time, her strength and her health.

The first purpose of the Ohio Electric Cleaner is to really clean, and it does clean, thoroughly—everything in the house. A test in your own home, without obligation to you, will prove it.

The Ohio has a switch that automatically starts the motor when the handle is in sweeping position, and stops it when the handle is upright. An automatic dust valve prevents dirt from falling back from the bag onto the floor, and a slowly revolving brush combined with powerful suction gives the only system that has proved it can clean without injuring your carpets or rugs.



The Ohio has an automatic switch—no danger of burning the hand on a frayed electric cord

The first job of the Ohio is to clean, but it also saves time and strength. Look for the cleaner with the red band is a food replete with tonic-qualities that improves appetite and builds up resistance to overcome the cause of the weakness.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 20-21

THAT fire and water are the habitations of spirits is perhaps a universal article of the pagan creed. The sacred ever burning hearth fire was, in primitive days, reckoned the special abode of the household gods; it was, therefore, considered dangerous to give a stranger a burning brand.

If you want to know how things will turn out, you must study the fire attentively. If you wish to get detailed answers, repeat the following before consulting the fire:

"This fortune I aspire,
As I hope that I may see,
That thou still will truly be,
A fortune-giver unto me."

To see a bright blaze in the distance after retiring is a good omen and signifies that you will be successful in what you undertake. If it flickers and dies out before you turn your eyes away it signifies that you have lost an excellent opportunity.

If a log rolls off the andirons and into the fireplace, it is a sign of a visitor, and in case you run and spit on it the wish before it reaches the hearth will come you wish for will come.

Never make a fire when you are greatly angry, for, in the first place, it will not burn, and that will make you angrier still, and in the second place you will have a quarrel with your best friend.

A cloud of fire falling down on the hearth is a sign of company. When the fire sparkles it is a sign of rain. To burn a fire with a broom will bring disappointment.

If a stranger pokes your fire and it burns you will find some money.

If you throw salt on the fire you will quarrel with your nearest and dearest.

If a smile makes a fire without tears and laughs it is a sign of fine, healthy children.

If you step on a spark of fire you will prevent some one from telling a lie.

If the fire blazes up suddenly a visitor or a stranger is coming.

If the fire burns with a pale flame it signifies foul weather.

If the fire burns and scorches more than usual it is a sign of frost.

To sit with your back to the fire brings rain.

To stir the fire with the tongs stirs up anger.

When the fire will not burn it is a sign of quarrels and bad luck.

If the wood in the fire crackles it is a sign of a storm.

When the fire spurts and jumps it announces a visit or a present.

It is bad luck to pile up cinders on the fire; a sign that the rent will be raised.

Never rake out all the fire at night.

The noise made by the gas in a piece of coal catching fire is the sign of a quarrel.

If one looks intently into the fire it is a sign that someone is evilly disposed towards him or her.

If a chip in the fire in winter time has a large "cat's tail," it is a sign of snow.

If the fire burns brightly after it has been stirred, it denotes that the absent lover, father, or mother is in good spirits.

If you are thinking of anyone and the fire suddenly blazes up, it is a sure sign that the compliment is returned.

When sparks fly out of the fire, a maiden may expect a call from her sweetheart.

If you wish for anything very much, poke the fire for 15 minutes and you will get it.

If a youth sits musing and gazing into the fire, it is a sign that some one is doing him ill.

If any one succeeds in lighting a fine fire with a single match, it is a sign that he or she will make an amiable partner in marriage.

If a fire lighted in the morning and then not replenished but forgotten is found burning in the evening, it is a sign of death.

A round cinder flying out of the fire is said to be a "money box," and is a sign that the person towards whom it flies will receive money.

If you find the fire still burning from overnight when you come to make it in the morning, it is a sign of illness during the day.

Much to Their Delight.

I answered the switchboard during noon hour and had to go from one end of the office to the other. I took my apple along, reached the telephone, and put the apple to my left ear, thinking it was the receiver. I said "hello" about five times and finally discovered I was eating the half eaten apple for a receiver, much to the delight of the office force.

Along Came a Train.

When I was graduated from high school in a small village, I had to deliver the valedictory. Just as I was nearing reward, "On the journey of life we must all be ready," along came a train (the station was just back of the opera house), whistling so loudly and continuously that it was impossible for me to make myself heard. In sheer desperation I stopped and turned to my father, who sat on the stage with the rest of the school board.

"I can't stop the train," he said, "go ahead."

I did, when the laughter had subsided.

Thought She Was Gassed.

All my life I've had a horror of anaesthetics. While waiting for a filling to "set" the dentist placed a pillow in my mouth and walked out of the room. I heard a peculiar hissing noise. I screamed, made a mad scramble to get out of the chair, and kicked the glass front of an electric cabinet. Assistants came flying; also the dentist.

I grabbed him around the neck, crying: "Why did you try to give me gas! I told you I wouldn't take it." Amid general laughter he kindly explained that the harmless little tube was to draw the moisture from my mouth, to help the new filling to harden.

Sensed Something Wrong.

Upon going into an office I espied a chair in a rather darkened corner, and as the man I wished to see had a caller I decided to sit down and wait. I am stout, and as I sat down I felt something soft. Quickly jumping up, I picked up a soft hat which I had flattened.

Thinking no one saw me, I put my hand through it, trying to straighten it, and then put it on the table, saying: "Whose hat is that?"

The typists were convulsed with laughter.

Just then the man caller came out, and, taking the hat up, walked out, putting it on as he walked. He took it off again, looked at it, put it on, and then took it off. This he kept up until he reached the elevator. Now every time I enter that office the force begins to howl. Can you blame them?

Took One Sip.

One day last summer I was serving tea on our houseboat to some friends from the neighboring boats. Presently we spied the beautiful sloop of a young lawyer who had recently come into the bay. The girls were anxious to meet him, so I hailed him as he passed to come aboard, which he promptly did.

After presenting him to the guests, I slipped aft to the galley to make a fresh pot of tea, and when I poured him a cup I felt sure from the lovely amber color it would be delicious. He took one sip and went on talking, but, though he stirred absently and nibbled the cakes, I noticed he did not take any more.

"Too hot," I thought, "the poor chap has burnt his mouth."

Later during a pause I said, "How do you like our new tea, Mr. Hartley?"

"I've no doubt it is very good," he said smiling, "but I think you have made this with salt water."

Which I had.

Out of the Army.

After being discharged from the army a friend invited me to dinner at her home. Everything went along fine until we began to leave the table, when I unconsciously started to carry my dishes to the kitchen, much to the amusement of the family, who teased me for the rest of the evening about K. P.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

SPEAKING OF HATS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Friends felt so strongly on the subject that they started a movement last fall to get me out of a big hat. I had just bought one, but on being told how awful I looked in it some sixteen times in one afternoon, I hid it in the top of a trunk that always has another trunk on top of it, leaving the only way to communicate with its interior to be through drawers.

My next step was to surround myself with a series of close hats with trimming going round them, and every body said "I have always wanted to get you into a small hat"—although they kept mighty quiet about it before.

This fall I began a long and weary search for this model that kind friends had decreed for me. Only one was to be found in the city of Paris, and after placing the order for it, I had to hurry round to cancel it, for friends said, without particularizing, but with hands in the attitude signifying consternation, "Oh, no, don't get that." I stopped not to inquire why, but continued searching and complaining about how hard it was to find a hat.

The one I had on my head at the moment was the one that had reposed in the top of the trunk, despised and reviled, for one year. The same friends who had complained about it now listened to my distressed story of trying to find something.

"What's the matter with that one—it's one of the most becoming hats you ever had on," they said.

"But last year," I protested, "you would not let me wear it."

"Oh, last year," they deprecate, "It was not becoming; they were not wearing them like that."

Certainly it is the truth that if "they are not wearing them" nobody in Paris will think the shape becoming, and if they are, the modistes of Paris will crowd you into them irrespective of how you look. This year they are wearing our old American friend of a mushroom shape and for even semi-dress hats a shape that makes a cart wheel look limited. All of the trimming is on the right side, and one of the popular forms for it to take is a tassel, sometimes made of an ostrich feather, hanging from the under brim down over the right ear like a call bell.

The first sketch is very much in the current manner. Brims, as in this case, turn up, and the decoration follows the line of the under side. A spray of black osprey sweeps along the line of this one and juts beyond it. The hat itself is of black velvet and comes low down on the forehead.

It is awfully chic this year to look straggly—a little unkempt, like the conventionalized conception of a poet. The hat of the second sketch is of turquoise velvet and is covered with cock feathers in iridescent greenish blue. That combination in itself, you would think, demanded an explanation, but I have none to offer. The effect was very—even surprisingly—good, and that is all I have to say. The feathers were arranged to lift over the face and fall over each ear.

With the boa of cock feathers, the costume seemed somewhat in the manner of chanticleer. It wound round the neck and ended in a point.

A chic blonde wore this with a dress of tête de negre velvet, a conspicuous feature of which were the long, tight sleeves. The effect was awfully smart.

The third hat is of black panne plush, tightly draped round the forehead and temples, and expanding in the crown to something almost like Portia's cap, with its points on either side. A black jet ornament, like a Spanish comb, stands up at the front of the crown. A fringe of a veil of gray tulle shades the eyes and gives them mystery.

The collar of the coat accompanying this hat is very new. It is on a beige coat of rough material. It rolls up round the head and over the chin. Black seal comes down over it in points. The effect of the collar is to make the face look small.

The fourth hat, the artist tells me, is for teas but what the objection is to wearing it elsewhere I have not figured out. It is of panne velvet in tête de negre, and is one of the few tightly folded toques of the season. Arching over the top and descending on each side runs a circle of brown and gray feathers. One knows not whence they sprung. I suspect them of being chicken feathers, but they are elevated to the plane of art by the magic hand of the French modiste.

The dress which goes with this costume is of black velvet. That is to say, the long sleeves and the skirt are of velvet, with a tight fitting bodice of taffeta. The earrings are pear shaped pearls, and the muff sable.

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"Mother said George as he led a poor little boy in, "please give this boy a pair of my shoes."

"Why, how lovely," said mother. "I guess we can find a pair for him."

Then mother commenced asking him questions. She did not know he was deaf and dumb.

"O, mother," said George, "don't ask all those questions, 'cause he don't speak or hear, but he knows."

G. McD.

My daughter, when quite small, was inclined to be bossy when playing with other children.

One day I said to her: "Don't try to boss your playmates all the time."

She replied, "Well, someone must be the boss, and I can do it better than they can."

F. H. K.

Bob and Sue were traveling alone for the first time. Responsibility weighed heavy on Bob and as his sister chattered gayly he said: "Susie, you'll have to talk to yourself. I'm the man that has to get us off at the right place and you discommode me."

S. Y.

Nicholas stubbed his toe and fell. Margaret, wanting to be sympathetic, said: "What's the matter, Nickey, did you stub your toe?

He promptly replied: "No, I fell down wif it."

M. B.

The children were marching in from recess. The teacher noticed an overcoat on the floor of the hall. She left the coat there, wishing to note how many would walk over it. The first four passed in. The fifth, however, stopped, picked up the coat, and brushed off the dust. The teacher, on complimenting him, received this reply: "I guess I ought to pick it up; its my coat."

L. McC.

Philip was downtown with his mother and aunt, who were purchasing Christmas gifts, and they were discussing dubiously the many things they must buy. He listened intently for a minute and then remarked: "Why isn't you popular like me? Then you would get lots of fings and wouldn't have to buy anything."

F. B.

Bobby always claimed all the new little colts and calves on his father's farm, and it was his privilege to name them. This particular morning he had a little calf to name, and had finally asked his older sister's assistance.

Among other names she suggested "Pocahontas."

To this suggestion Bobby replied seriously, "But he isn't that kind of a calf."

V. E. G.

Billy, mischievous and boylike, while visiting his uncle, was invited by his mother to her room for a much needed chastisement.

His uncle asked him the next time they met what his mother had given him.

To which Billy airily replied: "O, just a little talk."

V. H.

The family had been teasing mother about the amount of time she wasted doing useless shopping in the city. Later Bobby, when asked what his dad did, said: "Dad is a banker, and mother is a downtowner."

E. C. H.

Jane and I were picking raspberries last summer, when I happened to pick one not quite ripe. "Oh, Auntie Lill," she said, "you should not pick them until they are ready to come off their own opinion."

Here's The Christmas Gift For All Children!

MAKE the children happy this year with Mother Goose Stories and Rhymes the 20th Century Way! Remember how you used to love to have your mother read about Little Bo-Peep, and Mary and Her Little Lamb? And the hours of fun you had with the singing games—Miss Jennia Jones and the Farmer in the Dell—and all the other childhood favorites!

Think what it would have meant to have had them sing to you on the phonograph. You could have played them over and over again if you'd wanted to. All this and more is now ready and waiting for your children in Bubble Books, that sing.

What are Bubble Books?

Each Bubble Book tells a different story of the little boy and his wonderful adventures in Fairyland. It tells how he blows the Magic Bubbles from which come the lovable characters so dear to childhood. And the songs these little people sing are beautifully illustrated in color and recorded on real Columbia records. Three records come with each book and can be played on any phonograph. They are called Bubble Books because the characters in the stories come from the bubbles.

Go to any toy, phonograph, book or department store today and get a set of Bubble Books.

There are twelve now ready and more are in preparation. Bubble Books solve the "gifts for children" problem for they are ideal for all children, girls or boys, from the little two year old toddlers up. Bubble Books are $1.50 each, with three records. You will love them too.

4-Inch Opening enables you to pack such foods as Fried Chicken, Baked Pork and Beans, Whole Boiled Potatoes, Ice Cream. Easy to Fill or to Empty.

Admits the hand freely for cleansing and drying. Container and jacket joined at opening with Patented Thermal Seal, making joint both leak- and heat-proof—absolutely sanitary.

A Gift All Can Share In

This New Type Family-Size Thermal Jar—Holds One Gallon—Keeps Either Foods or Liquids Hot or Cold—Built for Hard Usage

Now you can own a thermal jar that not only has the unusual capacity of one full gallon (16 cups), but more marvelous still, can be used for either food or liquids. The four-inch opening admits food in large pieces—you can carry fried chicken, baked potatoes, salads or ice cream. Or you have coffee, chocolate, lemonade or iced tea enough for the whole family. Contents will keep piping hot or icy cold for hours. Can you imagine a more delightful Christmas Gift?

The Aladdin Thermalware Jar consists of three parts, the insulated jar proper, the hollow glass stopper and the screw cup-cap. The insulated jar consists of a heavy glass container, gallon capacity, within a hardened, ribbed aluminum jacket.

The inner container and the jacket are joined at the four-inch opening into one piece with a patented thermal seal, making it both leak- and heat-proof. The annular space between container and jacket is packed with a high efficiency insulation, which also acts as a shock absorber for bumps and knocks.

All corners of inside glass container are rounded in wide curves, and it is beautifully silvered. The aluminum jacket is highly polished. Weight empty, 5 pounds; 13¾ in. high and 8¼ in. diameter.

Made on the same principle as the Aladdin Thermalware serving dishes furnished by us for The Community Kitchen at Evanston, Ill.

Aladdin THERMALWARE Jar

The Jar is absolutely sanitary—no chance for seepage or leakage. You can insert your whole hand through the opening, and cleanse and dry the Jar in a twinkling.

Has a high thermal efficiency, and is built to withstand rough usage. Capacity and durability considered, the Aladdin is the lowest price thermal bottle you can buy. Ask to see it.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

For You to Decide.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19, brunette, and deeply in love with a fellow four years my senior. I have kept company with him for six months and he showed he loved me. We have broken up for three months. Now he wants to come back to me. Will you please advise me what to do?

"ANXIOUS."

Don't you think that would be up to you to answer yourself? If you love him deeply why not let him come back?

Send Them Back.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please advise me what I should do in a case like this? I went with a man four-teen years my senior. I did not like him, but he gave me two rings, saying they were friendship rings and when we were engaged I was to get a beautiful diamond ring. I have broken off with this man and offered him his rings back. He took them and threw them in the corner on the floor and was going to put his foot on them when my mother stopped him. He went away and didn't take the rings. I have heard that he wants his rings back. Should I give them back or should I keep them, as he has already refused them? BLUE EYES."

Send the rings back by mail and without delay. You hadn't any business in the first place taking rings from him.

Consider It Fairly.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 18 and seldom go out at night. The members of my family treat me worse than 'Cinderella.' No matter what I do or say, some one is always against me. No sooner do I stop quarrelling with one when another starts to find some fault with me. At times I feel like killing myself. Will you kindly give me some advice as to what I should do? WORRIED."

Remember, it takes two to make a quarrel. Worried, and I suspect your disposition must be a little quarrelsome or you would not be at loggerheads with the members of your family all the time. Of course, I may be wrong, but I want you first to try and analyze the situation, thinking of yourself more as the offender than the martyr of the family.

Refused Her Flower.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a girl who is in my class at school, who I think loves me. A few days ago she handed me a geranium and said that it was for me. I handed it back to her and told her that I did not care for it. Another girl who is in my class has told me that she cried outside of school because I did not take the flower. Do you think she really loves me?

"WILLIAM."

The girl ought to have found out your favorite flower before attempting to tell it to you with flowers, shouldn't she, William? My private opinion is that she was teasing you.

Your Guiding Star.

"Dear Miss Blake: I'm 18 and I'm in love with a girl of 17. I only earn $100 a month and would be unable to marry for a few years more. She doesn't know I love her. Would you advise me to let her know how I feel or would it be best to give her up? She is a wonderful girl, but I'll abide by your advice. BILLY MC."

Instead of giving her up, why not keep her in mind as your guiding star on the road to success. An ideal girl has led many a young man on to a most successful life. Then when you are a little older and earning a little more she may crown your success by becoming Mrs. Billy Mc.

Longing for a Sweetheart.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it wrong for a girl of 17 to long for a sweetheart? My parents think that I have plenty of time, but most of my girl friends are engaged or have steadies. They think it strange that I am not going with anybody yet. Although I am so young, I long for a real pal. Do you think this a silly notion?"

"I. N."

If it were a silly notion, everybody older than 17 would have been "sillies" at least once in his or her life. It's a natural desire for youth as well as age to want enjoyable companionship, but 17 need not be too eager, because her heart changes frequently before she finds the one who is going to make her happiest.

You Were Right.

"Dear Miss Bake: I am a girl of 20, considered educated, but cannot fathom this question. I have taken the liberty to ask a man that I have met four times to call on Saturday. He told me he would come. While conversing with my girl friends this question was brought up, and I told my friends what I had done. They were greatly surprised to think I was so forward to do such a thing. They said that it would have been more proper to wait until he had taken it upon himself to ask to call and that perhaps he had only accepted the invitation through courtesy. MARION."

You were right. It's the girl's privilege to invite the young man to call.

I Don't Know

I DO Know

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA

Will Tell You

How often during the day, at your office, at your club, at your lodge—how often has your manager asked you for information which you did not know? How often have your wife and your children been at a loss for useful, important and often highly necessary information? Have you had to say "I do not know" when you really should know—which, if you had owned the Britannica, you would know? How often have your children had to admit that they did not know, when if they had had the opportunity of consulting the Encyclopaedia Britannica they would have had complete and authoritative information?

Think of the satisfaction of never having to say "I don't know" to anybody—of the pride you would take in having your children never say "I don't know" at school or in their work.

Are you one of those half-informed persons who are trying to slip through life by making a lame excuse when a question is put to you, the answer to which you have every right to know?

Are you one who cannot hold up your end in a discussion or conversation with other men because you have no real facts on your tongue?

Are you not a little ashamed of your lack of actual information on nearly every subject that comes up during the day at your office or in your home?

Now, as Never Before, You Must Know

But if you wish to make your way upward in business you must have knowledge, you must have information which makes you more ...t, more competent, more responsible.

...ritannica will give you a tremendous advantage. If you know anything abo... you know that. Think of what it would mean to you, to your children, to have access to the sum and substance of all human knowledge! Consider what a satisfaction it would be for you to have at hand the answer to every question which comes to an active mind, to your wife's and children's minds!

The Britannica covers the whole range of man's thought and activity and achievement. It contains more than 41,000 special articles, more than 500,000 indexed facts.

To describe quickly its scope is impossible. It contains many thousand articles on every subject in the world—on religion, history, biography, art, science, literature, manufacturing, invention, engineering, law, commerce, business and hundreds upon hundreds of other subjects—41,000 articles in all. It abounds in practical, everyday useful facts that satisfy the inquisitiveness of the child-mind, that enlighten the housewife, farmer, business man, the lawyer—every class. The best proof of its usefulness is that men and women in all walks of life are among the 200,000 owners of the Eleventh Edition.

Why Don't You Own the Britannica?

We offer you this unusual opportunity to own an India paper set. These sets are printed on the genuine India paper which is thin but opaque, strong and beautiful.

This very thin, strong paper has made the great Britannica more convenient to handle, therefore more inviting to read.

These sets are bound in the best of leathers and cloth and the workmanship is of the highest quality. These sets are offered at prices and terms which make the Britannica a bargain to anyone who, like you, does not yet own a set.

$1 as first payment brings the complete set to your home—29 volumes, 44,000,000 words, 15,000 maps and illustrations, 30,000 pages. You pay the balance in small monthly amounts.

Clip and mail the coupon today—NOW—and obtain our 128-page booklet fully describing the Britannica, which will be sent you free and postpaid.

If you are ready to subscribe now, write an order on a piece of paper and mail with a dollar bill and we will ship you a set at once.

Makes a Good Cup of Coffee Better

Nu-tro

The New Milk Product

Use Nu-tro same as milk or cream

In coffee, in cooking and baking use Nu-tro the same as milk or cream. Nu-tro is better than cream in coffee—better than milk in cooking.

Nu-tro is a blend of pure, fresh cow's milk, with the animal fats extracted, evaporated to double strength and enriched with refined coconut fat, resulting in a product of far greater food value than anything of a similar nature.

Nu-tro helps make delicious soups

Nu-tro intensifies the soup flavor—blends with it and enriches it. Use the recipe in this ad. Try a Nu-tro-made soup and see how much more delicious and flavory it is.

YOUR GROCER HAS NU-TRO

Indiana Condensed Milk Co.,
Main Office—Indianapolis, Ind.
Condenseries Sheridan, Ind.; Lebanon, Ind.; Albany, Wis.

Try This New Way:
Pour contents of can of tomato soup into top of double boiler. Enrich by adding cup of Nu-tro diluted to desired consistency. Authorities in domestic science state that mixing ingredients while cold prevents curdling. Heat thoroughly and serve at once with croutonnes.

A STUCCO BUNGALOW.

A STORY AND A HALF bungalow is one of the most flexible types of home. For a small family the single floor suffices; and the large attic serves merely as a storage space and air blanket to keep the ground floor cool in summer and warm in winter. But if the family grows, or if the place is sold to a larger family, the attic can be finished off into bedrooms, which double the sleeping capacity of the dwelling at once.

This adaptability is only one of the virtues of the bungalow shown here. It has plenty more. It is unpretentious [illegible] at the same time unusual. It gets [illegible] on without shouting for it. It is attractive without and still more attractive within. It supplies the builder with a safe and comfortable home at a minimum cost and if he ever has to sell the design and construction will appeal to every intelligent purchaser.

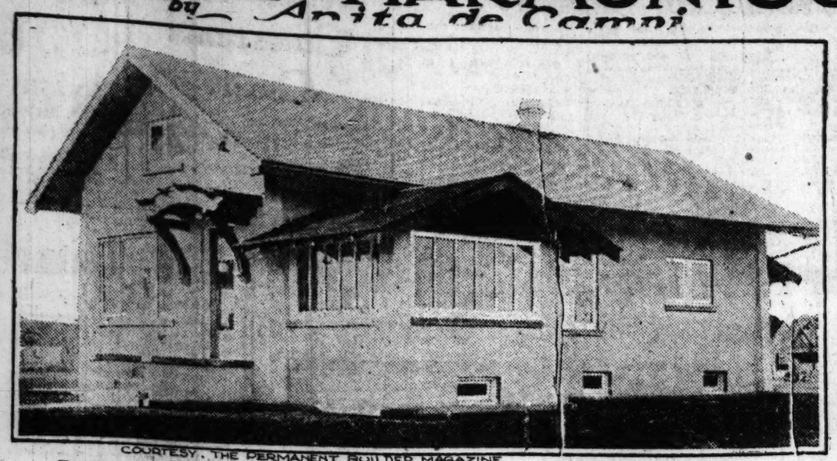
Every home needs some shelter over the main entrance. Usually this is furnished by a porch. In this case it is provided by the curved hood, which will do the work perfectly unless the house is turned to face the direction from which driving storms come. The front door opens directly into the living room, 23 feet long by 13 feet wide, and filled with light from a splendid window group in front. Unlike most bungalows, the living room of this one is not cut to pieces by a host of doors. There are only three, and all of them are near one end. The main part of the spacious room is as secluded and sheltered as any one could wish.

At the right of the entrance French doors lead into an enclosed porch, 12 feet square. Seen from the outside, this porch, with its sloping buttresses at the corners, is the most distinctive feature of the dwelling. It maintains an high position when viewed from within. Three of its walls are almost entirely of glass. It is so placed that it commands a view of the front street, of the side street—for this house is peculiarly adapted to a corner lot—and of the garden.

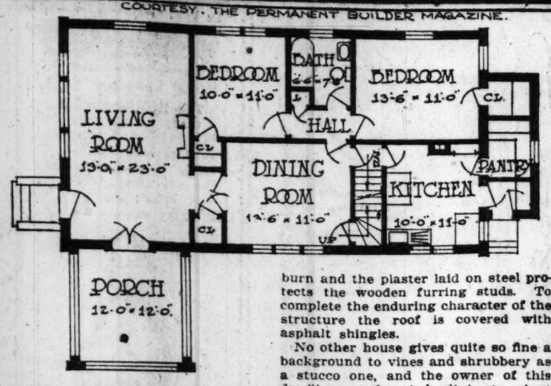
There are several ways of treating such a porch, only one of which will be suggested here. Imagine the floor dropped a couple of inches below that of the living room, and composed of tile, brick, or cement. Imagine cement window boxes a foot or two in width running around three sides of the room at the glass level. With that arrangement, instead of a mere porch, we have both porch and conservatory, in which a large variety of plants can be grown with a minimum of trouble, a place where the family can live in a garden the year around.

Almost opposite the entrance door is a short passage, with a coat closet on one side, leading to the dining room. This is 11 feet by 13 feet 6 inches. In one corner of the room are the stairs leading to the attic, an unconventional arrangement, but a handy and space saving one. The dining room is lighted by a group of three fine windows, overlooking the side street.

The kitchen, 10 feet by 11, is reached from the dining room by a short passage under the stairs. The kitchen has light from two sides. The service entrance is at the rear, in a small but useful inclosed porch, and near this entrance is the door to the pantry. Most bungalows do not have a pantry; this has an unusually large and handy one.



COURTESY, THE PERMANENT BUILDER MAGAZINE.



The short hall, reached from the dining room, gives access to two bedrooms, the bathroom, and linen closet. One of these bedrooms is 11 feet by 13 feet 6 inches; the other 11 by 10. Both have closets; the rear room an extremely large one.

A family with two children of the same sex will find ample quarters on this floor. For a larger family the attic can be finished into two fine bedrooms, with another bath, and still leave space for storing trunks.

The perspective view of the house shows but one chimney, that which accommodates the flues of the furnace and the kitchen range. A great many people these days, especially those who have lived in flats, do not care about a fireplace in the living room. If one is desired, however, space is shown for it on the floor plan.

The lines of this bungalow seem to demand that it be of stucco. The best possible basis for stucco is hollow tile, and the walls of this dwelling are built of that material. The air cells of the tile make this kind of wall impervious to heat and cold, and besides it is furred on the inside, and lined with gypsum plaster laid on metal lath. In this way weather and fire are both walled out; the tile and stucco cannot burn and the plaster laid on steel protects the wooden furring studs. To complete the enduring character of the structure the roof is covered with asphalt shingles.

No other house gives quite so fine a background to vines and shrubbery as a stucco one, and the owner of this dwelling need not hesitate to plant these helps to hominess. They will beautify his building, and they cannot rot the walls or make them damp.

Answers to Queries.

MR. C. B. S.: Use lambrequins of figured linen in floral colors on an old ivory ground and have inside draperies of repp, matching the dominant color of the flowers.

MRS. G. P. M.: For your curtains throughout use champagne colored silk gauze, the yellow tone of which will in a measure make up for your lack of sunlight. These may be used without overdrapes. Use a taupe rug in the dining room. If you do the walls over let it be in a yellowish old ivory. Use yellow and white stripe in your north bedroom and light mauve and old ivory or jade and old ivory in the west room.

MRS. T. J. L.: As a general rule, light neutral walls are safe. Old ivory, French gray, barley color, fawn color, and oyster green are all excellent backgrounds. Use walnut furniture and intermingle with some brown wicker. Brighten the whole scheme by the use of glazed chintz in bouquet colors on an ivory ground. I would be able to advise you more specifically if I knew just what furniture you had as a nucleus.

MRS. J. E. S.: Place either a mirror or a decorative floral painting above your buffet, and a colorful bowl of Italian marble fruit between the candlesticks, as the room lacks this flash of color. Bear in mind that in every successful decorative scheme, all of the three primary colors are introduced, either singly or in combination. In your living room you will need a place to lie comfortably and a place to sit comfortably, and bookcases and some musical instrument, either a piano or a victrola. A few occasional chairs and small tables, and then, of course, appropriate accessories. Why not paint the bird's eye maple either old ivory or a French gray?

MRS. L. A.: You would blend your gray paper and brown woodwork best by using brown and gray floor covering. Choose a small diaper pattern. I should keep the woodwork in the two rooms alike. The Adam type of furniture would be nice for the smaller room.

MRS. P. R. C.: Instead of a partition I should use a folding screen between the breakfast room and sun room. This can be attached at one side, and will allow of your throwing it back and making one big sun room out of it. Make the partition of sompo-board or beaver-board, framed in narrow wood molding and paint it gray and white to match the other building material. Yes, linoleum would be all right for the floor covering. Avoid ornate patterns.

M. S.: Use window shades of glazed English chintz. Have them close to the glass and inside of this put upper and lower sash curtains of bone colored casement cloth. The chintz will be flowered and two pairs of sash curtains used, one at the upper and one at the lower sash.

The case of Lucy Gray—

Lucy was explaining her experience to a group of girls.

"When I was 18 years old," she said, seriously, "my father died.

"I had to go to work, but I didn't know what to do. I had just graduated from high school, and I had to have something quick. I simply couldn't afford to spend six months or a year learning shorthand or bookkeeping, and I didn't know a thing about business.

"One night mother looked up from her newspaper: 'Lucy, dear,' she said, suddenly, 'why don't you take up filing? It seems to me the work should be interesting and I hear the salaries are good.'

"Well, to cut a long story short, I took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. I graduated in 30 days and immediately secured a position paying $20 a week. I shall never forget how proud I was to get that first week's salary—the first money I had ever earned.

"That was a little over a year ago. Since then I have received two raises and today I am in charge of the Filing Department.

"The work is awfully pleasant. Best of all, it is extremely interesting. I meet nice people—I come in contact with the big men in the business.

"And I am just starting. Some day soon I am going to be getting a good bit more than I do now.

"There is a great future for most girls who take up filing. I certainly advise any girl who wants to better her position to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to talk to you."

Use it at the first hint of sore throat

Safeguard yourself against further and more serious trouble by taking Formamint, the germ-fighting throat tablet, at the very first sign of a sore throat. This common ailment, painful enough in itself, if unchecked, may easily develop into something more dangerous.

Sore throat is caused by germs—the kind you can't help inhaling, and that thrive in the soft tissues of the mouth and throat. Don't wait until you get home to use a gargle or spray, but have a few tablets of Formamint handy. Take one at once at the first sign, let it dissolve slowly in your mouth. Can be taken beneficially every half hour until throat is relieved.

Formamint mixes its powerful, pleasant tasting antiseptic with the saliva, bathing the infecting membranes continuously, combats the germs, keeping them at a safe minimum. Formamint is so convenient to take that it may be used unnoticeably anywhere you may be, on the street, in a crowded car, stuffy office, theatre, or school.

Buy a package of Formamint today of your druggist and be prepared to ward off sore throats, tonsillitis and influenza. Men find it very helpful in easing "smoker's sore throats."

Formamint is sold by all druggists. Any druggist will tell you how widely Formamint is recommended by throat specialists, physicians and dentists.

The HOOVER ELECTRIC SUCTION SWEEPER

IT BEATS... AS IT SWEEPS AS IT CLEANS

Immaculate rugs are safe playgrounds for the children. Clean thoroughly to protect childhood's precious health. Beat out embedded dirt and germs. Sweep up all litter that clings. Suction away all loose grime. Do it frequently. Only The Hoover performs these essentials of sanitary cleaning. And it is the largest-selling electric cleaner in the world.

SIMPLEST BUTTER CAKE.

CAKE formulas are few and brief. Cake art or method is long. A cake recipe is a formula plus short or long directions describing the method or art of putting the ingredients together. There is classic art in cakes. You will find it in the sponge cake, the classic name for which is Savoy cake. Pound cake is almost a classic, and seed cake is a truly classic. We get dubist effects, as we did get them in war times, in eggless, butterless, wheatless mixtures. And after method or art in cake making there comes the "setting up" of cakes, most notably and classically, in wedding cake. Wedding cakes and birthday cakes and twelfth night cakes are not made by some unique and special recipe, although usually by some more or less classic and universal formula. The form and the frosting and icing are the facts that make their character as cakes, not their ingredients. It is a bit different with Christmas cakes, since they have been "plum cakes" or, in modern phraseology, fruit cakes, for ever so many hundreds of years.

Excess of Sugar.

One member of a family in which the art of the table is considered worthy of attention by its highly literate members—one highly literary as well as highly informed—recently wrote "They're like layer cake; you get tired of the icing." And do not many of us, especially when layer cakes are served with ice cream? This mixture constitutes a pleonasm of sugar, but the cake alone is that, a redundance, an excess, a monotonous excess.

This excess of sugar not infrequently causes a sensitive eater intense discomfort. It is heavy fuel which makes a hot fire in our digestive chambers. Yet the layer cake has become a sort of national ideal. And being often poor it has become a national affliction.

If we have a fine cake knife and server, we can just as well show it off by presenting to our tables a round of rather thick cake delicately iced. Rather and now considered a high cake form, which requires rather an extensive outlay in cake tins, is the cake, the tin in which it is baked being of the shape of a border mold. This is the form used for filling with ice cream, the whole topped with whipped cream like a cloud covered mountain. It makes an imposing dessert piece.

Simplest Cake Service.

But the simplest of all cake service, cake squares or other cut shapes, is elegant enough if we choose to make it so. We can overdo the icing with them as with the layer cake, when we use a bit of a square of cake half an inch deep with icing on all but its base and then put a rose or some other figure in sugar on its top. When the icing is one of butter, as sometimes happens, we may get enough fuel for half a day's work by eating one of these pieces. If we do not like work, and cannot make this over into too solid flesh, we are bound to suffer discomfort. Children who eat mixtures so condensed soon become burned out bits of humanity with unsound teeth, rheumatism, and a predisposition to take any disease that comes along.

On the other hand, there is no real substitute for a plain piece of cake having its highly palatability reasonably increased by a conservative layer of icing. It satisfies a legitimate hunger for the type of food it represents. Unfortunately, it is so attractive that it can be indulged in when the appetite for almost any other sort of food has been appeased.

Variations of Cup Cake.

A good deal might be written on the conservative and legitimate use of cake as contrasted with the lavish and unwholesome uses. There is no doubt but that cake represents a diet luxury. It is, in fact, a symbol of the happy condition of being well provided for. Yet there are cakes which highly gratify the appetite which are but slightly exalted Sally Lunns. The cup cake is that. The formula for this is the standard reliance of the professional baker. It may well be the standard cake in any thrifty home with good dietetic standards. It is capable of almost infinite variations.

One cup of fruit and nuts added to a cup cake base and some top garnishing of the loaf with fruit and nuts and we may get two pounds of cake that at current market prices would be worth from $2 to $4—artistic finish counting in the price. We might add a cup of floured raisin only, and get a raisin cake, or currants and get a currant cake, or hickory nuts chopped and get a hickory nut cake, or the more expensive but not so troublesome pecan can be used. In the time of fresh fruit we may add a cup of blueberries and bake the cake in a sheet. Cocoanut is added to this same base.

Double the formula for cup cake, and we get the old fashioned pound cake. Those who want to make a big layer cake, simply add a half more of ingredients to the formula. Those who want a cottage pudding or a one egg cake divide the formula by two, perhaps adding a little extra flour and milk.

Will Keep Two Weeks.

Little cup cakes and big cup cakes, either of which may be "set up" in some dainty way, and in many different ways, as well as cookies, drop and rolled and plain and fancy, are made from the cup cake formula. This batter may be baked in the smaller muffin tins well buttered, and when cool these may have a little round block cut out of the top, some cooked cream or other filling put in the cup so made, and the block put back in. In England these, often with icing, used to be called kopjes. Of course, these cakes can be indefinitely varied with icings. A thin butter icing with a royal over it is delicate, and the royal icing protects the butter icing so that these cakes will keep two weeks.

It is nice to bake the cup cake batter in the little hemispherical iron molds or in the same shapes in cast aluminum. Cakes of similar shape, but with four times as expensive ingredients, are much in vogue. You will find the comparison between the two sorts quite favorable to the cup cake.

But on this subject of the adapting of one cake batter to endless uses could we not write a book? As far as abundance of material is concerned, we certainly could. Perhaps there is no surer way of becoming a cakemaker than that of beginning with this cup cake formula and working out all the variations. Without varying it the cake has been used with names to suit some current fact. These names, such as Dolly Varden, are entertaining.

Cup or Two Egg Cake Formula.

One-half cup of shortening, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one-half cup of milk, two cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, one or two teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon flavoring.

Method for Any Butter Cake.

Cream the butter and sugar until it is as perfectly blended as a hard sauce and looks just like the same, beat the egg yolks, and then beat them into this mixture with the milk. Sift the dry ingredients and fold them gradually into this mixture. Fruits or nuts may be added before or after the flour is in. Finally fold in the egg whites and add the flavoring.

Lazy Wife Cup Cake.

Put flour, sugar, and other dry ingredients, and butter into a mixing bowl. Break the eggs into a measuring cup and fill the cup up with milk. Put all together and beat for from five to ten minutes.

This cake will have funnel-like holes probably, and will not be a success unless the beating is vigorous and expert. It can be of slightly thinner consistency than the regulation cup cake and so be easier to beat. A little more milk, a half cup less flour, and only half the butter will work out all right. In other words, a variation of the cup cake formula called five minute cake is as follows:

One-fourth cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, two-thirds cup of milk, one and a half cups of flour, one or two teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of vanilla or other flavoring. The more expert the cook the less baking powder she will need to use.

Three Egg Cake.

The three egg cake is just an extension of some of the ingredients of the cup cake. A popular formula for a little larger quantity of cake than what the regulation formula yields is: One-half cup butter or other shortening, one cup sugar, three eggs, one cup of milk, two and a half cups (scant) of sifted flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, a pinch of salt, and a teaspoon of flavoring.

Eggless Cake.

There is more nourishment in a cake with eggs than in one without, but a good cook can make a spice cake with sour milk that will be superior in a certain way to one made by the cup cake formula, plus spices, the common spice cake recipe.

Take this formula: One-third to one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one cup of sour milk well whipped, two cups of flour sifted with one scantly level teaspoon of baking powder, and one-half teaspoon each of cinnamon and nutmeg. Add half a cup of chopped raisins to improve cake. It is well to use the smaller amount of butter because there is no egg to hold it up. When a rich buttermilk is used or part sour cream even less than a third of a cup of butter will do.

Note we have the same amounts of flour and sugar as for cup cake. We have to use soda instead of baking powder in the nature of the case. Sour milk is much thinner than sweet milk, so we use more of it, but there is no wetness from eggs, so we have to use yet more.

Sour Cream Cake.

Highly palatable is the cake in which the liquid and shortening are one, that is, a cup of cream. In addition we use the cup of sugar and flour to make a rather stiff batter. It will not be two cups usually. Soda should be sifted with it, and a generous half teaspoon may be sufficient.

Instead of spices flavor it as you would any other cake. It will take two tablespoons of butter to advantage, but these should not be used if the batter is used to make drop cookies.

For cookies drop walnut sized pieces of the thick batter on a buttered baking sheet, sprinkle with sugar put into a 400 degree or hot oven and instantly turn the gas low. Bake about fifteen minutes.

Scolding the Scandals

By Percy Hammond

MR. GEORGE WHITE, the "Scandals" man, seems destined to an instrumental career as an impresario of the frivolous theater. His gilded barks have Youth on the prow and Pleasure at the helm, and they sail in the auspicious waters of a public predisposed to them and their kind. He is a bold adventurer, inured to great expenditures, daring to climb the tall spars of extravagance, so that he may gain a view, if nothing else, of glory and opulence. A flair for sophisticated color and motion is his, added to a sense of the ruining transfusion of others' experience to his own profitable purposes. He is observant if not creative.

So, in two years or thereabouts, Mr. White has come up from the state of a humble hoofer in vaudeville to be a magnate of major entertainments. His "show," among the horde of "revues," is second to Mr. Ziegfeld's national institution, which it closely resembles. It has the celerity, the brilliant dressage, the black-face clown, and the pretty women of the "Follies," and it is less effective than its unparalleled exemplar only in that (at the moment) it lacks something which distinguishes at times the copy from the original.

In view of Mr. White's above intimated qualities and achievements, it will seem presumptuous for this petty inland vizier to instruct him in behavior toward his art. Yet in the current "Scandals" I find some sorrows strewn with my delights, the omission of which, I think, would gratify the few and not offend the many. There is a scene or two in the "Scandals" which, recalling the fetid moral fragrances of the Broadway amœbæ, sicken by the very quickness of their odor, and inspire the finical spectator with a passion for the open air.

I may be suspected of a squeamishness undeserved in this reproof to Mr. White, but still I confess that in my declining months I am not to be wooed by brassy burlesques of the dull immoralities of the New York middle classes. Especially when these weaknesses are so obsolete as those caricatured by the "Scandals" in the act entitled "Palisade Bluff Apartments." It used to be said in barrooms that amours were prevalent between housewives and the iceman, and that laundry boys were apt at liaisons with their lady customers. But that ancient and alcoholic garbage and its unpretty reclamation is not the function of a smart and lively beauty show. Impudent and uncompromising illustration of it is provided, however, in "The Scandals of 1920," and if one you take what is known as a nice girl to see it, you will, if you are regular, desire to be elsewhere. The much criticized antics of the pretty young women who smear their hands and hold them up, covered with the paint from their otherwise naked hips, are idyllic gestures compared with the blowsy grossness of this discomfiting travesty of small adulteries among the Manhattan bourgeoisie.

Concerned as I am with Mr. White's future, which, in a way, I expect to serve, I ask him to study more closely the past and the present habits of Mr. Ziegfeld. The early Follies were not prudent as to libretto, as you may remember. Weary jokes, innuendos, and episodes marred their otherwise suburban sophistication, and they were the doubtful organ of the half-lit expense-account writers who used to be, if they are not now, indigenous to New York. I recall a night at the Colonial years ago when respectable women, frightened by the audacity of the Follies, fled the theater in dismay. But Mr. Ziegfeld's inherited good taste, added to the counsel of one or two wise friends, soon impelled him to reconsider his froward policy. He learned that a undressed girl is better than an undressed joke. He learned that it is possible to be respectable though not decorous and that a white shoulder or a pink shank may be regarded pleasurably by the esthetic presbyterian eye of chastity, whereas the bituminous wheeze about metropolitan naughtiness shocks and discommodes.

The libretto of the Follies now is comparatively clean. One may, with equality, attend the Ziegfeld shows with one's sister's friend. Mr. Ziegfeld can present Lady Godiva in all her traditional nudity, and her bare charms will not be much sullied by the ogling Toms of the front rows. But Mr. White, when he emphasizes the obscene and unromantic rendezvoux of a New York traveling man's wife with the lad who delivers her groceries, exceeds the sweet decorum of revue, and he should be, as he now is, reproached and importuned. "Caveat falls on actors' ears as profitless as water in a sieve."

Large attendance and self-respect are not incompatible in the business of the theater. Mr. Ed Wynn had a great engagement here recently with only suspicious jape. And Mr. White, having now the impetus of a misdemeanor past, can come to us next season prosperously, as a sheep in wolf's clothing. He can profit, if he will, by Mr. Ziegfeld's psychology, paraphrasing Irving, that white breasts are more than smutty jokes and dimpled knees than vulgar acts. There is, by the way, in Mr. White's show some bully dancing by Rockwell and Fox, vaudevillians, who are very funny if you are in the mood. Their service in the revue is evidence of Mr. White's wise showmanship. Also there is fun in the caricature of a Little Theater, involving some reasonably reticent burlesque by the mouse-like Lester Allen and the Frances Arms, of a Russian drama. Mr. Lou Holtz burnt-corks a transition of this act from an upper box; and just to show you how little I know about such things I was the only person present last Monday night who thought it more self-conscious than he was humorous, though indubitably he was not.

Barney Bernard at the end of the current season will pass from the management of the impatient Mr. Woods to that of Charles Dillingham, and it will be seen next year in a comedy produced by Aaron Hoffman, the author of "Welcome Stranger." Mr. Bernard is now touring in "His Honor Abe Potash," which, despite its run of nearly a season in New York, is doing none too well in the provinces. The Messrs. Glass and Goodman, incidentally, have sold another play to Mr. Woods, to be produced next season. Mr. Bernard is coming Dec. 5 to the Shubert-Central, instead of to the Playhouse as advertised.

Fritz Lieber, the strolling Shakespearean, finds an audience at the Shubert-Central theater, and it is said (by those who do not love the Shuberts) that on last Monday night his receipts of $640 were more than those of any other Shubert enterprise within the union loop, including Theda Bara. On account of this prosperity, Mr. Lieber will proceed with his repertoire this week at the Central, and the announced performances of "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," unwilling to wait until he and Shakespeare get through, have been abandoned.

Today's New York Times says that one of the tales which Irene Franklin has brought back from the hinterland concerns the manner in which Miss Barrymore, in the final act of "Declassée," died for Henry Ford during her recent engagement in Detroit. In the midst of the death scene Miss Barrymore espied Mr. Ford in the audience, and observed that her leading man, as the scene had always been played, would be in Mr. Ford's line of vision and cut off his view of her. Accordingly, clutching the actor firmly by the arm just as she sank back upon the cushions, she swept the surprised performer to one side—and died triumphantly with the Flivver King's shoe full upon her." The story is unique, no doubt, but it makes a merry tale for our sophisticated betters to tell of us of the Great Lakes.

Lay critics of "Declassée," of whom there are many, write in to say that they think Miss Barrymore in the last act of the play should take off the pearls given to her by the prudent husband, and leave them with him before she goes forever out of his life and her own. They surmise that so proud and unambiguous a noblewoman would feel that rich gifts are base when givers prove unkind, and that Solomon's spurning of her would cause her to renounce his pearls. That she does not, one is sure, is a subtle illustration of the cryptic psychology of women and gems, the records of which one leaves to the larger knowledge and intuition of Miss Anne Nichols, the author, and Miss Barrymore, the actress.

Mr. Cohan has forgiven the Friars' Club for its impetuous insults to him during the actors' strike and has rejoined that organization, of the this, that, and the other of the theater—much to its financial comfort and gratification.

Mme. Pavlowa's engagement next Saturday, under the Wessels & Vogelei direction, promises to be one of the most successful of the Russian ballet series. The huge Medinah temple is almost "sold out" for the afternoon program, and the demand for places at the evening performance predicts another "capacity" audience. Mme. Pavlowa is accompanied by dancers headed by Alexander Volinine, and by a symphony orchestra.

When Arthur Byron appears in New York City in "Transplanting Jean" he will be without the aid and support of Miss Martha Hedman. Miss Hedman ponders an engagement in the motion pictures.

Mr. George Lederer, whose honest molars have been set for many years in a determination to make his beloved Chicago a producing center, will present at the Illinois, Dec. 5, a musical show entitled "The Girl in the Spotlight." It is by Victor Herbert and some others.

George Arliss' confederates in William Archer's "The Green Goddess" include Miss Olive Wyndham, and Cyril Keightley, late of "Adam and Eva" at the La Salle.

That managers most appreciate encomium from those who are sparing of it, is suggested again by advertisements in the New York press. Mr. George Jean Nathan, headlined as "the man who roasts everything on Broadway," is quoted in large announcements as writing to Mr. Morris Gest, the producer of "Mecca," as follows: "Critical praise in type is at best a cold thing. Won't you accept my personal compliments for having achieved in 'Mecca' at the Century theater what is, perhaps, the most brilliantly colored spectacle that these old eyes have seen in the American theater?"

Florenz Ziegfeld's forthcoming musical production, in which Miss Marilyn Miller and Leon Errol will appear, will be known as "Sally." The original title was "Sally in Our Alley."

Miss Vivienne Segal, late of "The Little Whopper," has been engaged for a musical piece called "Three Kisses," which Wilner and Romberg, whoever they are, will produce. The piece will open out of town on Jan. 24.

Tonight—at the Studebaker, "Cinderella from Broadway," without Miss Marie Dressler; and at the La Salle, Mr. William Hodge in "The Guest of Honor." Tomorrow night, "Irene," the outstanding musical comedy success of many years, at the Garrick.

The dancing engagement of Fokine and Fokina, advertised for tonight at the Auditorium, has been called off.

Who's the Favorite Star in Movieland? We Want to Know

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

You're always ASKING ME something, aren't you? Here's where we turn the tables. How'd you like to have a MOVIE CONTEST?

Who are your favorite moving picture stars—male and female?

COUPON.

Of all the stars I like to see
Upon the screen—give these to me!

WOMAN .....

MAN .....

Your name .....

Your address .....

Write clearly the name of your favorite movie star, male and female, in the above designated space and send to MAE TINEE, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

By Mae Tinée.

THE TRIBUNE'S New York paper, the DAILY NEWS, started this!

It occurred to them not long ago that they'd like to find out who in movieland were the six most popular actresses and who the six favorite actors. SO, they started a contest.

Curiosity killed a cat, they say. Well, it has done anything but that to the inquisitive New York movie department. It seems that the world has been busting to up and voice an opinion—but hadn't because it didn't knew who to up and bust it to. (That is, who to tell that it would matter a hurrah to, you know.)

A long time ago there were contests and everybody voted for Mary Pickford and Francis Bushman, and that was that. But times ha' changed since then—AS the DAILY NEWS contest has proved. Mary Pickford is with the also-rans, while Norma Talmadge, at last reports, heads the race. Francis Bushman? (O, where, O, where has my little dog gone?) And Charlie Chaplin isn't mentioned. Wallace Reid heads the male chorus. Sweet may be the uses of adversity, but perhaps the adversity-ees might be paged on that.

Three things King Solomon found passing strange, you know—" the way of an eagle in the air, the way of a man with a maid, and the way of a ship in the midst of the sea." Let's add a fourth: " the way of a fan with a star "—and finish the quotation: " The wind bloweth where it listeth."

Also—let's see where it listeth. (At this stage of the game. A year from now it will probably be listing in an entirely different direction.)

First—here's the way the New York DAILY NEWS ballot reads at present inventory:

WOMEN.

Norma Talmadge, Mary Pickford.
Mary Miles Minter, Nazimova.
Constance Talmadge, Pearl White.
Alice Brady, Lillian Gish.
Clara Kimball Young, Gloria Swanson.

MEN.

Wallace Reid, Thomas Meighan.
Eugene O'Brien, Charles Ray.
Douglas Fairbanks, Bert Lytell.
William S. Hart, Richard Barthelmess.
William Farnum, Tom Moore.

What do you think about that? Would you pay 50 cents and war tax to see Norma Talmadge and Wallace Reid before you'd dig down for Gloria Swanson and Tom Moore, or the other way about? Or, maybe there's some brand new somebody you'd gladly put on your shoes for of an evening when the gas log's burning brightly and the new Slatterly Morning Ghost holds out welcoming pages?

However, that may be—TELL US! TELL US! Information is our long suit. What we haven't got—we get. And we want to know

WHO IS YOUR FAVORITE STAR
(Male or Female)
(Apologies to Mr. De Mille.)

All contributions thankfully received. Coupon at top of this brilliant dissertation.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

MARGARET M.: Your lovely card reached me. Thank you with all my heart. Your middle name is " Thoughtful."

MRS. J. K.: When anybody sits up until 2 o'clock in the morning to write as you did, I am all but submerged with happiness! It really means a lot to a columner to get words of appreciation like yours. Some day may somebody sit up for you!

E. S.: True, Alma Rubens was " featured " in " Humoresque," but she should not have been. To Vera Gordon belonged the honor. She was the mother. Does that settle your argument?

D. J. and S. D.: I'll have to have a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the list of studios. All manuscripts should be typewritten if possible. If you can't find a machine write with pen and ink on one side of the paper only. Eugene O'Brien is free as the air so far as I know. Less of him and is much to him.

GERTRUDE L.: It's lovely of you to think so, but instead of cutting my face out of the section I'm afraid they'd cut it up. And then 'ow our feelings would be hurt! You were a dear to write that letter! I wish you'd do it again some time.

L. G. F.: Somebody is always disagreeing with you and me, isn't—aren't them? Well, J. Warren Kerrigan is not married to Fritzi Brunette that I ever heard of, and Clarine Seymour—cunning thing—is dead. How do you like being a movie fan? They tell me it's great!

MOUSIE DEAR: 'Tunnin' sing! What do you care whether my time is all my own or not? As long as I talk baby talk with you, aren't you satisfied?

A Mr. Smith called up Dreamland Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 23, and asked if my offer of $100 to anyone putting me on the trail of a better man than anyone in Elgar's Orchestra was still good.

He said he would be at Forsyth's Drug Store, 300 East Thirty-first Street, after 7 p. m., and that he had two men from overseas who could play any of Elgar's men out of their chairs.

I called the drug store and the next day Chas. Elgar went there in person but could not find Smith.

If those men are as good as Smith says they are, I want them. Money don't count. I will raise the bid to $300. The best is none to good for Dreamland. My patrons know what good music really is. Smith, I call for a showdown. BRING IN YOUR MEN!

MUSIC

The First Week of Opera; Its Salient Points and Others

By Ruth Miller.

ANTIC articles might be indited on any of the several contributions of the festal first week of the Chicago Opera company's season, and any one of them might possess news interest.

The jingo might burst into glee over the prevalence of American singers in the casts. Note the preponderance of Anglo-Saxon names on the first popular Saturday night bill, which consisted of those operatic Siamese twins, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." And in spite of the evidence of manifest inexperience on the part of certain of the Saturday vocalists, it was a highly meritorious and well balanced performance of those two works which deal with the same theme: passionate vengeance, unfaith to marital vows, and all such dogma of Italian opera.

Then the absolute musician might come forward with a rapturous treatise concerning sundry individual interpretations; Hector Dufranne in "Le Chemineau," Florence Macbeth as the doll in "The Tales of Hoffman," Raisa as Maliela in the "Jewels," or Johnson as Gall in "Jacquerie."

Also the Pharisaic inveterate of the dramatic drama might sniff to the extent of a thousand words or so over certain of the repertoire as hopelessly obsolete.

And last, the palladium of the drama might clear the universe with laughter at the epigram anent the characteristic action which dwells within the limits of the turgid music drama.

But in general just what did happen during the first eight days of operatic festivities?

Perhaps the first point which should be noted was that the association was both canny and fortunate in securing an unusual array of spectacular singers. Here we shall not indulge in the dangerous business of personalities. We might inadvertently omit a favorite. Therefore, we merely direct attention to a certain page in every opera program which is devoted to the personnel of the company.

It is true that in focusing upon the work a brilliant lyric luminaries the management failed to secure in some cases the indispensable and right sort of glittering star dust with which to surround, support, and enhance their stellar brilliance. But weak spots are inevitable in all enterprises where a human multitude is concerned, and again we shall eschew the vulgarly specific. For what might seem to our enigmatic vision a defect might seem to you only a beauty spot, and vice versa.

As long as we are dodging around the critical quicksands in discussing personalities mention should be made of at least three important bouts among the singing contingent—Joseph Hislop as Cavardoss in "Tosca," Olga Carrara in "Jacquerie" and Riccardo Martin, who, owing to an emergency, made his initial bow to us Saturday night in "Pagliacci" a little ahead of the schedule. And in the enumeration Henri Morin, the new French conductor, must not be slighted. His "Le Chemineau" Tuesday night was well nigh perfectly done.

Turning from the esthetic angle of the imposing artistic troupe for a moment to the crassly commercial, consider the amazing audiences which have filled the Auditorium every night since the opening, with the possible exception of the performance of "Le Chemineau." It seems that more and more people are beginning to realize the blazing glories of the lyric drama that lie within their reach; the supreme workmanship and artistic brilliance that go with all the Chicago Opera's offerings.

As one mumbles over the operas of this first week one is overcome by an embarrassment of various riches. Perhaps the most vivid impressions were made by three—"Jacquerie," which has been duly considered in these columns, "The Jewels of the Madonna," and the exquisite "Le Chemineau."

The "Jewels" was notable because it proved how great a singing actress Raisa can be when she wills. This flamboyant music drama of the modern Italian pattern was an extremely shrewd revival on the part of the opera company. It has a delightful score built upon a striking blend of Neapolitan street melodies, sophisticated theatricalism in the orchestra, thrillingly effective vocal tricks, nervously alive rhythms, smashing color schemes, and distant little catch-phrases of tunes and impertinent bobbing lilts.

The story—but we all remember the story of Maliela, the foundling, and her foster brother, Gennaro, who was very much in love with her. And how the wine of excitement went to her head of a feast day and she looked with favor upon the leader of a community of scamps; how his dare to steal the jewels from a sacred figure for her was carried out by the foster brother. And the spoiled girl overcome by the sacrifice, the gift, and so forth, and hence.

In the first act, as the willful Maliela rejects the advances of a bevy of dancers, growing sullen at their tormenting, Raisa's eyes were insolently scornful velvet, lighted by unexpected flashes of the pure shrew. Then in her subsequent skirmish with the braggart Raffele, which Rimini played with a shrewd shallowness tinged with a hint of cruelty, she was sleek in her animal grace and all vixen when she brushed at his hand. And was there ever such molten gold as her voice in the second act when she mounted the stairs after flinging out an ineffectual defiance at Gennaro and her foster mother? And recall how, as she reached the top step and the climatic point of her aria, every one waited expectantly for her to follow the soprano tradition and muff the high C after her sharp trill and how her accomplishment of that dangerous diminished fifth was flawless.

But lo and behold, we have come to the end of the length and space allotted to our Sunday morning screed, and, abandoning further verbose analysis and rattling away on our typewriter at a furious rate, we must hasten to sum up by saying that that exotic, addled orchid of music, that strange and gorgeous parasite of art, the opera, is with us again, a little more perfect, luxurious, exquisite, and fecund in its rare blooming than it has ever been during the decade of the Chicago Opera association's existence.

The Music Calendar

Today, at 3 p. m., the only performance for the season of "Rigoletto," with Macbeth, Pascova, Hislop, Ruffo, and Lazzari; Marinuzzi conducting.

Miss Estelle Liebling, soprano, will be heard in her first Chicago recital in Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30, under the direction of Wessels & Voegeli. Walter Golde will be at the piano.

Today at 3:30 the Flonzaley quartet will appear in concert at the Blackstone, under the direction of Rachel Busey Kinsolving. The program includes the Mozart G major quartet and the Schumann A major quartet.

Tonight at 8:15 the Sunday Evening club, under the direction of Edgar A. Nelson, at Orchestra hall. Special music by a choir of 100 will be a feature of the program, which will be in the nature of a Thanksgiving service.

Owing to illness, Caroline Willard has been compelled to postpone her piano recital at Kimball hall today until Wednesday, Dec. 8, at 8:15.

Tomorrow "Tosca," with Raisa, Hislop, and Baklanoff; Marinuzzi conducting.

Monday at 4 p. m. the third of the Four Afternoons of Music will be given in the foyer of Orchestra hall. Mrs. Rudolph Owen and Mr. Joseph Brinkman will give the program, which includes Browning's Sonnets from the Portuguese 23-33, with musical setting by Eleanor Everet Freer.

Tuesday, at 8, "Jacquerie," with Gall, Carrara, Johnson, Galeffi, Rimini, Oliviero, Civai, and Dentale; Marinuzzi conducting.

Tuesday at 8:15 Ralph Michaelis will be heard in violin recital at Kimball hall.

Tuesday, at 8:15, Scandinavian symphonic program, Frederick Fredericksen conductor, at Orchestra hall. The program includes the mad scene from "Hamlet" (Mme. Hanna Butler, soloist); the Tor Aulin suite, "Master Olof," and Grieg's A minor piano concerto (Rudolph Reuter, soloist).

Wednesday night, "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Galli-Curci and Schipa; Cimini conducting.

The Ruth St. Denis concert dancers will appear in Orchestra hall on Wednesday evening in a performance for the benefit of the Ridge Farm preventorium.

Thursday at 4 the children's concerts, series B, by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock conductor, in Orchestra hall. The next concert of series A is scheduled for Thursday afternoon, Dec. 16.

Thursday night, "Andrea Chenier," with Raisa, Van Gordon, Johnson, and Ruffo; Marinuzzi conducting.

Friday at 2:15, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor, in its regular concerts in Orchestra hall. The program includes John Alden Carpenter's ballet suite, "The Birthday of the Infanta," the season's second performance of De Sabat's symphonic poem, "Juventus," and the Mozart symphony in G minor.

Friday, at 8:15, gala testimonial concert tendered to Andreas Dippel, courtesy of the Chicago Opera association, at Orchestra hall. Vittorio Arimondi, Georges Baklanoff, Francesco Daddi, Desire Defrere, Hector Dufranne, Dorothy Francis, Carlo Galeffi, Yvonne Gall, Forrest Lamont, Georgette La Motte, Riccardo Martin, Margery Maxwell, Constantin Nicolay, Rosa Raisa, Giacoma Rimini, Titta Ruffo, Vittorio Trevisan, and Cyrena Van Gordon will appear on the program.

Friday at 8:15 Herbert Schmidt will make his first Chicago appearance in piano recital at Kimball hall, under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. His program includes the Haydn sonata in E flat and the Chopin sonata in B minor.

Saturday at 2, "La Somnambula," with Galli Curci, Schipa, Maxwell, and Baklanoff in the cast.

Pavlowa and her Ballet Russe are to return to Chicago after an absence of nearly four years. They will give two performances only, Saturday afternoon and evening, at Medinah temple. Several new ballets and divertissements will be given, and a few old favorites will be repeated.

Saturday at 8, "Il Trovatore," with Carrara, Van Gordon, Lamont, and Rimini in the principal rôles.

Saturday at 8:15, the Chicago Symphony orchestra in its regular concerts in Orchestra hall.

Give "Tristan and Isolde" in English at Metropolitan

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK. — [Special correspondence.]—There was a case of posthumous henpecking. Richard Wagner wrote gorgeous love stories with music. "Tristan and Isolde," the finest and richest of them, precipitated a row with his wife. The biographies are guarded in their references to the row, which started when Cosima Wagner discovered that Mathilde Wesendonck, the wife of a respectable tradesman, was credited in her husband's imagination with the eyes that first sang Isolde's love death to him. Finally Wagner recanted his original dedication of "Tristan and Isolde," which was to some mythical houri, not possibly Cosima. He rededicated dutifully to his wife.

Naturally Frau Cosima acquired a special fondness for "Tristan and Isolde." She saw herself in one and her husband in the other of the name parts, and strenuously forgot that there had been other blondes. But she never quite forgave that she had to forget.

When Wagner died he left a small fortune of debts and his operas as sole asset. With the operas went that curious mass of lore, legend, and precedent called the "Baireuth Tradition." Frau Cosima fastened her aging passions on her inheritancee. Until she died the Baireuth tradition lived. Had Wagner lived it might have died. Polyandrous in all things, he would have left the half nelson embrace of the theater which he established and then married at Baireuth. Max Reinhardt, Urban, the affluent wizardry of our two American opera stages, would have beckoned, and he would have left home and the slippered conventions of clinging Baireuth.

No so Cosima. Tragic terrible figure! For two decades she warmed an unappeased passion at the dying fire of Baireuth memories. And, in all that time, she held a dead child—an impossibly prescribed and circumscribed age—in her arms. Wagner paid for his infidelities. After death his victorious spouse apron-stringed and nose-led his memory.

The Metropolitan Opera house gave a "Tristan and Isolde" last Saturday that liberated Wagner's soul from domestic tyranny. Before Br. Kahn's forces ever started on rehearsal the wraith of Frau Cosima and her 10,000 rules were given the bum's rush out the back door into Seventh avenue, where the draft from the Times building took them up, carried them into the current of the late gulf storm, and finally dropped them into eternal cold storage on the east shore of Baffin's bay.

Nothing unfair shall be said of Frau Cosima here. But that she should have interpreted Wagner's traffic regulations for the pantomime and scenery of "Tristan" so as to give rein to the fleet passions it sings would have been inhuman forbearance. She hated them as brokers' wives hate chorus girls. One pardons Frau Cosima's strangle embrace of Wagnerian opera grudgingly. In her lifetime it was not said that she was nagging the dead. Now that she is in her grave, let it be said, but with flowers.

The Metropolitan's new "Tristan" was sung in English. Various newspaper critics here have responded to that innovation with controversy. It is an argument about syllables. The best performance of the greatest avowal of the love passion ever written was discussed as a problem in vowels. To my mind, any talk of the performance missed the mark. The problem was all the listeners'. They have not heard so tremendous an appeal to the finer things of the flesh since the pilgrim fathers left their bodies in Leyden and brought their shriveled souls and colonial furniture to America for a start of a new western civilization. Residuary legatees of that passionless period sat in the Metropolitan Saturday and were tremendously wind-swept by that foreign thing—love.

in "SCANDALS OF 1920" COLONIAL.

"Tristan" is the epitome of the German idea of love, as any movie plot is the essence of ours. The two ideals do not even clash, they are so disproportionate. The American audience to "Tristan" is not offended by the anarchy of Wagner's passions; they are upset. I think that most of them rush for the cold outdoor air, or a bromo-seltzer, or some such corrective. That is the American way. But it is not the German way, nor the French, Italian, Spanish ways. And they have opera, which we have not, and a very good time while we are each waiting for our millionenium.

Each people has its manner in love. The German seethes and simmers. "Tristan"—the German compendium of passion—bubbles over a slow fire of sighs, tears, and love philters, and boils over in the love-death song at the final curtain. That is wonderful material for music drama.

The Frenchman lives between the frying pan and the fire.

The English phrase is "Fall in love," the idea of a fall and broken hearts and bones being associated in his mind with all his distractions.

The Frenchman jumps. His heart is quick as a flea. In Massenet's "Manon" the chevalier strolls into a café for a drink, the girl arrives in a stagecoach, and the chevalier is ablaze in less time than it would take an American to strike a match.

The Italian is always at the boiling point. Mimi knocks at the door of Rudolph's studio, and the artist has lost his head before she comes in. The knock sounded feminine. That was enough.

The poor Spaniard finds no cess from his roasting longings. Granados' "Goyescas" has an indefinite hero and heroine. They pine and moan. The burden of their passion is carried through the opera in a recurrent objectless melody. In it the general male population of Spain serenades the general female population.

All these peoples have a rich music. There must be song in hot blood. America, with its fireless cooker sentimental habits, creates no melodies. What is there to sing of if not a duet? A funny little opera was written by Reginald De Koven before he died. It had the American plot, in which the "heart interest" is introduced as an afterthought and by way of putting a soprano in the score. We have already forgotten what De Koven sang. It was bowling, the weather, and rum, I believe.

The American plays, where a composer might naturally look for a libretto, are discouraging. They play on the characteristic American assumption that there is much to be done before kissing and not a thing after. The fireless cooker turns them out half cooked one after the other. A man and a maid in every cast and never a kiss till curtain. The formula is of American life. Put two hearts in the cooker, go downtown to work for that million, take the subway home, and find the mess done to a comfortable tenderness—or spoiled for lack of a little seasoning.

"Tristan," relaunched at the Metropolitan after a five year interval of ridiculous Creelism, has much more to do for its American audiences than please them. If it cannot spoil their serenity, music misses another chance. It has none now. It is turning to jazz soup in the fireless cooker.

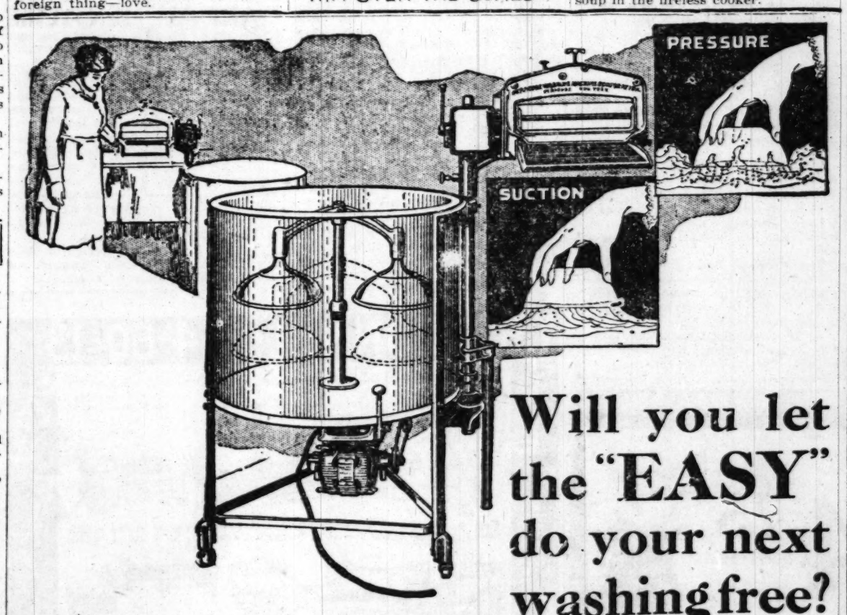
HOW IT LOOKS

"HIS WIFE SURE RAKED HIM OVER THE COALS"



Will you let the "EASY" do your next washing free?

The "EASY" Vacuum Electric Washing Machine simply asks the housewife to let any of the dealers listed below demonstrate it free of charge on her next week's washing in her own home.

You would hardly buy a dress without trying it on? Or a piano without hearing it played? Or an automobile without riding in it? Then why should you buy a washing-machine without washing with it?

The "EASY" has won its present popularity largely because housewives washed with it, thoroughly tried it, and then bought it. The reason thousands of housewives have selected the "EASY," after a free demonstration, is because it washes by means of air pressure and suction. Instead of two hands moving up and down, there are two metal vacuum cups which force the hot, soapy water through the mesh of the garments. There is no friction, rubbing or jerking of the clothes—no dragging—no wear or tear. The "EASY" is durable and sanitary. It is made from metals—solid copper, brass, aluminum and steel. It is fitted with an electric swinging wringer, a sturdy G. E. motor, is compact in construction and occupies less floor space than other washers. It is adjustable to large or small washings, and is fitted, if desired, with a gas heater.

Write or 'phone for a free demonstration in your own home on your next washing—no obligation.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Debutante Crop Once More Center of Things Social

By Mme. X.

THE social season of 1920-'21 is gradually emerging from the chrysalis stage (a bran new figure of speech, thos Mr. B. L. T.). It first began the emerging operations a week ago last Wednesday on the opening night of the opera, which, both from an artistic and social point of view, was a brilliant occasion. A man from New York, by the way, commented the other day on the calm way in which we Chicagoans accepted the fact that we had the best opera in the world today. He said: "You know, it's a great event when your company comes to our burg. Yet here nobody mentions it."

As is customary at this time in the year, much attention is given by hostesses to the annual crop of debutantes. Once fairly launched they will take care of themselves, and their elders, who constitute real society, can attend to the structure of social life with its dinners and other oportunities for getting together.

Presenting the Sub-Deb.

Before abandoning the "bud," however, to her own devices it is interesting to observe a new departure in social procedure. Heretofore it has been customary to segregate the subdeb from the real article. As long as she was pursing her education she was kept in the ranks of the quite young.

This Thanksgiving holiday season, brief though it was, saw three college girls, the Misses Betty Scott, Clarissa Donnelley, and Phœbe Norcross, regularly presented to society. It's somewhat after the fashion of trial marriages. They are allowed to go through the conventional ceremonial, stand in a flower decked room, and shake hands with a long stream of family friends who comment on their family resemblance or lack of it. Some cheerful gayety and relaxation is permitted them in this ordeal by means of subsequent dinner dances and theater parties, but the debut itself is an accomplished fact, though tomorrow sees them all returning to the routine of their respective educational mills.

On Friday Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Scott gave an afternoon tea to present to society their daughter, Miss Betty Scott. Their attractive house in Hubbard Woods was thrown open to their many friends. Thanksgiving afternoon Mrs. R. R. Donnelley and Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Donnelley had an "at home" at the Donnelley residence, 4609 Woodlawn avenue, to introduce Miss Clarissa Donnelley, the daughter of the last two mentioned and granddaughter of Mrs. R. R. Donnelley, while yesterday afternoon Miss Phœbe Norcross was presented to the social world by her aunt, Miss Ethel Wrenn, and her father, Frederic Norcross, at the family home, 1500 Astor street. Such a social initiation comes only once in the lifetime of a girl. It's like being admitted to the order of Freemasons.

Incredible as it may seem to her, the debutante is at best but an incident in the real business of society. In older, riper, more sophisticated countries she is hardly this. Our youth and inexperience is evidenced by our attitude towards the relative value of the young and the old in the scheme of things social.

All Society at Pageant.

The big melting pot which will bring the various elements in the social world together will be the much heralded "Pageant of the East," which will spill its treasure of color and form and picturesque romance into the furthest corners of the gray, old Coliseum on Friday, Dec. 10. Great are the preparations being made to carry out Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's promise that this ball will eclipse all of its predecessors by a wide margin.

What heroic women they are who run these socio-philanthropic enterprises! They are ready to risk life and limb if necessary to keep a word given to the public. Mrs. Fairbank, for instance, had promised that there should be an elephant in the grand march, which is to be the supreme achievement of the evening.

The only available elephants were a couple in a show in town at present. In order to be sure that they were the kind of animals who would appreciate a show like hers she visited them and undertook to mount one. He was a tried and gentle creature, said his keepers, but he shied at the honor of being photographed with the president of the woman's board of the Lying-In hospital on his back. Probably he felt it too great a responsibility. He didn't know how intrepid the organizer of such an undertaking could be. After several attempts—for it is no easy job to reach the heights of the average elephant's back if you are not trained to rise in the orthodox way by means of the animal's trunk—Mrs. Fairbank finally ascended via a table and chair and was photogrphed, between shies, on her exalted and oriental throne.

Just whether that nervous quadruped will be in the ring on the eventful Friday evening is rather in doubt. But that it will be a grand orgy of color and sound you may be quite certain.

Never an Empty Bed.

The achievements of the hospital make all other similar institutions envious. The dispensary successfully ushered over 3,000 children into this world of sin and sorrow last year, while in the hospital itself between 2,000 and 3,000 were born. Since the hospital opened twenty-eight years ago 39,500 cases of childbirth have been handled by it, with only fourteen deaths where the case was entirely in the hands of the hospital's physician and nurses.

The cost for each dispensary case is $9.50. This includes all needed supplies and social service work, besides care for two weeks or more. The dispensary handles 2,500 cases a year, of which 500 are in the stockyards district.

The hospital itself has 127 beds—some free, some part pay, and some full pay. All the dispensary work is free. There is never an empty bed in the hospital.

As a source of inspiration and instruction to students and practitioners all over the world it is invaluable. At the moment doctors from Porto Rico Japan, England, France, and Germany are doing postgraduate work there. The institution claims to be better known in Europe than in Chicago. It is also an extraordinary achievement in finance, as it has only an income of $10,000 a year from edowment, while it costs over $250,000 a year to run it. So it behooves the entire community to rally to the support of this important institution by a generous and hearty support of the ball.

MRS. KELLOGG FAIRBANK AND ELEPHANT from TOYLAND CIRCUS"

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, chairman of the executive committee of the "Pageant of the East," to be staged at the Coliseum on Dec. 10 for the benefit of the Chicago Lying-in hospital, is about the busiest person in the city these days, for in addition to her duties as chairman she personally is testing the safety of all the animals which will take part in the great spectacle. She is shown in this picture riding Tilly, the prize elephant from the Toyland circus.

Herbert Hoover Speaks at Blackstone.

The man who, as some one said, was next to Santa Claus, the best beloved man the world over today, Herbert Hoover, was here last week. A most impressive figure he is. By impressive I do not mean that he is imposing, or awe-inspiring. He is so quiet, so entirely safe-contained that in a crowd he in some inexplicable way suggests silence and solitude. He has no so-called social currency.

Yet there is no awkwardness in his lack of volubility. He radiates purpose and strength. It is easy to understand when you meet him why he inspires the entire devotion of those who work under his direction and who one and all consider it a privilege to be part of his wonderful organization.

In appearance he is better looking than his likenesses in the daily press, because his fresh, wholesome color is not reproduced in the printed pictures. As he stood last Tuesday evening unsmiling in a crowded before dinner gathering at the Blackstone hotel he was the embodiment of the absolutely correct in build and attire, with the added characteristic of being entirely indifferent to any personal impression he might be making.

At the close of the dinner at which he was the guest of honor, he made a brief address on the subject which occupies his whole mind and heart, the problem of feeding the 3,500,000 starving children of central and eastern Europe. He has the reputation of not being an especially good speaker. Certainly he is no orator in the commonly accepted meaning of the term, but that quiet, even voice, those simple, straightforward words, with not an adjective among them—well, no Patrick Henry, no Wendell Phillips could have carried such conviction to their hearers.

Appeal for European Children.

With no gesture or word he yet gave his audience a sense of an emotion too deep for expression, even for tears. When you've seen those little ones starving, seen their haggard, wistful faces, their bloated little stomachs, their wasted limbs, diffidence and self-consciousness must of necessity pass from you. In his aspect there was the same air of detachment from our pleasant, prosperous American life which I detected last week in Gen. Nivelle of Verdun, and last year in Cardinal Mercier of Belgium.

The company was a large and representative one at this so-called Hoover dinner. It was, of course, composed for the most part of the same people who contribute to and support all our philanthropies, local and foreign. It included such men as Cyrus H. McCormick, Julius Rosenwald, Jacob Loeb, James H. Forgan, Charles G. Dawes, Charles Folds, Arthur Aldis, Edward F. Swift, James A. Patten, Silas Strawn, George Higginson Jr., Alfred Baker, Harry A. Wheeler (who acted as chairman), John V. Farwell, and a host of others as important and generous, though, as they were beyond the eye vision of the narrator, they are not chronicled here.

In the face of the present financial situation, the raising on the spot of nearly $200,000, headed by Julius Rosenwald's $50,000 gift, was a good augury for the proposed national drive the last week in December, when the desire is to raise $23,000,000. This sum, says Mr. Hoover, will nourish those perishing children, at the rate of a dollar a month per child, until next summer's harvest comes to their aid.

Gifts Seem Princely.

Although "money talks," the contributors to the Hoover fund did not leave all the conversation to their dollars. Each donor described his or her enthusiasm for the cause and the reasons why his or her gift was not larger. As each gift seemed princely to the penniless observer, these apologies seemed—well, a sort of zero in humility.

No account of the gathering would be complete without mention of the notable and generous women who were there. Mrs. Joseph Bowen, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Emmons Blaine all contributed their money and their eloquence. Mrs. Ryerson, who spent some time in Poland last summer, described some of the things she had seen, such as the long lines of children waiting eagerly before the stations, whence the American commission issued the daily rations that kept those frail little bodies and those valiant little souls together. So seldom does that remarkable woman, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, appear at such a function that it was a real event when she arose and spoke briefly on the subject of giving to the fund. On the other hand, Mrs. Bowen, though she speaks often, also never fails to carry conviction to her hearers.

Mrs. Hoover is, her husband says, a better speaker than he is. She spoke very well that evening, with more the manner of one used to public speaking than he has. Hers was the frankly emotional appeal, and on what subject would it be more permissible?

The Progress of Suffrage.

She made the principal address at the deathbed meeting of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association Tuesday afternoon, for that amiable and generous organization, its mission accomplished, died a cheerful, orderly death on that date. Its final act was to bequeath to the League of Women Voters and to the Women's City club's school of civics liberal sums.

How well the writer remembers the birth of this society! On a chill, gray afternoon in Mrs. Tiffany Blake's pleasant drawing room, about eight years ago, a group of some twenty well known women met to hear Mrs. Stanley McCormick, one of the most celebrated suffragists of that time, speak about the need for the ballot for women. To the right of the fireplace, with their backs to the south looking windows, sat the representatives of the old order. No, I won't give their names; they are first at the polls today and most zealous in their support of their rights as voters. On the other side of the room the believers in a new and better order to be achieved by universal suffrage gathered together, quite conscious of the hostile element.

Mrs. McCormick said at a later date that she never in her wide experience encountered so hostile an audience or one so hard to reach. They were all old friends of her mother's, Mrs. Wirt Dexter, who when she lived in Chicago twenty years ago was one of the most striking and influential personalities in our social life. To them that day's speaker was still the little girl they had known here in short skirts and pigtails, while the subject of her talk was all that was objectionable and revolutionary.

The pace of the times is swift. In eight years what wonders have been accomplished! Though, it must be confessed, without an immediate millennium being reached.

Drake Hotel Nears Completion.

A new era dawns on the exclusive, aristocratic, rather provincial north side, or at least that part of it that borders on the lake. For months its residents have been watching the construciton of the great, gray Drake hotel on the corner of Oak street and the Lake Shore drive. Now it is practically completed, barring some minor details.

Spreading palms give a tropical air to its spacious stone lobbies. Its ball room, a quarter larger than that at the Blackstone, awaits the nimble foot of the dancers. The ovens and cauldrons of its great kitchens are ready to cook food for 3,000 diners at a time, which is the seating capacity of its dining rooms. Soon its 840 bedrooms will be fully equipped to shelter the folk traveling from all over the world who sooner or later come to Chicago.

If only John Kinzie, or Gurdon Hubbard, or William B. Ogden could revisit Chicago today, could see that part of the north side where they used to live! The lake, which changes not, is all that they would recognize of the district which they opened to house builders and home makers.

'Lace a Cantilever Shoe and—it conforms to your foot. Pulling the laces makes the shoe hug the instep with a firm, restful support. As you tighten the strings, the under-arch sole is drawn up until it meets the foot and fits the curve of the arch. The Cantilever Shoe, therefore, supports the foot at EVERY point and relieves the muscles of all strain.

The Cantilever Shoe FLEXES with the foot and permits the muscles to exercise with every step. A stiff-soled shoe, or a metal appliance, binds the muscles, restricts their movement, and weakens their vitality by stopping circulation. But Cantilever Shoes prevent and correct fallen arches because they exercise and strengthen the muscles surrounding the bones of the arch.

Cantilever Shoes are a boon to people who grow weary from walking or being on their feet for long hours. For Cantilevers have a natural inner sole line that encourages correct poise, a proper balance of weight, an easy, tireless carriage.

Try Cantilevers this week. Good looking, fine leathers, trim lines. Widths from AAAAA to EE

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Night's Receipts at Cohan's Go to 'Willing Workers'

THE Willing Workers' Woman's club will take over Cohan's Grand opera house tomorrow evening, the proceeds to go toward expanding the club's work among the destitute tubercular families of Chicago.

For the last seventeen years the members of the organization have worked tirelessly and without remuneration in a fight against the white plague and relieving the distress which follows in its wake.

Where the breadwinner of the family is stricken, his wife and children are looked after, and the patient is supplied with fresh eggs, milk, and other nourishing food such as is conductive to his recovery. Clothing, fuel, and shelter also are furnished, and an effort is made constantly to bring sun, shine and clean living into the home where misery, want, and their attendant horrors rule.

The club's latest innovation for coping with tuberculosis is to build outdoor sleeping rooms for the patients. Many of these inclosed porches already have been installed.

Recently the club has directed its efforts toward enactment of legislation forbidding tubercular persons to marry.

Officers of the club are: President, Mrs. I. Shoen; vice presidents, Mrs. Theodore Weiss and Mrs. A. J. Bunkman; financial secretary, Mrs. Jacob Fass; recording secretary, Mrs. L. W. Ofner; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. C. Moses; treasurer, Mrs. Edward Levy.

The Daughters of the British Empire in Illinois are making final preparations for their annual bazaar, to be held on Dec. 9, 10, and 11 at the Auditorium hotel. There will be twenty-five booths for display of the articles which have been given to the various chapters, also booths conducted by the Sons and Daughters of St. George, the Canadian club, and the British-American club. All proceeds will be devoted to the building fund of the British Old Peoples' home. Mrs. Edgar E. Arison, Mrs. C. E. Tilden, Mrs. Matthew Hodges, and Mrs. George Cooke-Adams are in charge of the bazaar.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Instead of the regular Wednesday afternoon meeting the Chicago Woman's club will meet Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in Recital hall to hear a musical program given under the auspices of the music study class. "Sources of American Music" will be the subject of the meeting, and the program will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Marx Orbendorfer. Tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock a luncheon will be given in the clubrooms in honor of United States Commissioner of Education Dr. P. P. Claxton and visiting superintendents of schools attending the regional division conference on education. Friday at 10:30 o'clock the forestry study class will meet to hear a discussion on "Citizenship and National Forestry." Saturday at 1 o'clock the American open committee will hold its regular monthly open meeting in the clubrooms. The subject for the day is "The Voice in Public Speaking." Among the speakers will be Miss Mary Agnes Doyle and Oliver Hinsdell.

New York Critics Loud in Praise of Young Ben-Ami

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Jacob Ben-Ami, a young Jewish actor who hails from Odessa but who achieved something of a local reputation last season for his work as a member of the Jewish Art theater, is the most talked of actor in New York just now. He played his first part in English last week in a play called "Samson and Delilah" at the Greenwich Village theater, and was immediately proclaimed "great."

Much of the praise accorded him may be traced to the eagerness of those emotional reviewers who are inclined to overpraise the newcomer in their effort to do him justice, but that much of his success was honestly won, and that he may legitimately be numbered with the most promising of the younger men of the stage, there is no gainsaying.

The part he played is one with which he is thoroughly familiar, having been in his repertoire for some time. It is that of a poet-dramatist who has written a play called "Samson and Delilah," in which his wife is to have the leading role. In the poet's play, which has an allegorical background, Samson, representing poetry and art, is betrayed by Delilah, the theater, to the Philistines, who are the public. Paralleling this plot is that of the play proper in which the young Samson is the trusting husband, Delilah his philandering wife, and the king of the Philistines a beefy furniture dealer to whom she gives her love.

The big scene of the play is that of the second act in which the poet's play is being rehearsed under his personal direction. Disgusted with the performance of the actor assigned to the role of Samson, the poet undertakes to read the impassioned lines himself. Impressed by the ardor with which his Delilah responds to his Samson, his awakening jealousy of her is momentarily quieted, until he realizes that she has been deliberately playing over his head to her lover, who is one of the onlookers. Then his passion breaks, and in a scene of gripping dramatic intensity he attacks the smirking Philistine.

It is one of those carefully builded scenes playing which no competent actor could utterly fail, but it is only fair to Ben-Ami to say that no American actor, with the possible exception of John Barrymore, could play it as well as he. He has another inspired moment in the concluding act when, half crazed by his grief, he wanders back to his home intent upon killing the guilty lovers. Pathetically arrayed as the avenging Samson in a fantastic costume he has fashioned from torn newspapers, he waveringly points a revolver at their heads and then, as his courage fails, permits them to escape and sends the bullet into his own heart. It is a fine theatrical realism he achieves in this scene, and his audience became a cheering crowd of admirers at its conclusion.

Ben-Ami is a young man of medium stature, possessed of a melodious voice and the temperament of the born actor. He has a fine sense of character and a due regard for the conventions of the theater which he skillfully dominates in place of being ruled by them. His English speech is only slightly accented, and he commands a spiritual quality that will carry him far in the romantic and tragic roles which are his forte. If he also possesses the variety and range which his friends claim for him, his position in the American theater is assured.

He is capably assisted by Pauline Lord as the wife and Robert T. Haines as the furniture dealer, and Arthur Hopkins has provided him with an adequate and attractive setting for his debut.

MISS OTTALA NESMITH with WILLIAM HODGE in "THE GUEST OF HONOR." LA SALLE

Mary Nash, returning from her season in London with "The Man Who Came Back," is playing another passion-torn lady in "Thy Name Is Woman" at the Forty-eighth Street theater. It is not much of a play, and is carried entirely by three characters, but it affords Miss Nash an opportunity to revel in that tempestuous acting in which she delights.

The wife in this instance is a young woman married to an anemic and rather sickly tanner, who devotes most of his time to smuggling laces and linens across the Spanish border. So skillfully does the wily tanner cheat the authorities, the commandant of a neighboring military post hits upon the scheme of sending a husky young soldier to his cottage to make love to the wife and set a trap for the husband.

The soldier, having twice the chest expansion of the husband, has no difficulty in charming the wife, but while he is about it the smuggler craftily continues his smuggling, and encourages the lovemaking. Everybody is satisfied until the husband, content with the fortune he has accumulated, seeks to reclaim his wife, and finds that he is too late—she has decided to leave him and go to her soldier for good and all. Husband seeks to stop the lovers, but seeing that he has been defeated prefers to kill the wife rather than lose her to his rival.

Both Miss Nash and José Ruben, who plays the husband, achieve creditable characterizations. Curtis Cooksey, playing the soldier, is not so happily cast.

Probably the theatrical historians will pay scant attention to Frances White when they come to write of the stage of our time. But they might reasonably use her as an illustration of what can be accomplished in five years on the stage. That long ago Miss Frances was an unknown entertainer in California cabarets. She was an attractive mite, who could dance gracefully, sing in a hoarse little voice the music hall ditties of the day, and make herself generally attractive in a cabaret.

There a vaudeville dancer, William Rock, discovered her, and convinced her that she could win success in vaudeville. A few months later, having taught her what he knew, he brought her east, and she appeared one Monday afternoon on the stage of the Palace theater.

The next day she was the most generously praised performer in the reviews of that particular bill, and a few weeks after that she was practically the star of the "Midnight Frolic," which Florence Ziegfeld had established to entertain the midnight sons and their friends. The season following she played in vaudeville when she liked and returned to the "Frolic" whenever she was tired of vaudeville. After that she was frequently a feature of the revues, and last week she achieved stardom in a musical comedy called "Jimmie."

Miss Frances has never taken her career very seriously, but evidently she has devoted some time to her singing lessons, for she is singing better now than she did formerly. She is what the regulars describe as a "cute little trick," and "Jimmie," written to keep her in the cabaret atmosphere, is pretty good entertainment. In it she appears as one of those long lost daughters who is badgered by the haughty prima donna in the first act and discovered to be the child of the wealthy Hebrew comedian in the last act.

She long since decided that she could do quite well without the protection of Rock, and is now independently established as the musical comedy Lotta of her time.

Vaudeville Wit

MAJESTIC.

Hampton and Blake:

"I'm crazy to go on the stage."

"You have to be."

"I know a joke about a dog."

"That's a pretty little tale."

"Do you know the joke about the dog who swallowed the tape measure?"

"Not that old one—that he went in the front and died by inches?"

"No, not this one. He went in the back and died by the yard."

Raymond Wilbert: I saw a man go crazy the other night in my hotel. Yes, he smelled liquor and couldn't locate it. In St. Louis they serve a whiskbroom with moonshine. The whiskbroom is to brush your coat off when you get up.

You wonder what I am doing with all these hoops. Hoops are usually used to hold barrels together. Three hoops hold one barrel together. I have three friends in the audience; they also hold a barrel together.

Just before we moved, the furniture installment man came. I didn't know who he was and said, "Take a chair." He did; he even took the stove. All he left me was the flu.

You know, in the olden times ladies wore hoops under their skirts. From what I see on the street nowadays, a lot of them could use their wedding rings.

Do you know, every time I get on a ferryboat it makes me cross.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Sunday Evening Club Announces Dr. David Jones

By the Rev. Gardner Mac Whorter

THE Sunday Evening club will hold a special Thanksgiving service this evening in Orchestra hall at which the Rev. David Hugh Jones, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston, will be the speaker. John T. Pirie, a trustee of the club, will read the Scripture lesson, and Mrs. Rose Lutiger-Gannon of the Chicago Opera company will sing "The Song of Thanksgiving" by Allitsen. "The Old Homestead," an interesting story address told to the accompaniment of some of the best known old fashioned songs, has been requested of Dr. Jones in place of a sermon.

THE REV. DAVID HUGH JONES

Dr. Jones is a native of the Isle of Anglesey, North Wales, but came to the United States in his youth, and worked for several years in Colorado, going later to Ohio for his training in Marietta college and Lane seminary. After teaching in Marietta he went abroad for graduate study in the universities of Berlin and Edinburgh, returning to pastorates in Ohio before his call to the First Presbyterian church in Evanston, where he has served for the last five years.

This will be Dr. Jones' seventh appearance at Orchestra hall, where he is a great favorite with the Sunday Evening club audiences. The doors will be open at 6:30 this evening. Mr. Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club since its founding fifteen years ago, delivers an informal Bible talk on "Stories of the Early Church" at 7, and Stanley Martin plays an organ program for twenty minutes before the service begins at 8 o'clock.

The Sunday Evening club is an organization maintained by the business men of Chicago to provide a non-sectarian religious meeting in the center of the city for strangers, hotel guests, residents of the loop district, and those without church affiliations. Every Sunday evening from October until June an interesting program is given, with an address by some prominent layman or distinguished clergyman, and splendid music by a quartet of artist soloists and a chorus choir of 100 trained voices.

Orchestra hall seats 3,000 people, and there is no charge for admission, the club being supported by the free will offerings of the audience and annual subscriptions of leading business men in Chicago. Social meetings are held under the auspices of the Sunday Evening club every Wednesday evening during the season.

Under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation, the union ministers' meeting will be held tomorrow at 10:30 in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, 19 South La Salle street, when "The Crime Situation in Chicago" will be discussed by Edwin W. Sims, president, and Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission. The real subject to be considered is "The Responsibility of the Ministers and the Church Members in This Emergency," and all who are interested are invited to attend this meeting.

Prof. Herman S. Hering, C. S. B., of Concord, N. H., member of the mother church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, will deliver a lecture on Christian Science in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, 4017 Drexel boulevard, Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock.

The psychology of life, health, success, and happiness will be the subject of five free public lectures by Harry Gaze, author and lecturer, at Aryan grotto, South Wabash avenue and Eighth street, for five evenings beginning tonight at 8:15 o'clock. Gilbert Wilson, who led the singing during the war of soldiers, sailors, and marines at Quantico, Va., will sing and lead the audience in song before Mr. Gaze's lecture each evening. Prominent Chicago citizens have taken a deep interest in the lectures by Harry Gaze and have assisted in the organization of the Universal Psychology association.

Thomas Mott Osborn, warden of "Sing Sing prison," New York, and the author of "Within Prison Walls," will deliver an address this evening in Kimball hall, Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard, at 7:45 o'clock, under the auspices of the Unitarian Laymen's league, following a musical program given by Gavin Williamson, organist; Sybil Sammis MacDermid, and Herbert S. Miller.

During the absence in Europe until January, of the Rev. Leicester C. Lewis, D. D., professor of ecclesiastical history in the Western Theological seminary, West Washington boulevard, the Rev. Arthur Rogers, D. D., rector of St. Mark's church, Evanston, is giving the lectures in church history at the seminary. Dr. Rogers had previously lectured in that department for five years while serving as rector of the Episcopal church in West Chester, Pa.

Today will be a day of reunion for the First Presbyterian church to bring together the three congregations, the old First, formerly located at Twenty-first street and Indiana avenue, the Sixth, and the Forty-first street churches. The pastor, the Rev. William Chalmers Covert, will preach this morning on "Power Through Unity," and this evening he will give an illustrated lecture on the history of these three churches which have united, showing their work and influence in the life of the city.

The Episcopal Athletic league of Cook county will hold its annual meeting Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Sumner hall at the cathedral, 117 North Peoria street. F. M. Atkinson Jr. of the Church of Our Saviour is the president of the league, and has been active in its maintenance for the last five years.

A quiet day for the social service workers of the diocese will be conducted today at the Cathedral SS. Peter and Paul, West Washington boulevard, by the suffragan bishop, the Rt. Rev. S. M. Griswold, D. D.

THE POTTERS

"The janitor said the coal gave out today."

SCENE: A modest dining room (most of them are). It is the evening meal and the Potter family is holding a postmortem over the corned beef and cabbage.

PA POTTER, BILL POTTER,
MA POTTER, MAMIE POTTER,
And the BABY POTTER.

BILL: Corned beef and cabbage—"Your Nose Knows"—I smelled it from afar.
Slip me another hunk of bread.

MAMIE: How impolite you are!
Don't ever say hunk, and don't refer to the fragrance of the food.

MA: Now, children, be quiet and eat your meal.

MAMIE: But, Ma, he's coarse and rude.

BILL: When I need advice, I'll ask for some, and I hope you live so long—
Most girls are dumbbells, anyway, and a sister's always wrong.

MAMIE: Your own, you mean, but another guy's looks pretty good to you.

BILL: "Guy's" is good.

MAMIE: Now, Bill, shut up.

PA: Cut out that gab, you two.

MA: Your Pa's too tired to hear you fuss, he wants it quiet at night.
He has troubles enough all day downtown, without having to hear you fight.
Oh, Pa, that reminds me—"the janitor said the coal gave out today.
And he doesn't know where he can get any more."

BILL: There's a cold wave on the way.

"The landlord said we must not leave the buggy in the hall."

A Quiet Meal at Home

"Now! Now! Don't worry your father, dear!"

MA: And they've put the gas rates up again.

MAMIE: The installment man was here
And he said we owed him three months now and we'd better pay up—

MA: Oh, dear!
And the landlord said we must not leave the buggy in the hall.
Where will we put it any way?

BILL: Why, hang it on the wall.

MAMIE: Tell Dad about the books we bought.

MA: Oh, yes, the swellest set—
"The Great Orations of the World," and we needn't pay him yet —
Just a dollar down and two a month.

BILL: For a hundred years or so.

PA: But, Ma—

MA: Oh, yes, they are coming soon. You'll love them all, I know.

BILL: Shoot me another hunk of bread.

by J. P. McEvoy

MAMIE: Now, Bill, you're too darn rough.
Why don't you try to talk refined— Where do you get that stuff?

MA: The laundry brought your shirts today and every but ton's gone!
I simply don't know what to do.

PA: You might try sewing them on.

MAMIE: Dad, the baby swallowed a dime today and we sent for Dr. Black.

PA: Did you get the dime?

BILL: Yes, it cost five bucks to get the ten cents back.

MAMIE: I suppose you'd let the baby die.

BILL: I suppose you helped a lot.

"The baby broke your pipe today, that old black meerschaum one."

MA: Now, children, we mustn't worry
Pa— By the way, Pa, I forgot—
The baby broke your pipe today, that old black meerschaum one.

"It cost five bucks to get the ten cents back."

PA: Blankety blank.

MA: Why, you wouldn't deprive your child of a little fun?
And he had no toys, so I gave him that. . . . Oh, he's learning to talk and sing.

MA: Say water for papa.

BABY: Ca-ca Ca-ca.

MAMIE: Now ain't it the dearest thing!

BILL: "Ain't it" is good.

MAMIE: Shut up—

MA: Now! Now! Don't worry your father, dear!
He hears enough troubles all day downtown, we mustn't disturb him here.

Grain Exhibit Now Permanent Part of Live Stock Show

By Frank Ridgway

G. I. CHRISTIE

FOR many years agriculturists have felt the urgent need of an international show where both live stock and farm crops might be brought together for the supreme test, offering the farmer an opportunity to study animals and grain and hay exhibits, thereby learning more about his problems in breeding and the economic utilization of his feeds. This was made possible last year when the first International Grain and Hay show was held in connection with the International Live Stock exposition in Chicago.

The hay and grain show is being held again this year as a part of the big live stock show, which opened here yesterday. It is considered most appropriate to stage the two shows together, since live stock production is based and so vitally dependent upon the growing of more and better grain, hay, and forage crops.

The International Grain and Hay show has grown out of the National Grain show, which was held at different places over the country but which was never satisfactory because it was difficult to get farmers interested in exhibits of crops without the live stock. Besides, holding the grain show alone was an expensive undertaking.

Board of Trade Awards.

Through the coöperation of the Chicago Board of Trade, United States department of agriculture, state agricultural colleges and experiment stations, farm bureaus, corn growers' associations, crop improvement associations, Canadian Seed Growers' association, provincial department of agriculture, and the international officials, the grain and hay show has become a permanent part of the live stock show. It is considered by many as being practically as important as the live stock exhibits themselves. The Chicago Board of Trade gave $10,000 in prizes last year and is doing the same thing this year.

This show is the largest of its kind ever held in this or other countries. More than 3,000 exhibits of corn, small grains, and hay are in this year's show. Last year the exhibits were crowded into a small space at the International amphitheater, but this time 75,425 square feet of space is used for the grain and hay show.

Exhibits are here from all sections of the United States and Canada showing the different crops and varieties of grain and hay that are grown in the various regions.

Prof. G. I. Christie, director of the agricultural experiment station at Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., who made the show a feature of the International last year, again has the management, with Prof. W. Q. Fitch of Purdue as assistant superintendent.

Huge Government Exhibit.

The grain and hay show is far reaching in its influence, and is conducted solely in the interests of agriculture. To emphasize this and to save space land exhibits have not been allotted space this year. The exhibit space is confined to the department of agriculture and state agricultural colleges of the United States and Canada.

F. L. Goll of the bureau of plant industry is in charge of the government exhibit, in which are featured forage crops grown in the various regions of this country that are primarily useful in the production of live stock. Various kinds of hay not common in the middle west are shown, and improved varieties of both grain and hay crops are on display.

Government experts are emphasizing some of the important and dangerous cereal diseases that farmers have to contend with, showing their harmful effect and simple control measures that may be used. More than 3,500 square feet of floor space is being used by the government exhibit alone, with a score of experts to give out advice to visitors.

Working Out Seed Laws.

Holding the grain and hay show as a part of the International has given crop experts a chance to carry on work that has always been handicapped. During International week last year the International Crop Improvement association was formed. Through this organization an attempt is being made to establish uniform methods of standardizing varieties of all farm crops, and a study is being made of the best way to get improved varieties of seeds disseminated in this and foreign countries. This body is also helping toward working out effective seed laws.

Through the grain and hay exhibitors and the work of the representatives of the International Crop Improvement association, in conjunction with the show, rapid improvement will no doubt be seen during the next few years in the farm crops all over this country and Canada. The good influence of the lessons that are taught at this show will gradually spread from year to year, and the growers will realize more fully the value of planting good seed of improved varieties.

SPREAD above you in the heavens tonight are stars in all stages of life. To us, who go through our lives from birth to death in a brief second of time, as measured by the lives of stars, their points seem fixed. Even the traditions of ancient races give but little hint that the stars change their places and their colors. Yet they do, as astronomers have shown.

If you walk through a forest you do not see the trees actually growing and expanding. You see young seedlings here, slender saplings there, trees in their prime, old gnarled trunks smitten by decay, dead trees still standing, and logs moldering on the ground. A tree's life is longer than a man's, but as you walk you do not doubt that there before your eyes the limbs and branches, twigs and leaves are living and following their appointed way.

The same thing is true among the stars. Their lives are longer by far than whole races of forests, and yet they as truly grow as do the forests or the people who walk in them.

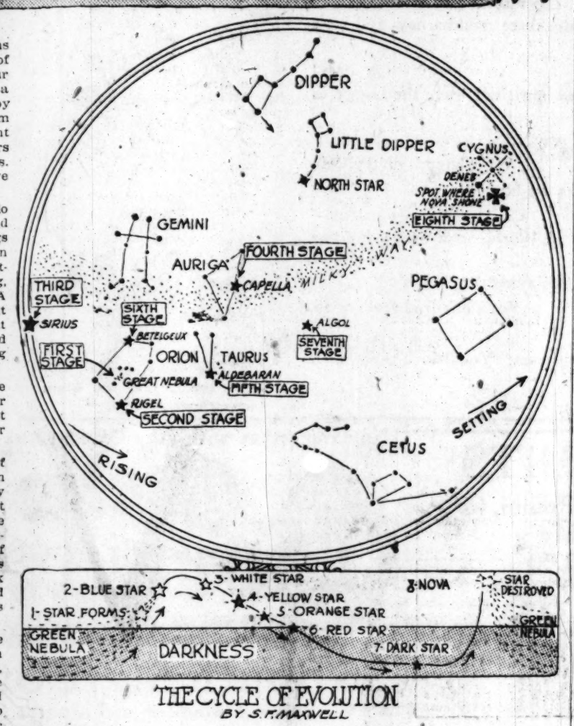
Young stars take their shape out of the clouds of nebula which are strewn so freely about in space. At first they are vast tenuous balls of gas, a sort of glowing mist of fire. As they lose the energy the nebula contained, principally by radiation in the form of heat, their substance shrinks, crowds itself, gives up more heat, to shrink some more, until the star has passed through all the stages of its life, and is a dull black solid globe.

The youngest stars are blue, those next are white, a little later they turn to yellow, and from thence to orange, and finally to red. After the red stage comes extinction as a living sun, and a period ensues, for aeons long, no doubt, when the star must wander through space as a black dead sun. At length there comes a time when the dark globe encounters a nebula field, similar to the one that gave it birth. There comes a flash of fire, and the old sun is reconverted into gas again, to make another cycle from life to death.

You can see all these stages in the sky tonight. In the nebula of Orion are stars just forming from the parent gas. Rigel, in Orion, is a full grown blue white star. Sirius represents the next stage. Capella and our sun the yellow type. Arcturus, which you can see in the morning sky, is orange, and Betelgeux, in Orion, is red.

There is a dark star which moves near Algol, up in Perseus. Its orbit lies within our line of sight, and every other day we see it pass between Algol and the earth, and in so doing obscure two-thirds of Algol's light.

Once every year or less some "new star" blazes out where there was none before. This blazing marks the instant when the dark star hit the swarm, the flash of fire which accompanied the disruption. Last summer there was such a burst in Cygnus, not far from Deneb. Where the next will shine no one knows, except that it will be somewhere near the Milky Way, where the swarms of suns are thickest.



THE CYCLE OF EVOLUTION
BY S. H. MAXWELL

QUITE SO

By Guy F. Lee.

While millions may want this for that, still other millions rave;
We cannot prosper with a single dish;
This life's a contradiction: it's impossible to have Conditions just exactly as we wish.
It takes all kinds of people for to make a world, you know;
The cosmos is variety complete.
I can't explain the reason: I can only say it's so:
We've got to take the bitter with the sweet.

Though I am fond of olives, I've a friend who thinks they're junk;
I rail at spats, but many find them swell;
A certain girl says Theda is immense—I call her punk;
And look at all the vodveel seats they sell!
My judgment's better, there's no doubt; but yet, how far, I pray,
Would I get if I started to compete
With all the stubborn multitudes who feel the other way?—
We've got to take the bitter with the sweet.

Few items in the paper hold an interest for me;
Perhaps a half a dozen tell the tale:
The Gumps, McCutch, P. Hammond, King, Briggs, Orr, and B. L. T.,
And them (ahem!) another, who's a whale.
The politics and scandals that I classify as dry stuff
To legions of my neighbors are a treat;
And so we must print other than the geniuses' and my stuff—
We've got to take the bitter with the sweet!

"M. & P. Heater for Ford Car"

This heater is very attractive in appearance and very efficient in its heating capacity, having a radiating surface of ninety square inches. It occupies no room in the car, as it is a floor board itself.

It is easily installed, and need not be removed in the summer, as by manipulating the valve any proportion of the exhaust from the engine up to the capacity of the heater may be deflected through the heater, or it may be shut off entirely. The emanation of gas fumes in the car from the heater is absolutely impossible. Full instructions for installation accompanying each heater.

ART

Familiarity with Institute Exhibit Enhances Charm

By Eleanor Jewett.

Green shadows where the iris grow,
When Love comes tripping in the spring
And from the hedgerows meadow larks
Rise to the sun on eager wing.

Blue shadows where the lilies blow,
When Love is flaming at the noon—
And passion burns to passion's end
Within the scented dark of June.

White shadows where the roses grow,
When Love goes sobbing in the night,
His tears, pale dreams of yesterday,
Forgotten in tomorrow's flight.

THERE is, in the exhibition of American oil paintings and sculpture at the Art institute, only one picture to which these verses might apply, and certainly only one which gives a spot of sufficient beauty and mystery for such a particular young gentleman as Dan Cupid to play his elfish game in, from end to end, and then start fresh on the morrow.

One could imagine countless tales of romance unfolding behind the delicate curtain of lacy boughs in the wonderwood of "Mists of the Morning." Sometimes tragedy, sometimes comedy, would attend their unfolding, but the cycle of development would in each case simulate that of the next. The keenest point, of course, the point at which the artist, Cornelius Botke, has caught the mood of the forest, is the moment when dawn breaks and Love springs awake, rubbing his eyes in the red flush of the new day.

Aside from the romance of the painting, which may not be evident to a dispassionate eye, the beauty of it lies deep. It is one of the most decorative of the larger canvases and one of the most sincere in presentation.

Also, a thing which cannot be said of several of the other paintings, it follows normally the path of Mr. Botke's genius with which his earlier work has made us acquainted.

There is another subject besides forests that always sets me thinking, more or less coherently, in terms of poetry rather than prose. I found it in this exhibition, though not as delicately perfect as I have found it dealt with before.

I refer to "The Nymphæa Lily Pond" by Alfred Juergens, and, of course, the poesy of the painting lies in the lilies. But, for lilies, I have been spoiled. The lily ponds painted by Claude Monet would ruin anyone's taste for less delicate scenes. The shadows, green and pale blue on the lily water where the huge flat pads anchor the rosy blossoms, are in themselves a threnody.

Repeat this motif in the whispering green rushes and low arching trees, combine the whole with Monet's irresistible penchant for snatching fantasy from the prosaic, and color the canvas with the richest of pastel shades—the total sums up to the perfection that makes the lily pond pictures by Monet two of the choicest treasures belonging to the Art institute.

It seems to me that the charm of the present exhibit at the institute grows with familiarity with the pictures. I went through them again last week, and noted for my own pleasure the ones that stood this test the best. Again for my own pleasure, and a bit I hope for yours, I think I will repeat here the names of the pictures, of some of the pictures, which make the most urgent appeal.

"The White Mantle" by Hobart Nichols is a beautiful snow scene.

"Canton Façades" by Frederic Clay Bartlett is full of Chinese blues and intoxicating oriental color livened by the warmth of the golden sun. It is reminiscent of the recent trip to China taken by the artist.

"Golden Afternoon, Isles of Shoals," by Olaf Brauner, shows tongues of the sea running between two stretches of rocky land.

Another water picture is "The Distant Fleet" by Alexander Bower.

"Spring," by E. W. Redfield, gives us a beautiful countryside in early April, when a tender green garbs the earth, and white blossoms perfume the light, vaporous air.

For the next two weeks the great interest in this exhibition will be the choosing of the picture, by popular vote, to which will be given the Edward B. Butler prize of $100. This prize is awarded every year to the painting that is considered by the visitors to be the best.

"Reflections," by Edith C. Phelps, a Juliet of today in old world dress, in the exhibition of American oil paintings and sculpture at the Art institute.

In the gallery of the club there is now an exhibit of prints by B. F. Langland and J. G. Sarvent. Mr. Langland's work leaves something to be desired. The "A Country Road" is nice, but for the rest, to put it mildly, I have seen better by members of the club itself.

Of the group of photographs by Mr. Sarvent, I prefer "Margaret," "Reflections," "Peaceful Valley," "Waiting"—this one is particularly good—"Street Pavers," and "Homeward."

The Camera club is planning a studio in the dune country, where the members will be better able to get good results with their efforts to capture the beauty of those sand hills than if they had to work, as formerly, from a more distant base.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Fullerton hall of the Art institute Dr. Edward C. Streeter will lecture on "Historical relations between art and anatomy in northern Italy in the fifteenth century." Dec. 3, Lorado Taft will lecture on English sculpture. Bolton Brown will speak upon "Demonstration of lithographic drawing and printing for artists," Dec. 7.

The Art institute is becoming more and more an advocate of publicity. Its latest move is to go into the movies. Pictures of the students drawing, modeling, and painting will be flashed upon you at any time now in almost any movie house—so go prepared to applaud and approve. The idea is taken up partly in conjunction with the work of the extension bureau of the institute and also to inform those who may not know, what the art school is really doing.

Another scheme, which would have the merit of advancing the institute in the eyes of artists and of many members of the buying public, that has been born in upon me as being a good one, is to establish one gallery of the institute as a room devoted to the work of Chicago artists, temporarily not famous, where the pictures may be changed each month but should never exceed $100 in price.

Many of them could be less. A smaller price does not detract from the value of a painting, and it does often afford a swift path to recognition.

The pictures should, of course, be passed upon by a jury before being hung, and nothing of little merit should be permitted entrance. Chicago needs some place like this where our artists can be given a start—it may save for us a great many of the men and women who now seek New York, saying there is no opportunity for the young painter in Chicago.

AVIATION

Pulitzer Trophy Air Race Won by 178 M. P. H. Ship

Verville-Packard Breaks All American Records

BY MORROW KRUM.

AT last the pride of the army air service, the Verville-Packard chasse biplane, has established its worth by romping ahead of thirty-four starters in the first Pulitzer trophy aeronautical race, held Thanksgiving day at Mitchel field, Mineola, L. I., N. Y.

This sturdy little battle plane, which went to France with Maj. Rudolph Schroeder to represent America in the Bennett cup race, traveled over the Long Island course at an average speed of 178 miles an hour—virtually three miles a minute.

The ship was flown by Lieut. C. C. Mosley, and never in the history of official flying in America has a man traveled with such great velocity. In fact, only one man in the world has sat aboard a faster ship. That man is Sadi Lecointe, the Frenchman who, according to reports from overseas, in a special contest flew his tiny Nieuport biplane 187 miles an hour. Lecointe, in the Bennett race, made an average of slightly over 169 miles an hour. The 187 mile an hour record was not generally known until after the Pulitzer race.

Capt. H. E. Hartney, flying an American army Thomas-Morse scout, came in second in the Thanksgiving day race, covering the course in 47 minutes and 3-100 seconds. Albert Acosta, who introduced the all metal monoplane to Chicago last summer, won third place with an Italian Ansalo S. V. A. His time over the 132 miles was 51 minutes and 62-100 seconds. Acosta was the only civilian to get in the money.

Seven ships met with accident in the race, which promises to be the aerial classic of the United States each year.

The race, with its large field of entrants, the speed made by the winner, and the different makes of ships entered does much to show the interest taken in flying in America, according to aviation experts in Chicago.

"A wonderful showing," said Charles Dickson, president of the Aero Club of Illinois. "Why think of what it represented. Thirty-four American owned ships racing in one contest. Why, I tell you that before the middle of next summer our skies will be filled with planes. Aerial commerce is going to boom this year more than ever before.

"We'll have passenger and express lines stretching out from Chicago like the spokes of a giant wheel. Everybody will be flying."

Similar views were expressed by Alfred W. Lawson, president of the Lawson airline.

"Think of that speed—think of it," he said.

The Verville-Packard ship was designed and constructed at the army air service experimental station, McCook field, Dayton, O. It was the first attempt of the army to build a battle plane that could be used for other purposes than pursuit flying. This little ship is strong and practical. The motor is a specially designed twelve cylinder Packard.

Radiator trouble forced Maj. Schroeder to land after he had gone over the starting line in the Bennett race. Flames were shooting so far out of the exhaust pipes that he feared the ship would catch on fire. This trouble has been corrected in the V.-P.

Above is pictured the newest Spad. The tiny control surfaces indicate the great speed of the French ship, which is a descendant of the famous 220 h. p. Spad so popular with the aces of the war. This latest plane has a 300 h. p. Hispano-Suiza motor, sweep-back, a laminated wood fuselage, and the single strut construction.

New Ship.

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 27.—A new monoplane, rated as a marvel, has been invented in this city.

Four brothers, members of the Jacuzzi family of airplane builders, have constructed a new passenger carrying machine which promises to break all existing aviation records.

Saturday the machine, carrying the four inventors and a mechanician, piloted by George V. Grey, Alameda aviator, flew from Redwood City to Oakland, via San José, in twenty-five minutes. A speed of 120 miles per hour was attained in the flight.

Lost in Hawaii.

No trace has yet been found of Lieut. Rober R. Fox and Corp. Herman J. Cornet, who disappeared while flying over the island of Molokai on Saturday, Aug. 28. At noon on that date these two aviators, wearing nonsinkable suits and provided with two pigeons, left Honolulu in a De Haviland plane fully equipped for a cruise. They were last seen in the afternoon of the same day, driving through a cloud over the island of Molokai.

Council Asked to License Aviators; Prohibit Jazzing

LAST Monday Ald. George M. Maypole appeared before the city council and asked that the committee on aviation ordinances meet and commence the framing of flying laws for Chicago.

Mr. Maypole had attended the Northwestern-Notre Dame football game in Evanston the Saturday previous, and had become incensed at the "fence hopping" and jazzing of an aviator. After watching the young man dive at the crowded stands and zoom just in time to miss, the alderman was convinced that it is high time for the city legislative body to act.

He proposes that a license system be inaugurated, that pilots flying over Chicago be required to pass an examination, and that the license numbers of the pilots be painted in large figures on the under wings of the ships. He also suggests that aviators be prohibited from flying over the business districts at less than 2,000 feet.

Local flying men who are sincere in their desires to push the flying business quite agree with Ald. Maypole's suggestions. They are all in accord with the belief that stunting hurts, rather than boosts, flying, that every crash sets the game back a month or a year, and that laws should be passed and enforced.

"I hope they do stop the stunt flyers, the wing walkers, and thrillers," said Lee Hammond last week. "We need laws, and we must enforce them after they are passed."

"Keep them up over 2,000 feet when they are flying over the loop and 4,000 when they're stunting," said Ralph Diggins.

When flying fields are located close to the loop other laws will be necessary, but for the present the council should see to it that only capable pilots are permitted over the city, that they do not "jazz" crowds, and that they fly high over the densely populated districts.

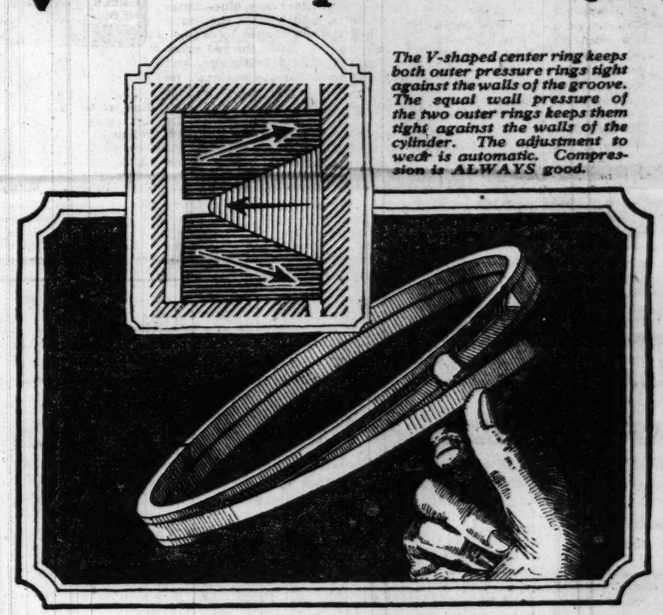
V-Plex Piston Rings



The V-shaped center ring keeps both outer pressure rings tight against the walls of the groove. The equal wall pressure of the two outer rings keeps them tight against the walls of the cylinder. The adjustment to wear is automatic. Compression is ALWAYS good.

V-Plex Dealers Restore Full Motor Power

Automotive transportation depends upon Power derived from the explosive force of gasoline. To control this explosive force proper timing of the electrical spark and the correct operating at specified intervals of the valves is essential.

To realize the most Power at the drive wheels of your car, through your motor, you are solely depending upon Piston Rings.

V-Plex Piston Rings are your final solution. To experience the Power you expect when you "step on it," visit a V-Plex Dealer. Have him install V-Plex Piston Rings for more Power.

Highway Hazards Overcome in Huge Illinois Project

Fifty Concrete Miles Are Laid on Last Link to St. Louis.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

It has required a series of three stories to tell of 1920 progress along the greatest and most vital link in the 850 mile paved highway system of Illinois. If the simple telling demands such treatment, the gigantic task that has been so nearly completed by the state highway department, its contractors, and citizens all along the line is strikingly apparent. The report shows, too, why this St. Louis-Chicago thoroughfare has been practically closed to traffic for two years over a greater part of its length and has been forgotten by Chicago drivers.

Its entire 350 miles of superfine pavement will be thrown into service next summer when the Chicago motorist will be invited to start on Ogden avenue, tour to St. Louis, then east across the state to Marshall, and north through Danville to Chicago without leaving a paved highway. He can then start west on Roosevelt road and tour on concrete to the Mississippi river before he completes the state's federal aid accomplishment in good roads.

ONE hundred and ten miles of highway engineering problems stretch away to the south of Springfield to make the most interesting section of the famous Chicago-St. Louis highway trunk line.

The Mississippi here has massed his supporting forces into a fine network of broiling little streams and turbulent little rivers that skirmish through thousands of acres of corn belt land. Regularly each spring they rush down into the battlefield of Macoupin and Madison counties to batter at bridges, drown leagues of lowland, and chew up miles of roadbed in their stampede to reach the great river. Railroad engineers have donned hip boots and battled them for years at high water time, and, until now, highway users have found them too rough to handle during several months each year. Hills and hollows and picturesque countryside mark the course of the concrete ribbon that is forcing its way steadily from the outskirts of Chicago to the long bridge in East St. Louis, but few areas in the west equal the good roads resistance offered by nature along the right of way south of Carlinsville.

To date more than fifty miles of the southern connection have been paved by state forces and every mile remaining is under contract to be completed as early as the weather and building conditions will permit next spring. A score of new bridges are included in the big job and in places the old roadways have been entirely abandoned and new lines located to guard against the hazards of water, grades, and dangerous railroad crossings.

Twelve miles of broad concrete paving were thrown open to Illinois drivers south of Springfield on Nov. 15. They reach from the capital to Chatham and connect with the more than 100 miles of continuous paving now open between Springfield and Peoria on the north.

South of Chatham lies the longest break in the paving. Two and one-half miles in the eighteen mile gap are under contract for early spring work. They lead to a series of three new bridges, another mile straightaway, and a half mile relocation in the road leading into Auburn. Another five miles is under contract from that point leading to a new bridge and relocation near Thayer. Contractors are ready to work on the one and one-half miles of new road leading from the relocation into Virden and its city street connection with the six and one-half miles of uncompleted contract south through Girard and Greenridge.

South of Greenridge a mile of new paving and a new bridge connects with seven and one-half miles of completed concrete where the road swings west and southwest. Another uncompleted contract and a new bridge create another gap. Then come two miles of old concrete, ten feet wide, enforced by macadam shoulders, running south to Carlinsville. The state is making this stretch over into concrete roadbed sixteen feet wide.

From Carlinsville the road swerves to the east to avoid lowland and expensive construction. Four miles in the eastern stretch and four miles in the link that turns directly south again are uncompleted. Four new bridges mark the two sections. Then four miles of completed paving runs into Gillespie and another four miles of concrete runs south through Benld and Sawyersville, to be broken by three miles of uncompleted road and a mile long relocation into Staunton. South of Staunton three miles were completed this year, but the going is broken by a two mile relocation, another five mile gap, and a new bridge.

Six miles of new concrete takes the road into Edwardsville and another three miles run southwest to another relocation project. One mile has been completed below the relocation to be broken by a new bridge and some two miles of unfinished paving into Mitchell. The road is being relocated for three miles south into Namioka to connect with old brick paving south through Granite City, Madison, and Venice into East St. Louis.

Cleaning Up.

Traffic policemen in Mineapolis, Minn., have started a campaign against dirty motor car license tags. As fast as drivers are picked up, they are escorted to Nicollet park, where the police have washtubs and scrub brushes ready. There the drivers are told to get busy and clean up. No arrests are made if the orders meet with ready compliance.

THE BEST AUTO LOCK—"C'mon" invites this self-sufficient Chinese Chow, "try to steal this car." He's one of the handsomest of the many dog protectors found by Chicago drivers to be excellent anti-theft insurance. He belongs to Walter Berk, 419 Wellington avenue, and is perfectly contented with his watchman's job.

Illinois to Have New Marked Road in U. of I. Trail

AN important addition to the marked highways of Illinois will soon be recorded. The U. of I. Trail association has been organized and officers were elected at a meeting held last week. The southern terminus of the new trail will be at Charleston in Coles county, and it will extend northward through Camargo and Philo to Urbana and thence in a northeasterly direction through Sellers, Flatville, Gifford, and Rankin to Hoopeston in Vermilion county, connecting at the latter point with the Dixie highway for Chicago, a road now practically completed as a hard road for the entire distance between Danville and Chicago.

At Rankin the U. of I. trail connects with the Bloomington highway, which extends east from Peoria to a connection with the gravel roads through Indiana to the east. Later it is proposed to extend the U. of I. trail southwest from Charleston to connect with the Meridian trail, which extends through the center of Illinois from Rockford to Cairo and thence to New Orleans.

Black and White Will Mark Your Motor in 1921

705,000 License Plates for Illinois Cars This Season

WATCH your speedometer in 1921! Black and white license number plates, readible at 200 yards or more by any alert speed cop, are the order of the season for Illinois cars.

The striking, though conventional, color scheme which will certainly dominate the motor world hereabouts is assured through orders for the manufacture of 705,000 automobile license plates issued to date by Louis L. Emmerson, secretary of state, to be distributed among state car owners Jan. 1. They will replace the muddy yellow which has been the "protective coloring" scheme during 1920, and they will be guaranteed to stay bright and highly visible throughout the coming year.

Six hundred thousand plates in the huge consignment will decorate and legalize the use of passenger cars. A total of 85,000 have been ordered for the use of trucks. Eight thousand dealers' plates and 12,000 motorcycle plates complete the largest manufacturing order that officials of the automobile division in Springfield have ever handled. In order to get the numbers out on time and insure their prompt distribution on glad New Year's day, the department was forced to split its order among four factories because of difficulty in finding steel ready to hand. Two Chicago and two St. Louis manufacturers are now working overtime on the most important 1921 accessory in the Illinois market.

"Please tell the world," requested Director Miller of the automobile division, "that Dec. 11 is the absolute deadline for reassignment of old car numbers to owners. License fees received after that date will pay for plates all right, but they will not pay for plates carrying any pet number.

"We have already received and arranged for 10,000 reassignments of number plates. ESvery car owner who has done us the courtesy of making an early fee payment has, in turn, been assigned the particular number dearest to his heart for the coming year. We have also received 5,000 requests for particular numbers not in the reassignment class, and it is interesting that practically all of them call for low or easily memorized series of figures. Numbers running from 1 to 100 are very popular this year and it is certain that there are many unsuperstitious drivers in Illinois because of the number of requests for No. 13 and the 13 series."

Gossip of the Auto Trade

DESPITE the slowing up of passenger car production during the last two months and a general curtailment in both working forces and finished cars that will average 60 per cent nationally, authorities agree that the full 1920 production will reach 1,800,000 cars and 340,000 trucks. The figure exceeds all records. The increased demand for closed cars, favorable political readjustment, manifest interest in the coming New York and Chicago automobile shows, and a sweeping awakening among sales and distribution forces in the industry is already bringing an improvement in the trade. Reports from seventeen manufacturing cities, including Detroit, where more than 80,000 men have been laid off, show that the industry which has increased 350 per cent in five years, has nearly completed its readjustment and is preparing for an average normal spring business.

Among the first, far reaching results of the automotive readjustment period was the announcement that Hare's Motors, Inc., have taken over the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck company and will operate its big Springfield, O., plant. Emlen S. Hare has been named president of the reorganized company which is now under control of the operating organization in command of Locomobile, Mercer, and Simplex production.

C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors company and a leader in the industry, is out with a word of appreciation for the United States banking interest which "put the brakes" on the automobile business in the early fall. He points out that general overproduction and overstocking with a consequent disastrous drop in all values would have completely demoralized things if credits had been allowed to run wild longer. He adds that it is better to weather a temporary slump and stay on top than to run into disaster at high speed.

The Chicago Motor club has issued a vigorous protest against the proposed anti-parking ordinance in the loop, declaring that such a law is "class legislation" with advantages for chauffeur driven cars and would result in a slowing up of traffic because of moving congestion, rather than the desired clearing of streets.

Two "Twin Six" Packards recently purchased by Chief of Police Fitzmorris are the nucleus for Chicago's new "super speed" fleet operating against auto bandits. A three driver shift is worked on the cars daily.

High Costs Make European Tours a Dear Luxury

Motorists Still Find Plenty of Trouble Over There

THERE'S still plenty of trouble "over there" left for distribution among American tourists who are flocking to the battlefields of Europe. Difficulty in getting passage this year is the one barrier that has kept thousands of motor parties at home during the touring season just past. If you are planning to take the car abroad or to buy or rent one for touring purposes after you get there, the following accurate report of touring conditions in Europe, made by E. H. Wakefield, manager of the foreign department, Automobile club of America, should give you pause:

"Great Britain—Motor touring conditions are generally fair. The surface of the main roads has been repaired and is, on the whole, quite good. Gasoline, though expensive, being at present about 75 cents a gallon, is readily obtainable.

"France—At the present time there is an official embargo against the importation of automobiles into France except for temporary touring purposes. Touring conditions vary widely in different parts of the country and are, on the whole, not very favorable. In the vicinity of Paris and northern France the road surface on the principal routes is fair and gasoline is to be obtained in satisfactory quantities, although much more expensive than formerly.

"Italy—Official regulations require that before an automobile can be imported into Italy an import permit must be obtained from the ministry of finance in Rome. The foreign department of the Automobile Club of America is informed that cars are occasionally landed without this permit having been obtained. The roads throughout Italy are generally good, though always apt to be dusty in hot weather, and the grades of some of the mountain roads are extremely steep.

"At the present the use of gasoline is restricted and rationed. A cable recently received from a member, who had shipped an automobile to Naples with the view of driving north through the country, read as follows: 'Found motoring in Italy impossible. Have shipped car on to Marseilles.'

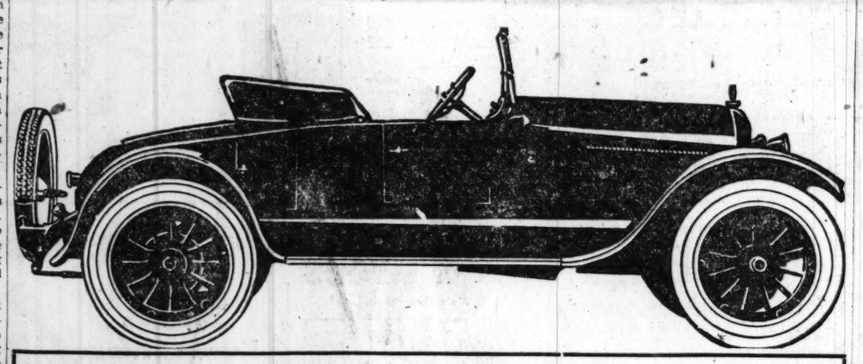
"Switzerland—Reports received state that motoring conditions are practically normal. Road surface throughout the country is generally good, although some of the grades are severe. The supply of gasoline is stated to be quite adequate.

"Holland and Belgium—Conditions are reported to be normal in both countries. Gasoline is plentiful, and, except in that part of Belgium that has suffered from the effects of the war, hotel accommodation is of good quality and fairly ample. With the exception of a few of the main roads, the surface through Belgium is poor, but in Holland the level, brick paved highways offer satisfactory surface.

"Spain—Main roads in Spain are reported to be fairly good. Those in the north, in the neighborhood of San Sebastian and in Asturias, and the main trunk routes leading to Madrid and to Cadiz, provide the best surface conditions. Gasoline is plentiful though expensive.

"Portugal—Information is furnished by the consul general in Portugal that at the present time automobiles are not admitted into the country for touring purposes.

"Scandinavia—All reports from Denmark, Norway, and Sweden agree that motoring conditions in these countries are practically normal, the road surfaces being fair and gasoline plentiful though much more expensive than pre-war days."



Flexibility and Power—with Economy

Beneath the high, sturdy hood of the Stephens Salient Six there is a perfected overhead-valve engine which, although theoretically rated at 25.3 H. P., actually develops 57. Plenty of power and flexibility for ease of handling in city traffic; reserve power to surmount the steepest hills on high gear; stamina to stand up under constant hard driving and extreme speed for the open road. Yet so economical is this motor in operation that the Stephens Salient Six has established actual records exceeding 21.5 miles per gallon of fuel.

Call at our salesrooms and inspect this Salient Motor Car. You are assured the most courteous attention.

The Leland-built Lincoln Coupe

One of the first things that impresses you in the Leland-built Lincoln Coupe is that it affords really comfortable seating accommodations for four persons—quite out of the ordinary in a car of its type.

The rear seat which provides abundant room for two persons, and the two individual forward seats, are in close coupled relation so that all passengers are in a companionable group, but without crowding or cramping.

The front seat on the curb side slides forward to permit easy entrance and egress.

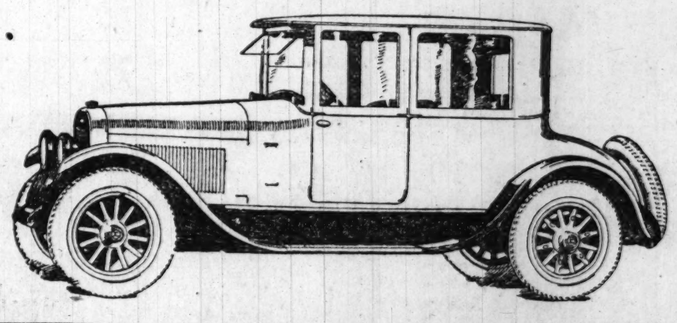
There is a large storage compartment beneath the rear deck, accessible thru an opening in the back of the rear seat, concealed by a movable panel.

The interior is richly trimmed and upholstered, with deep pliant cushions, and with arm rests for the rear seat occupants.

Mounted on the Leland-built Lincoln chassis, there is every quality which makes for consummate ease and comfort.

The entire bearing is one of grace, dignity and individuality.

As an all-season vehicle, for business purposes or for the small family, whether in city traffic or on the open highway, it would be difficult indeed to idealize a car more fitting.



The line of Leland-built Lincoln Motor Cars includes five closed car types

Power Thefts Are Chief Among Many Motor Car Ills

Expert Shows But Eighth of Energy Reaches Rear Wheels

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE average motor car owner will be startled to be informed that out of all the power that is generated by the explosion in the combustion chamber less than one-eighth is delivered in actual driving force at the rear wheels. If, then, seven-eighths of the original power is lost on the way to the driving wheels, how vitally important is it for the car owner to see that no further and unnecessary losses occur during the journey.

Taking the power generated in the combustion chamber as 100 per cent, we find that the first loss amounts to 35 per cent, which is dissipated in the cooling water. Another 35 per cent is lost through direct radiation and in the exhaust gases. The exhaust pipe and muffler accounts for a further 2 per cent and friction in the motor for nearly 9 per cent. Wind resistance uses up 7 per cent of what is left, and there is a loss through the tires of nearly 4 per cent. The transmission accounts for a further subtraction of practically 3 per cent.

As long as these power losses are kept at their normal proportion there is no cause for worry, but let the car owner get careless in maintaining the vehicle and the losses immediately mount upward in geometrical ratio. Fortunately by taking heed it is not hard to keep the power dissipation under control, as we shall show.

The first item on our list, power lost through dissipation in the cooling water, can scarcely be controlled by the ordinary car owner. Within the last year or two engineers have taken up seriously the problem of reducing this item of waste. By means of thermostatic control it is now possible to keep the temperature of the engine at or near its point of maximum efficiency.

Heat is simply a form of power. But unfortunately the nature of the internal combustion engine prevents more than a certain degree of temperature being utilized, because beyond that point the oil film, the protecting lubricant, would be broken down and the engine would be quickly ruined. However, by the use of thermostatic devices, designers have been able to reduce the amount of heat, which means power, wasted in the cooling water.

What he can do, however, is to see that there is no leakage from the engine. This includes gas leakage, ignition leakage, oil leakage. The gasketing of the cylinder head, if there is such, must be good all the time, and there must be no leaks at the plugs or petcocks. In gasketing the head be sure to see that the gasket itself is perfectly clean and is mounted on clean surfaces.

There must be no nicks or dents in metal or gasket. The head must be tightened carefully to avoid springing. It is advisable to give the threads of the spark plugs, valve plugs, and any other threaded device in the engine a thin coating of stove blacking, which prevents or stops leakage, and also makes removal of the parts easy any future time.

It must not be forgotten that the various accessories and devices located on and driven by the engine consume power; in some cases as much as 6 per cent of the total. Add to this the inevitable friction generated by the various moving parts of the engine and we get a tidy total. The car owner cannot cut down the consumption of power here, but he can keep it at its normal point by seeing that all these parts and accessories have a liberal quantity of lubricant of the proper grade and quality. The careful study of and attention to the directions on the lubrication chart are the safeguard here.

Again, carbon deposits in the combustion chamber are excessive wasters of power. A vigilant eye in the direction and removal of such deposits before they have a chance to reach serious proportions is necessary. In some cases owners who have excessive carbon trouble may be well advised to install a water feeding device on their engines after the cylinders have been thoroughly cleaned. Water injected this way in the form of steam tends to prevent the formation of carbon deposits in a clean cylinder.

There is one kind of power waste that is not to be excused, and that is through the use of too rich a mixture. This simply means that more gasoline than is necessary is being burned up and going out of the exhaust, possibly even in the kind of liquid. And what is this but the most direct and criminal sort of waste, which the owner can stop any time he desires.

In the tires the owner can help power losses by keeping them pumped up to pressure recommended by the maker. The wider the tire the more power it takes to carry it over the road, consequently the need for keeping the casings fully inflated. Also this important item of maintenance preserves the tires and cuts down the bills.

COMFORTS OF HOME—A complete house on wheels, even to the phonograph and day couch, is carrying the family of C. A. Hyde, a Hagerstown, Md., farmer, to Florida just now. Here is a glimpse of the interior, which will spell "home" to the family for the next two years. The mobile flat cost $16,000 complete.

Constabulary Out to Make Streets Safer for Kids

DECLARING that he favored vigilante committees in all automobile clubs, Walter P. Stuart, superintendent of the department of the constabulary, an organization operating under the old vigilante law, yesterday advised that such committees take steps to protect both the rights of autoists and the life and limb of children.

"'I have heard rumors,' Mr. Stuart said, 'that the department of constabulary is opposed to the formation of other vigilance organizations. That is not the fact, we favor them. The theory that many such organizations would result in a 'you arrest me and I'll arrest you' condition is unfounded. On the contrary, with a large majority of autoists members of organizations for the upholding of the law, violations would become neglible. No man charged with law enforcement—or pledged to promote it—is likely to violate the law knowingly.

"One work I especially commend to such organizations is that of reducing the chances of injury to children by reporting the location of thoroughfares where children use the streets as a playground. I would suggest that such reports be made directly to the department of constabulary, as the police already have enough to do without chaperoning the children. The department, which still maintains its department for prevention of cruelty and promotion of child welfare, will undertake to educate parents in such communities so that children will be kept out of the streets."

Grade Crossing Fatalities Are Public Problem

Motorists Make Up 70 Per Cent of Huge Death List

SEVENTY per cent of those killed or injured at grade crossings in a three year period were motorists, according to figures compiled by the interstate commerce commission just given publicity by the American Automobile association, which through its touring, good roads, and legislative boards is preparing a nation-wide agitation on this vital phase of highways travel and transportation.

"Three times as many American citizens were killed or injured at grade crossings in 1917, 1918, and 1919 as were killed and injured during the revolutionary war," states M. O. Eldridge, the A. A. A. director of roads, who gives the American casualties in the principal battles as 6,600 and places the grade crossing killed or injured for the three year period as 19,668 men, women, and childen, of which 5,605 died of their injuries within twenty-four hours of the accident.

In spite of the combined efforts of railroad and highway officials and automobile clubs the total number of accidents continues annually at about the same rate.

Nearly 70 per cent of those injured and killed during the three year period were motorists, and such deaths and accidents are steadily increasing from year to year. In fact there were nearly 14 per cent more motorists killed in 1919 at grade crossings than in 1917. During the half year ending June 30, 1920, there were 1,302 motorists killed at grade crossings in the United States.

That preventive measures are becoming more effective in some states than in others because of grade crossing eliminations, more cautious driving, and the protection of crossings by gates, bells, etc., is indicated by the fact that the deaths occuring are not always in direct proportion to the number of machines registered in those states. For instance, while New York gained first place in registration more motorists were killed in Ohio. Likewise, Pennsylvania, running third in 1919 registrations, has fifth place on the death list. Massachusetts was tenth in registrations, but twenty-four in fatality matters. Connecticut was twenty-third in registrations, but thirty-fourth in grade crossing tabulation. More people were killed in Delaware in proportion to the number of machines registered than in any other state. Florida occupies second place and Illinois seventeenth on the list.

The World's Worst Road

You've been over it. Unburden yourself by addressing "World's Worst Road," The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Give the exact location of the stretch you struck. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

He's Convinced.

EUREKA! The roughest and toughest is located in the vicinity of our own Chicago. It extends from the small town of Frankfort for four miles to the west. Lincoln highway markers are seen in this lost stretch, which doesn't boost our national highway any. I followed the route against the advice of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE auto department, which called it "the rock road to Dublin." And I'll say, TRIBUNE, you're right.
W. L.

The Lid's Off.

I think the worst road in this planitary system, not to speak of the world, is south of Sullivan in Moultrie county. When a road leading to a bridge is so narrow that a Ford slips over the embankment, it must be pretty bad. And when, besides the narrowness, there is mud on one side of the bridge and sand and mud on the other, it is the superlative of something. G. G. W.

Walking a Pleasure.

The stretch of road that takes joy out of life and motoring is One Hundred and Eleventh street, from Pullman to Morgan Park. This is a central thoroughfare with hundreds of cars passing over it daily. The worst portion is through Roseland, and from Michigan avenue to Pullman the road makes walking a pleasure.
MRS. S. M. C.

Honeymoon Road.

There's only one "worst." It lies between Poteau and Stillwell, Okla., lurking there to do murder. On the south side of the Ozarks it stands a fifty mile stretch of Ozark trail. We were on our honeymoon, and were directed—or misdirected—to follow it, heading from Fort Smith to Chicago. The car carried license 39581 Ark., and since arriving here has been appropriately dubbed "The Ark." I can hardly believe that stretch has been traveled either before or after we took it, unless perhaps by Noah! P. J. S.

ALUMINUM WARE SALESMEN FOR 1921—
The American Aluminum Company of St. Louis and New York is now completing its selling organization for next year.
A few good territories are still open and to fill these applications are invited from high grade salesmen who are accustomed to earning large compensation. We shall be especially glad to receive letters from salesmen with actual aluminum trade experience, as such men, if capable and with a good record, we can offer an unusually good proposition with the privilege of establishing field managers' or district managers' positions.
Our company is one of the largest operators in the aluminum ware field, with a wide and varied line of almost 800 different items. We have many exclusive special merchandising plans and selling features which are a great aid to any representatives in making large sales. Compensation is on a commission basis, with liberal drawing account to producers.
Apply by letter, giving all particulars, which will be held in strictest confidence, to MR. CHAS. E. LUTH, GENERAL SALES MANAGER, AMERICAN ALUMINUM CO., CLARK-AV. AND 7TH-ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.
A personal interview will be granted any Chicago this month to those applicants whose letters impress us favorably.

RESTGOOD BEDDING UPHOLSTERY SHOP MAINTAINS OPEN DOOR.

There are no "No Admittance" or "Employees Only" signs over our workroom doors.

We have the right to KNOW what we have the bedding and upholstery we live with, and in purchasing bedding and mattresses and upholstery you have the opportunity to know.

We use nothing but the best and material in our production.

We employ only the most skillful workmen and we welcome the closest scrutiny.

You can come to this factory, select the materials for a mattress or a chair, or an upholstered chair, have the piece made to your order at the factory prices. If you wish, you can take a seat or stand by and watch every step of manufacture, thus insuring strictly what you pay for.

Buying direct from this factory you get superior materials put together by the workmen in the trade and save at least one-third to one-half on what similar quality will sell at retail.

We carry a full line of brass and iron beds, springs, pillows, comforters, etc.

A RECONSTRUCTED
HUDSON OR ESSEX
WILL GIVE WONDERFUL SERVICE.

Nine out of every ten buyers of reconstructed Hudson and Essex cars are so well pleased with the service given by these cars that they become permanent Hudson and Essex owners.

THE REASON:
We have equipped a mechanical dept. where all work is done under our own supervision. We also do our own painting and trim work, which eliminates a middleman's profit. In this manner we save you at least fifteen per cent.

In addition to a complete line of our own make cars, we have a very nice selection of outside makes, some of which are listed below.

EXPLAINS Its Low Prices on New, High Grade FUR COATS

Most visitors to our store ask "How can you do it?" when they compare our prices with those in the big "loop" stores and in other out-of-the-loop stores. To save our time we will tell you the story here.

We first planned to carry only a small line of fur coats. This fall we stocked up very lightly. Wholesale prices were high and we thought best to wait. The other Chicago stores didn't wait. They put in complete lines, many overstocked themselves. Recently a big slump came in the New York wholesale market. Our retail stock was then well sold out. We jumped down to New York and bought a special lot of fur coats at prices much less than what the other Chicago stores paid. We advertised these coats in a Sunday Tribune classified ad and on that same Sunday did the biggest business in our history. The clerks were so swamped that they sent a distress call to the proprietor, and he and his wife had to help at selling goods all day long. That's what we did last week and we are going to do better this week because we have a larger stock and more clerks.

But you may say, "Can't the other stores buy goods in New York just as cheaply as the Resale Shop and sell them as cheaply?" Perhaps they can, but they WON'T. They are already overstocked with coats bought at topnotch wholesale prices. They are still managing to sell several fur coats daily at high prices to Chicago people who don't care how much money they spend on a fur coat. In a big city like Chicago there are always thousands of people who spend money carelessly, and it is these thousands of careless spenders who provide the profits for the high rent Loop store with its fancy fixtures, high "overhead" cost, and big credit losses.

We don't cater to the careless spenders of Chicago! Let them buy goods wherever they wish!

We do cater to the thrifty, progressive, sensible people who want their money to go farthest. These are not the poorer people either. You would be surprised to know how many of the best families of Chicago are among our regular customers. We cater to the sensible people; they are the people we prefer to have as boosters for our store.

YOU ARE ONE OF THE PEOPLE WE WANT TO DO BUSINESS WITH.

The fact that you are reading Tribune Want Ads proves that you are intelligent, thrifty, and willing to spend a few minutes of time and a few ounces of energy if you can save money thereby. That's why we use Tribune want ads. The Tribune to reach the maximum of intelligent readers and want ads to reach the thriftiest among these intelligent readers.

Getting down to brass tacks, this ad is trying to sell you merely on the idea of coming down here and looking us over. You will find a clean, well kept store and you will receive courteous treatment. But you won't find high salaried floor walkers and all the other expensive trappings of fancy "Loop" salesmanship. They are not here because they are not needed here, and the price you pay for our fur coats does not include the cost of such trappings. We are selling fur coats, you are buying fur coats, and by cutting out a lot of these fancy loop expenses and selling for cash only we can offer you the best bargains in fur coats in Chicago.

LOOK AT OUR PRICES QUOTED IN A NEARBY COLUMN AND THEN GET HERE AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE.

CELEBRATES FUR COAT WEEK Nov. 28—Dec. 5

At 10 a. m. Sunday, Nov. 28, will begin the biggest bargain sale on new, high grade fur coats ever held in Chicago. Our total sales for the preceding two weeks smashed all records. Now we have a bigger stock and a larger sales force. We are ready to make even the last two weeks' records look sick. We will be open on Sunday from 10 to 4 and on week days from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. to take care of our customers.

Come Down Today

Look over the prices listed below and then take the quickest possible means of getting here. Savings on each coat run from $20 up, depending largely on the value of the coat. There are several coats which have been used as salesmen's samples, and these samples will be cleaned out early, as we have only a limited number of them and the prices on them are ridiculously low.

BREAKS ALL RECORDS IN SELLING New, High Grade FUR COATS FOR MEN AND WOMEN

During the two weeks from Nov. 14 to Nov. 27, the Resale Shop did a larger volume of business in new, latest model fur coats than any other store of its size in Chicago.

THERE IS JUST ONE REASON WHY CHICAGO PEOPLE ARE COMING DOWN HERE BY THE HUNDREDS TO BUY FUR COATS. THAT ONE REASON IS THIS, THAT WE ARE GIVING, EVERY DAY OF THE WEEK

ABSOLUTELY The Greatest FUR COAT BARGAINS IN CHICAGO

That's a big, sweeping statement for an out-of-the-loop store to make. But we back the statement up with the values we offer. We openly challenge any store in Chicago to equal our prices. When you come down here you will be ASKED to find equal values anywhere else in the city. If you don't see that you save from $20.00 up on any purchase made here we really DON'T WANT you to buy a coat. We've got a big reputation to live up to, a reputation for underselling all other Chicago stores. We have always made it a point to have every one who buys here go away preaching "Resale Shop Bargains" to their friends. That's one big reason why we are doing such a tremendous volume of business. We make one sale and immediately several friends of the purchaser come in after the same kind of bargains.

Look at our schedule of prices in another column. Note that we offer Men's fur lined overcoats for as low as $35.00 each. Note that we offer Ladies' Kit Coney Coats for $45.00. Observe the genuine American mink coat at $400. No matter how little or how much you want to spend you can save real money and big money by purchasing here.

THERE ARE NO PARKING RESTRICTIONS IN OUR NEIGHBORHOOD. IF YOU USE AN AUTOMOBILE JUST LEAVE IT AT THE CURB AND SHOP HERE AT YOUR LEISURE.

Invites You to Wear a FUR COAT

There is not an article of dress which adds to one's personal appearance so much as a fur coat. And there never was a time when one's personal appearance counted for more in social and business life than today.

THE MORAL OF THIS IS, THAT YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO WEAR A FUR COAT IF POSSIBLE.

Some of you are going to say "It's impossible, I can't afford one."

YOU ARE ALL WRONG. IF YOU CAN AFFORD A COAT AT ALL (AND YOU HAVE TO WEAR SOME KIND OF COAT) YOU CAN AFFORD A FUR COAT.

We are offering absolutely new fur coats for men and women at prices less than you have to pay downtown for ordinary woolen garments. Sounds ridiculous, doesn't it? But it's true! You don't have to take our word for it. We want you to come down here and look over our goods and prices. We will prove to you what we have printed here.

WOULDN'T YOU PREFER TO BE REALLY WELL DRESSED WHEN YOU CAN DO SO WITH NO ADDITIONAL EXPENSE?

Come down today. Don't put this chance off any longer. We are open Sundays from 10 to 4, and on week days from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. You won't have to jam your shopping into your lunch period.

LOOK AT OUR PRICES IN ANOTHER COLUMN. THEN COME DOWN HERE AS SOON AS YOU CAN GET HERE.
